OFFICIAL GERMAN ATTITUDE TOWARD PEACE; READY TO NEGOTIATE NOW OR HEREAFTER; EXISTING MILITARY SITUATION THE BASIS

DELAY MEANS HIGHER TERMS

Discussion of Germany's Own Private Affairs Is Barred.

WON'T TALK OF WAR'S CAUSE

And Will Accept Only a Strictly Nonpartisan Person as a Mediator.

FOR PEACE, BUT IN NO HURRY

Has Attained Chief War Aim, It Is Held, and Is Now Willing to Hear Proposals.

From a Staff Correspondent.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, May 25, (via The Hague, May 26.)—In connection with Germany's readiness for peace THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent is in a position to indicate certain views which are held in the highest official quarters.

Germany is ready to make peace now or at any future time.

The German Government is willing to talk peace, not only because the bulk of the German people naturally want peace and because in view of the increasing strength of Germany's position this expressed desire for peace cannot possibly be interpreted as a sign of weakness by her enemies, thus tending to prolong the war, but also because according to the present military situation Germany has more than accomplished her aim in war, namely, to secure her boundaries against the future possibility of invasion, and today holds more than enough enemy territory as pawns to warrant participation in a peace conference.

Germany has no fixed program as to peace terms. Rather are her peace conditions a variable quantity, dependent on the further duration of the war and future changes in the military situation.

In other words, there is more than a strong hint here that a bargain peace is to be had for quick takers now, but that the price of peace will be advanced in the near future and will continue to go up the longer Germany's enemies hold off.

The price of peace, it is suggested, will also tend to increase with any further gains of ground in the east or the west. Another factor affecting the price will be the sacrifices that may be necessary to hold what has already been gained.

While ready to discuss peace now, Germany is in no hurry to make peace, and whether peace negotiations begin soon or later the German Government is determined to do business solely on the basis of the military situation prevailing at the time. Negotiations on any other basis have not the slightest prospect of success so far as Germany is concerned.

The German Government will absolutely decline to have what it regards as the nation's purely private affairs dragged into the peace conference. Germany will not only not permit any foreign influence to be exerted on her internal affairs through the medium of a peace conference, but also will most positively decline to have such questions brought up for discussion there.

Lastly, no offers of mediation or attempts to pave the way to peace negotiations can be entertained for a moment by Germany which seek to take into account who is to blame for the outbreak of the war.

Only a strictly nonpartisan mediator will be persona grata to the German Government.

BERLIN, May 26.—Speaking in the Reichstag yesterday, Dr. Oertel, editor of the Deutsche Tageszeitung, indicated in the discussion of the censorship that some interesting undercurrents were at work.

Pleading for freedom of speech in political matters, and particularly in regard to the aims of the peace terms, he said: "Give the German press and German people somewhat more freedom of speech. No good is done the nation by continuing to withhold from the people the opportunity for expression of opinions. What good has this enforced silence done? Has it made our

President Will Make "a Preliminary Overture" As to Peace in Washington Address Tonight

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—A pointed intimation came from one of the best informed sources of information today that in his address tomorrow night at the banquet of the League to Enforce Peace, which is holding a two days' session here, President Wilson will make what was described as something in the nature of "a preliminary overture" in the direction of bringing peace in Europe. The intimation is coupled with the statement that the President is preparing to do everything possible in an informal way to induce the warring powers to enter upon a discussion of peace.

In his speech last week at Charlotte, N. C., President Wilson made a reference to the war in Europe which was construed by those having some knowledge of what was in his mind as indicating that he regarded the struggle in Europe as having reached a deadlock, and that this being the case it was well for them to take counsel. Since then there have been reports that the President was contemplating some move that would help along the peace movement.

The understanding prevails among high officials here, however, that the President realizes that it would be useless for him to make any direct overtures toward peace to the belligerent nations while the Entente Allies hold to their intention to continue hostilities until the menace of German militarism has been removed. But it is gathered from what was said today that the President believes that if the suggestion of peace is kept constantly before the world and both belligerent and neutral countries discuss it the basis may be reached the sooner for an understanding among the warring powers that will lead to peace overtures.

There seems to be no intention on the part of President Wilson to make any direct offer to the belligerents at this time. It was said today that he was keeping an open mind as to what his course would be in this connection—that is, he was waiting for developments to determine when the time was ripe to renew the tender of friendly offices made by him early in the war. That tender was not accepted, but the President made known that it was a standing offer of which any of the parties engaged in the European strife might take advantage whenever it suited them to do so, and he would be responsive.

Since then Germany is the only power engaged in war that has indicated a desire that peace should come. The answers of the Entente Allies to this hint for a cessation of hostilities have shown that they do not intend to give up the struggle while German military prestige continues and much enemy territory remains in the possession of the Teutonic armies.

One of the suggestions made today indicated that President Wilson rather expected that some of the European rulers, closely related by blood, would find a means of paving the way for peace conversations. It was stated that this outcome would cause no surprise in official circles.

But in the same connection it was pointed out that neutral nations felt that they were entitled to have a part in the adjustment of the differences growing out of the war, and the inference was plain from what was said that the United States wished it to be understood that it expected to be taken into the peace counsels of the belligerent powers, mainly to give it the opportunity of providing for the protection of its own economic interests in the rearrangement that would follow the restoration of peace. The United States, it has already been indicated by President Wilson, is actuated by the desire to bring about a peace that will be fair and just, and will not subject any of the warring powers to humiliation. He is represented as agreeing with the view that if peace was made as the outcome of a decisive defeat of one group of belligerent by the other lasting hatred that probably would lead to a renewal of the present struggle would result.

EXPECT COL. HOUSE ON PEACE ERRAND

Germans Hear He Is to Visit Europe Again and Hope He May Bring Some Suggestion.

READY TO DISCUSS TERMS

But No Proposals, It Is Stated, Could Possibly Include the Ceding of Alsace to France.

BERLIN, Tuesday, May 23, (via London, May 26.)—Another visit by Colonel E. M. House to Europe would come as no surprise to initiated quarters here. The American rumors to this effect are regarded as having a certain basis in fact, although the opinion prevails that the trip would naturally be postponed until after the national conventions.

It is hoped here that should Colonel House pay such a visit he will come this time as a harbinger of peace, or at any rate to prepare, if possible, the foundations for a peace proposal, difficult as this task is recognized to be.

During his last previous visit to Europe Colonel House made no effort and conducted no investigations in the direction of peace, (in Berlin at any event,) having, perhaps, found absolutely adverse conditions in the capitals of nations hostile to Germany. Presumably, also, he had previous information that American mediation was under no circumstances desired and would not be accepted as long as the United States continued to supply Germany's foes with cannon, shot, shell, cartridges, powder, and a thousand and one other requisities for waging war against the Central Powers while no intimation had been given at the time of this visit that irascibility in high quarters here on the munitions question was in any way abated.

The situation, it may be said, has now changed. Apparently there is no harm, from either a political or a strategical standpoint, in saying that Germany would welcome peace.

As Arthur von Gwinner, Managing Director of the Deutsche Bank in Berlin, stated to The Associated Press correspondent recently, Germany is in the position of a poker player, who has gathered in all the money on the table and naturally is willing to break off an all-night session and retire with his winnings, while the others persist in continuing in the hope of recouping some of their losses. The cards, however, to continue the simile, are running strongly in the Germans' favor, it is pointed out, as shown in the renewed postponentment of the long-heralded Anglo-French offensive in the West, the steady though slow progress of the Crown Prince at Verdun, the victories of the Turks, and finally the crushing results of the Austrian offensive in the Trentino.

Doubt If Allies Will Give In.

VIENNA STUDIES WILSON'S VIEWS

Impressed by North Carolina Utterance, but Sees No Signs of Allies Moving for Peace.

YET HOPES FOR RESULTS

One Newspaper Thinks the Entente May Be Made to See That Its Struggle Is Vain.

VIENNA, May 25, (via Berlin, May 26.)—The newspapers here devote columns to the speech of President Wilson, delivered at Charlotte, N. C.

Die Zeit begins its comment by saying that "statesmen once again are speaking about peace, but unfortunately only those in America." It carries this idea throughout its editorial.

President Wilson's speech, this paper asserts, was solely for American and especially North Carolinian consumption. It points out that the President on Nov. 14 said America would intervene only when one or more of the belligerents requested intervention. The Entente Allies have not made such a request, the paper continues, and Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, the German Imperial Chancellor, has said specifically that he would consider offers from the enemy, but has not said that he desires the intervention of neutral nations.

"A peace initiator is ready," the paper concludes, "but none of the warring powers has knocked at his door."

The Neue Freie Presse points out that under international law a great difference exists between mediation and an offer of good services, the latter of which, this newspaper says, President Wilson appears to desire to do.

"President Wilson does not need an agreement between the belligerents to take the step he plans," continues the Neue Freie Presse. "He is simply a peace initiator, seeking to make easier for a vanquished enemy the sacrifices he will have to make and trying to remove the hindrances in the way of peace."

The Neue Freie Presse, however, warns the President that he will have to make the Entente Allies realize their "useless struggle against the inevitable," for in the words of Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg "Europe's earlier condition is lost forever; what the Central Empires wanted in peace their armies have achieved; what the Entente Allies would like to achieve they have not got."

The Neue Freie Press comments: "President Wilson must arouse a recognition that such mighty differences cannot exist without noticeable effects when peace comes."

The paper adds:

"He would hardly offer his good services if this task were hopeless. The United States is beginning to speak. It is as if a metal tongue had struck a great bell, filling the air with sound. A great people leaves its retirement and becomes a disseminator of peace ideas. That again is a step forward."

Food Dictator Meets Strong Opposition; Southern States Unwilling to Feed Prussia

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, May 27.—Referring to Food Dictator von Batocki's statement in the Reichstag, as reported by Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent that "great difficulties are arising out of the relations of the Federal States," and that "from Württemberg menacing letters reached me protesting against the sucking dry of Württemberg by Prussia," The Chronicle says:

'This plaint from Württemberg only expressed in drastic fashion what all other German States feel with regard to Prussia. In the Bavarian Diet the other day the members complained of 'Prussian food egotism' and of the attempts which the Berlin Government is making to induce the Bavarian food powers to send their stuff to Berlin.

"In Saxony the same feeling prevails, and it is clear that von Batocki's main difficulty will be to persuade the Bavarian, the Hessian, the Badenser, and others that their main duty now is to feed Prussia. In Eisenach the Town Council issued an order forbidding the exportation from the district of all kinds of meat, sausage, poultry, fish, fats and oils, groceries, soap and soap powder, cheese, eggs, baked wares, tarts, fruit cakes and vegetables.

"The Berlin Tageblatt, with some pertinence, comments on this as follows: 'The people speak of England's starvation war against us, but this German starvation war against large towns is at least as worthy of condemnation.'"

Army to be Fed First.

LONDON, May 26.—Herr von Batocki, the head of the new German Department of Food Supply, has addressed a Reichstag committee on some of the phases of the problems before him, according to Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent. He said the task of provisioning would be more or less difficult, depending upon the outcome of the harvest. The army must first be provided for, he said, and only then could the civil population be considered. It should not be forgotten, he added, that the bad harvest of 1914 and the still worse one of 1915 were the causes of the present situation.

The Lokalanzeiger is quoted as saying that there has been a shortage of eggs in Berlin and its suburbs during recent days.

An official communication to the German press, the dispatch adds, says that the consumption of meat must be restricted in order to guarantee sufficient cattle for slaughter and milking in the Spring and Winter.

Defense Takes Prosecution's Usual Role in Effort to Further Blacken Peck Murderer.

SEEK NEW SINS TO CONFESS

Defendant Admits He Thought of Killing Wife, but Reached No Decision—Planned to Wed a Beauty

Dr. Arthur Warren Waite and witnesses called in an effort to send him to an insane asylum rather than to the electric chair for the murder of his wealthy father-in-law, John E. Peck, sought yesterday to add new horror to the record of the young dentist's crimes already presented to the jury and Justice Shearn.

Waite testified that he was not quite sure what he should have done, but that he might have killed his wife, if he had been free, after she had inherited the half million dollars for which he had murdered her father and mother with disease germs and poison. Alienists for the defense testified that Waite had told them that he had planned to marry some beautiful young woman after he had come into possession of his father-in-law's money. Walter Rogers Deuel, who is defending Waite, laid stress in a hypothetical question to alienists on the fact that Waite had asked young men with whom he played tennis to estimate the prospective wealth of handsome young women whom he saw at the Columbia tennis courts and at the Seventy-first and Sixty-eighth Regiment Armories, where he frequently played.

Dr. Allan Ross Diefendorf and Dr. Morris J. Karpas, alienists for the defense, who found Waite suffering from "moral idiocy," said the defendant in conversations with them had accused himself of almost every crime and nearly every moral infirmity except extravagance with money.

Prosecution and Defense Reversed.

At yesterday's session of the court the prosecution and defense reversed their usual functions. While the defense labored at the difficult task of putting additional stains on Waite's moral character and making them vivid enough to stand out against the black background which had already been painted, the State sought to discredit certain details of the more intricate plots of murder to which the defendant had confessed.

The defense did not succeed in making Waite much blacker, and the prosecution was not very successful in trimming any of the fantastic details from Waite's crimes. The jury was surfeited with the defendant's own story and the new chapters produced an anti-climax. The prosecution, except for being able to cast some doubt on the story that Waite had tried to give his father-in-law pneumonia by putting water in his rubbers, dampening his sheets and opening the window of his bedroom and by taking him riding after wetting the cushions of the automobile, stood about where it did the night before.

"Moral idiocy" or "moral imbecility" was explained by alienists for the defense to be an utter lack of emotion or moral feeling, and the more crime and vice the defense could fix on the defendant the better were their chances for proving that he suffered from that infirmity. In consequence no pains were spared to prove the depth and variety of his guilt.

Grocer Got Ground Glass Jelly.

Miss Catherine Peck, who survived attempts of Waite to kill her with repeated doses of disease germs, ground glass, and arsenic, was called to the stand by the defense yesterday to clinch the evidence of these murderous attempts which would rest otherwise only on the word of Waite. Mrs. Peck said she had gritted her teeth against something that she thought was fine sand once when she started to eat some marmalade. She then took the jar, which had been doctored with powdered glass, back to the grocer from whom she had bought it, and received his apologies. She told also of accepting from the defendant the present of a can of fish, in which he said that he had placed disease germs, although it failed to injure her. She told also of the money, rings, and other jewelry which she had missed after visits of Waite.

"You were fond of him, were you not?" was asked.

"Yes," replied Miss Peck, "I took him for what he appeared to be."

As the defense had already shown that Waite had tried to commit murders through inoculation with anthrax, typhoid, pneumonia, tuberculosis, diphtheria, and other diseases, that he had poisoned with arsenic, chlorine gas, overdoses of calomel and varinol, and administered chloroform and asphyxiating gas, and that he had committed numerous thefts and other petty crimes, the testimony yesterday was shaped for the most part to prove certain abstract qualities, such as shamelessness, ingratitude, indifference to family ties and cruelty. His occasional deviation into piety was emphasized in testimony that he had been an active member of the Christian Endeavor Society at Ann Arbor and for a time in New York and

POLICE TELL HOW WIRES ARE TAPPED

Men Who Spied On Those Named in Charities Inquiry Say System Is Widespread.

DR. POTTER ATTACKS MAYOR

Calls Him Traducer of the Dead—Mitchel Produces Fosdick's Report on Witness's Record.

The Thompson Legislative Committee late yesterday wound up its investigation of the tapping of private telephone wires by the police after hearing the testimony of two of the Detective Sergeants who did the spying on the conversations of the Catholic priests whom Mayor Mitchel accused of conspiring to wreck his administration and defeat the ends of justice.

The only other witnesses were Walter J. Drummond, son of Michael J. Drummond, former Charities Commissioner, and Dr. Daniel C. Potter of Brooklyn, who was charged with trying to evade subpoena servers of the Strong Committee that investigated the Charities Department. Both men denied much of the conversations the policemen said they had overheard on the tapped telephone wires. Dr. Potter enlivened the proceedings by attacking Mayor Mitchel and Charities Commissioner John A. Kingsbury.

The examination of the policemen brought out the fact that it is not unusual for them to listen in on the tapped wires of lawyers and physicians in the search for crime or suspected criminals. In such cases, the witnesses testified, however, that the confidential relation between lawyer or physician and client was not abused, as only enough conversation was listened to to locate a suspect that was wanted. The policemen also admitted that in some cases the trunk lines of hotels were tapped and the conversations of all hotel guests listened to.

Hotel Wires Tapped.

This, it developed, was true in the case of the Hotel Irving, where Robert W. Hebberd, former secretary of the State Charities Department, was living at the time the priests' telephone wires were tapped. This made the fourth wire that was tapped in connection with the charities investigation, although Mayor Mitchel testified that only three wires were tapped—those of Dr. Potter, his son, Dean Potter, and Father Farrell. The wire tappers did not get any of Mr. Hebberd's conversations.

Dr. Potter accused Mayor Mitchel of being a traducer of the dead and with having a desire to retail scandal. He denied knowing that an honorarium of $5,000 had been raised for his benefit by the late Mgr. McMahon until three years later. Certain mistaken friends of his, he said, thought to make him a present but soon abandoned the plan and then Mgr. McMahon put the money in a general fund. Mgr. McMahon, he said, was crushed and humiliated by the insults heaped upon him and died.

After the session had ended, Mayor Mitchel made public a report of the entire matter turned in to the late Mayor Gaynor by Raymond B. Fosdick, then Commissioner of Accounts. Statements in the report were to the effect that the money was raised to help Dr. Potter "out of his financial troubles." The report also stated that Father Mallick J. Fitzpatrick, Treasurer of the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin, had purchased with $800 of the funds of the institution a judgment which Austin, Nichols & Co. had obtained against Dr. Potter.

Believes Dr. Potter.

After Dr. Potter had finished his testimony Senator Thompson, Chairman of the committee, announced his belief that Dr. Potter had not tried to evade subpoena servers from the Strong Committee, but that he had simply waited until others had testified first. Dr. Potter admitted this was true. In ending his investigation of the wiretapping subject Senator Thompson suggested that it would be advisable for a committee to be appointed to investigate the entire charities subject. His committee, he said, could not go into the matter.

Mayor Mitchel denied yesterday that the telephone wires of Father Joseph Dineen and Mgr. Dunn had been tapped by the police.

"I have made the most careful and painstaking investigation," said the Mayor, "and have been informed, and know it to be true, that Father Dineen's and Mgr. Dunn's wires were not supervised by the police. Of course, I can only speak for the police."

The Mayor said he had not yet determined upon any action regarding the bringing of criminal proceedings against persons named in his testimony.

Senator Thompson in ending the inquiry critisised the police system of wire espionage and said it would have to be curbed by legislative enactment.

"Give me six months at the listening-in switchboard of the police in Greenwich Street," he said, "and I will break the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., or any other big banking house in America. The police have too much power in this and it will have to be curbed."

The First Witness.

The first witness, Walter J. Drummond, was questioned by Alfred J. Talley, counsel for the accused priests,

AMERICA WILL NO LONGER TOLERATE ILLEGAL SEIZURE OF MAILS AT SEA, LANSING WARNS BRITAIN AND FRANCE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, May 27.—Up to last night the American note to England on interference with mails had not reached the Foreign Office, and no official comment was ventured on the rough summary cabled here.

Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of War Trade, in a talk with THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, spoke of the point raised by the critics of the British attitude toward the seizure of mails—that Great Britain had no right to search ships at sea and take the mails from them.

"We have already made it clear that we maintain an absolute right to take mails from steamers passing through British waters for the sake of ascertaining if they contain contraband," said he. "We cannot relinquish that right, but I don't want to discuss it as a possible part of the American note until I see what the note says. If contraband is to be smuggled through our waters in mail sacks, we have equally as much right to seize the sacks as to seize contraband ships. How are we going to know there is no contraband in the mail unless we examine suspected mail?

"The Germans shipped a large quantity of contraband that way before we caught them at it. So now to protect ourselves we feel obliged to exert our right of search. Neutral ships on their way through our waters are asked by us to come into port, so that the search can be done quicker than at sea. We always let the mail go after the quickest possible inspection if it is not contraband."

AMERICAN DEAD, TWO SHOT

Pershing Calls Cervantes Most Dangerous Outlaw in Mexico Except Villa.

By FRANK B. ELSER,
Special Correspondent of The New York Times.

FIELD HEADQUARTERS, UNITED STATES PUNITIVE EXPEDITION, NEAR NAMIQUIPA, Mexico, May 25, (via Radio to Columbus, N. M., May 26.)—Candelario Cervantes, the chief Villista in Northern Chihuahua, was killed today six miles south of Cruces, near the American line of communication, in a running fight with a mixed command of a party of ten infantrymen and engineers. The fight lasted forty-five minutes.

With a band estimated at twenty men, Cervantes, long sought by General Pershing's troops, had determined to attack a detachment of engineers mapping a pass below Cruces. The engineers, dropping their tools, returned the fire, and were reinforced by a detachment of the Seventeenth Infantry. This odd assortment of troops drove the Villistas to the mountains, wounding several and killing two, one of whom a hasty examination indicated was Cervantes. The bodies were removed to the town of Cruces, where they were inspected by a committee of Mexicans, including the Presidente, who declared unanimously the man was Cervantes.

Private George O. Hulitt is credited with killing both Mexicans. The second Mexican killed was Jose Bencorne a well-known Villista.

The American force lost one killed and two wounded, all men of the Seventeenth Infantry. Our troops are pressing pursuit of the remainder of the bandits tonight.

It was Cervantes's threat which drove peon laborers from doing road work under our Engineer Corps, and his end through fighting the engineers has certain retributive justice. He was one of the most important Villistas and had been a will o' the wisp of this northern country, repeatedly eluding cavalry drives through the mountains near Namiquipa. He had a woman friend there and more than once stopped in town while our troops camped on the outskirts. His death will lead a step toward eradicating Villistas in this region.

Villista Call to Natives.

"To Citizens and Leaders of the Carranza Army:

"We who subscribe ourselves members of the Mexican Army and citizens loyal to the national defense set forth that in the circumstances that have befallen our country, and with armed invasion by the United States of the North, the shame of our land and the unmentionable affront before all the world, we desire as true sons of our saddened Mexico no longer to bear the name of traitors.

"We further desire to combat the invading enemy without quarter, and for that reason we beseech you not to impede us, not to disturb us in our war against the North Americans, who, under false pretenses, do profane our patriotic soil. We take it for granted that we ourselves have no political creed except the cause of Mexico.

"The Carranza Army, the Mexico public, and the entire nation must prepare. They will have to protest and rise up against the insults which all Mexicans suffer in the name of the motherland. History and the world will take account of the patriotism which prompts the call against the invasion. To fail in this will weigh against our consciences and dignity and reflect upon the name of our children.

"On account of this we hope that we do not fail to meet as one grand family a situation which must come about. At least we pray that we be left to fight the miserable invaders, the sole cause of our discord and national disgrace. We respectfully request that you reply in regard to this matter on your word of honor, and in the name of our unfortu-

TWO PACIFIC SHIPS SOLD TO JAPAN LINE

Marine Co. Has Disposed of Three It Bought in 1915 from Pacific Mail.

LOSE AMERICAN REGISTER

The fast twin-screw steamers Korea and Siberia, built in this country and operated for fifteen years under the American flag, have been sold to the Toyo Kisen Kabushiki Kaisha and will be put into service between San Francisco and the Far East. This was their original occupation, but now they will be under Japanese register. The sale was made by the Atlantic Transport Company of West Virginia, one of the subsidiaries of the International Mercantile Marine Company, and was announced by Philip A. S. Franklin, Vice President and one of the receivers of the International Mercantile Marine yesterday afternoon.

The transaction surprised the financial district because the International Mercantile Marine Company, though in the hands of receivers, has been more prosperous in the last year than ever before and has cash or quick assets in excess of $50,000,000. It surprised shipping circles because the Japanese endeavored to obtain the ships before their purchase less than a year ago by the Mercantile Marine subsidiary.

The purchase was made after it had been announced that the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, then the owner of the steamers, was to be dissolved and would dispose of its assets because of "cumulative Governmental oppression through legislation culminating in the La Follette Seamen's act."

At the time of the sale the Pacific Mail Steamship Company was controlled by the Southern Pacific Railroad. Together with the Siberia and Korea it sold to the Atlantic Transport Company the Mongolia, Manchuria, and China. The sale price for the five ships was $5,250,000. The transaction was widely considered as an earnest of the proposition that the Southern Pacific people had acted hastily in appraising the effects of the La Follette law and as indicating an intention on the part of the American interests in Mercantile Marine to keep American shipping under the American flag.

The China Is Sold Also.

Mr. Franklin was asked yesterday if the La Follette bill and failure to obtain legislation recommended by American shipowners had prompted the transaction. He replied that the company had received for each of the ships $2,000,000, or double the purchase price.

"The sale speaks for itself," he added. "The Japanese can operate them cheaper than we can and were willing to pay a high price."

Asked if the war's effect on shipping had not changed opinions on steamship operation as well as notions of values, Mr. Franklin replied that present conditions were temporary, and that after the war the ships might not be saleable for as high a price or worth so much in earning power. The gist of his comment was that the transaction was purely financial.

As if indicating that the sale of ships was no novelty to the company, despite the unprecedented demand for bottoms, Mr. Franklin then let it be known that the China, one of the other ships purchased from the Pacific Mail, had been sold to a company which he called the China Mail Steamship Company. The China is a steamer of 5,000 tons, and was built in 1889. The sale price for this ship was $275,000, and the sale was made, Mr. Franklin said, last October, or only a few weeks after the International Mercantile Marine had purchased the five ships from the Pacific Mail.

The ships just sold to the Japanese were twins, one of 11,276 tons and the other of 11,284 tons, and were the fastest ships in the transpacific service of the Pacific Mail. They were essentially passenger rather than cargo vessels, and on that account were not so valuable as are the big freight carriers in a period like the present, when the demand is all for cargo capacity. The ships were built by the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company in 1901. They were on the Pacific side of the canal when the slide came, and Mr. Franklin said his company had got little use of them after bringing them around the Horn.

The Mongolia and Manchuria, the two other Pacific Mail ships purchased by the Atlantic Transport Line, are now in the New York and London service, one being in London and the other on her

MAKES SOME CONCESSIONS

TO PRESS DAMAGE CLAIMS

Cites Many Instances of Loss to Americans Through "Lawless Practices" of Belligerents.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Secretary Lansing today made public the text of the new American note of protest against the Anglo-French policy of interference with neutral mails to and from this country.

The note, which is a vigorous statement of the attitude of the United States Government, was delivered to the British and French Ambassadors in Washington several days ago, and has been forwarded by cable to their respective Governments. It challenges the legality of the methods that have been followed by the British and French Governments, describes the "improper methods employed by the British and French authorities in interrupting mails" as "a lawless practice," which can no longer be tolerated, and concludes with the declaration that "only a radical change in the present British and French policy, restoring to the United States its full rights as a neutral power, will satisfy this Government."

After pointing out that American commercial interests are being injured, that rights of property are violated, and rules of international law and custom are "palpably disregarded" by the Anglo-French policy of interference with neutral mails, the note says:

"The Government of the United States, in view of the improper methods employed by the British and French authorities in interrupting mails passing between the United States and other neutral countries and between the United States and the enemies of Great Britain, can no longer tolerate the wrongs which citizens of the United States have suffered and continue to suffer through these methods. To submit to a lawless practice of this character would open the door to repeated violations of international law by the belligerent powers on the ground of military necessity, of which the violator would be the sole judge. Manifestly a neutral nation cannot permit its rights on the high seas to be determined by belligerents or the exercise of those rights to be permitted or denied arbitrarily by the Government of a warring nation. The rights of neutrals are as sacred as the rights of belligerents and must be as strictly observed.

"The Government of the United States, confident in the regard for international law and the rights of neutrals, which the British and French Governments have so often proclaimed, and the disregard of which they have urged so vigorously against their enemies in the present war, expects the present practice of the British and French authorities in the treatment of mails from or to the United States to cease and belligerent rights, as exercised, to conform to the principle governing the passage of mail matter and to the recognized practice of nations. Only a radical change in the present British and French policy, restoring to the United States its full rights as a neutral power, will satisfy this Government."

Secretary Lansing informs Great Britain and France that "the United States must insist again with emphasis" that these Governments cannot obtain rightful jurisdiction over neutral mail ships by forcing them to visit British and French ports for the purpose of seizing their mails and thereby obtaining greater belligerent rights as to such ships than they could exercise on the high seas. He makes it plain that the United States is of the opinion that there can be no legal distinction between seizure of mails at sea, which practice the British announced their intention of abandoning, and their seizure from vessels voluntarily or involuntarily visiting British ports.

"The British and French practice amounts to an unwarranted limitation on the use by neutrals of the world's highway for the transmission of correspondence," is the way in which the note characterizes the British and French method of interference with American and other neutral mails. Secretary Lansing declares that the "arbitrary" methods employed by the British and French Governments have resulted most disastrously to the citizens of the United States, and notifies them that it is the purpose of the United States, in the near future, to press claims for full reparation from England and France for losses to American citizens through this "continuing offense" of interference with American mails.

As a result of this policy, he says, important papers which can never be duplicated, such as American patents for inventions, rare documents, legal papers relating to the settlement of estates, powers of attorney, fire insurance claims, income tax returns, and similar matters have been lost. Secretary Lansing cites specific instances in which American citizens have sustained losses, among them that of the Standard Underground Cable Company of Pittsburgh, which lost a contract in Christiania because its papers failed to arrive in Norway, the result being that a British competitor got the contract.

VOLUNTARY SEARCH NOW.

Norwegian Ships Agree to Put Into Kirkwall—More Mails Detained.

CHRISTIANIA, May 23, (via London, May 26.)—The Norwegian-American Line has decided to have all its steamships which sail between America and Norway enter Kirkwall voluntarily for inspection of their mails, in order to avoid complications arising from attempts to evade the British authorities by taking the more northerly course.

The company has purchased a tramp steamship of 1,800 tons to bring American coal to Norway for its vessels, so that they will be less dependent on English bunkers.

The steamship Bergensfjord, which sailed from New York May 13 for Bergen, has arrived safely by way of Kirkwall, where all her mail was removed and detained by the British authorities.

STOCKHOLM, May 26.—There is much speculation here as to the effect agreements entered into by Danish and Norwegian steamship lines with the British Government, whereby they agree voluntarily to permit their steamers to visit Kirkwall and submit to search without the formality of seizure at sea, will have upon American negotiations with England regarding interference with mail. News that Norwegian line steamers formally have agreed to this procedure has just been received here, and it is felt that it may complicate matters if England chooses to take advantage of this technical point.

In the meantime the three Scandinavian countries are acting in concert to bring pressure to bear on England to permit first-class mail to come through uninterrupted. Stockholm has been without American mail for many days, and the suggestion was made here that under the existing conditions time might be saved if the American authorities had sent the mail in the first instance by way of England instead of waiting to send it by Scandinavian boats, inasmuch as mail coming by way of London is received much quicker than that sent direct, which is seized at Kirkwall and forwarded later by various routes.

BERLIN, May 26, (by Wireless to Sayville,)—"The parcel post on board the Danish steamer Tyaldur, bound from Farver Island to Copenhagen, was taken off at Leith, to which port the steamer had been taken by the British, according to a statement by the Danish Post Office Department received here from Copenhagen," says the Overseas News Agency today.

"The Danish postal authorities," adds the news agency, "state that this act is contrary to the British promise, according to which mail from one Danish port to another should not be violated."

AMERICANS BRING DOWN THREE GERMAN PLANES

Thaw, Rockwell and Cowdin Account for One Each—Thaw Slightly Wounded.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 26.—The American air squadron has engaged in a regular battle over Verdun, from which it emerged scathless save for trifling wounds, with three hostile planes—one Fokker and two Aviatiks to its credit. The official communiqué announces today that a Fokker was brought down near Vaux and the Aviatiks near Etain "by our pilots," the last words referring to the Americans of the American squadron.

Thaw and Kiffin Rockwell set the example on Wednesday morning while the patrol was flying in one-man baby Nieuports. They attacked two German planes—a Fokker and an Aviatik. Thaw was in the lead. Rising above, the Fokker swung down against him in a volplane, Rockwell meanwhile replying to the Aviatik, which tried similar tactics.

The Aviatik fled to the protection of its own guns, but Thaw opened fire on the Fokker at forty feet, the enemy falling headlong before twenty shots were fired. That was only the beginning and the real battle came later when the Aviatiks were downed.

Eight or nine Americans in the squadron accompanied the French fleet to repel the German observers from the battlefield. The American section was west of its French comrades and almost immediately engaged a superior number of Germans between the Argonne and the Meuse. The fighting lasted eight hours and involved several distinct duels. Rockwell attacked a kind of Aviatik called Lvg at close range when four others tried to surround him. An explosive bullet hit the windshield, the splinters wounding him slightly in the face without preventing him from defeating the Lvg, which is one of the Aviatiks mentioned by the communiqué.

The other was downed by Cowdin with a well-aimed round at a range well beyond the distance usually considered effective. Norman Prince was unable to take part in the battle because he damaged his machine in landing the previous night.

Thaw received a slight wound in the elbow, but declared afterward he was lucky to escape so lightly, as the machine literally was riddled with bullets. The wound did not prevent him from making a perfect landing. At first he thought he was in enemy territory, but the welcome sight of two poilus in a nearby trench reassured him.

Lieutenant Thaw will be sent to Paris for a brief convalescence. It is likely he will get the Legion of Honor, for which he was proposed for downing the Fokker described above. Chapman, also proposed in a citation of army orders, was touched but unhurt by an explosive bullet while chasing two aviatiks. Clyde Balsley and C. C. Johnson have been sent to Verdun to replace Thaw and Rockwell during convalescence.

Of the other Americans, L. Hill and Lawrence Rumsey are awaiting orders for the front. Lufbury left Monday, and Pavelka is on the way. Fred Prince and Willis Haviland of Chicago and Robert Rockwell of Cincinnati have got pilot's brevets. Bert Hall is proposed for promotion to Adjutant and a Military Medal.

RAIDERS KILL 18 AT BARI.

Hostile Airmen Drop Bombs on Italian Town on the Adriatic.

LONDON, May 26.—Eighteen persons were killed and a score of others injured in an air raid on Bari, on the Italian Adriatic coast, according to a Reuter dispatch from Rome today.

The victims were largely women and children, the dispatch states.

"Will the Entente be pleased with President Wilson?" This paper expresses the hope that the hour of a "return to reason" has sounded for the Central Empires' opponents and that they are ready to appreciate what "President Wilson's great words" signify.

The Tageblatt fears, however, that from the latest speeches of English and French, and especially French, statesmen, there still exist hindrances to peace which only a mighty negotiator can overcome. The paper thinks that President Wilson must have been assured before making his utterances that they would not go unheard by the Entente, for "How else could he make up his mind that it was time to announce his [illegible]?"

Text of American Note on Mail Seizures

[Delivered in Duplicate to the British and French Ambassadors to the United States.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

Excellency:

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your Excellency's note of April 3 last, transmitting a memorandum dated Feb. 15, 1916, and communicated in substance to the American Ambassador in London on Feb. 28, in which are stated the contentions of the British and French Governments in regard to the right to detain and examine parcel and letter mails en route by sea between the United States and Europe.

After a discussion of the use of the mails for the transmission of parcels and of the limitations to be placed on "inviolable mail," the joint memorandum of Feb. 15 closes with the following assertions:

"1. That from the standpoint of their right of visitation and eventual arrest and seizure, merchandise shipped in post parcels need not and shall not be treated otherwise than merchandise shipped in any other manner.

"2. That the inviolability of postal correspondence stipulated by the eleventh convention of The Hague of 1907 does not in any way affect the right of the Allied Governments to visit and, if occasion arise, arrest and seize merchandise hidden in the wrappers, envelopes, or letters contained in the mail bags.

"3. That true to their engagements and respectful of genuine 'correspondence' the Allied Governments will continue, for the present, to refrain on the high seas from seizing and confiscating such correspondence, letters, or dispatches, and will insure their speediest possible transmission as soon as the sincerity of their character shall have been ascertained."

In reply the Government of the United States desires to state that it does not consider that the Postal Union Convention of 1906 necessarily applies to the interferences by the British and French Governments with the oversea transportation of mails of which the Government of the United States complains. Furthermore, the Allied Powers appear to have overlooked the admission of the Government of the United States that post parcels may be treated as merchandise subject to the exercise of belligerent rights as recognized by international law. But the Government of the United States does not admit that such parcels are subject to the "exercise of the rights of police supervision, visitation, and eventual seizure which belongs to belligerents as to all cargoes on the high seas," as asserted in the joint note under acknowledgment.

It is noted with satisfaction that the British and French Governments do not claim, and, in the opinion of this Government, properly do not claim, that their so-called "blockade" measures are sufficient grounds upon which to base a right to interfere with all classes of mail matter in transit to or from the Central Powers. On the contrary, their contention appears to be that, as "genuine correspondence" is under conventional stipulation "inviolable," mail matter of other classes is subject to detention and examination. While the Government of the United States agrees that "genuine correspondence" mail is inviolable, it does not admit that belligerents may search other private sea-borne mails for any other purpose than to discover whether they contain articles of enemy ownership carried on belligerent vessels or articles of contraband transmitted under sealed covers as letter mail, though they may intercept at sea all mails coming out of and going into ports of the enemy's coasts which are effectively blockaded. The Governments of the United States, Great Britain, and France, however, appear to be in substantial agreement as to principle. The method of applying the principle is the chief cause of difference.

Though giving assurances that they consider "genuine correspondence" to be "inviolable," and that they will, "true to their engagements," refrain "on the high seas" from seizing and confiscating such correspondence, the Allied Governments proceed to deprive neutral Governments of the benefits of these assurances by seizing and confiscating mail from vessels in port instead of at sea. They compel neutral ships without just cause to enter their own ports, or they induce shipping lines, through some form of duress, to send their mail ships via British ports, or they detain all vessels merely calling at British ports, thus acquiring by force or unjustifiable means an illegal jurisdiction. Acting upon this enforced jurisdiction, the authorities remove all mail, genuine correspondence as well as post parcels, take them to London, where every piece, even though of neutral origin and destination, is opened and critically examined to determine the "sincerity of their character," in accordance with the interpretation given that undefined phrase by the British and French censors. Finally the expurgated remainder is forwarded, frequently after irreparable delay, to its destination. Ships are detained en route to or from the United States or to and from other neutral countries, and mails are held and delayed for several days, and, in some cases, for weeks and even months, even though not routed to ports of North Europe via British ports. This has been the procedure which has been practiced since the announcement of Feb. 15, 1916. To some extent the same practice was followed before that date, calling forth the protest of this Government on Jan. 4, 1916. But to that protest the memorandum under acknowledgment makes no reference and is entirely unresponsive.

The Government of the United States must again insist with emphasis that the British and French Governments do not obtain rightful jurisdiction of ships by forcing or inducing them to visit their ports for the purpose of seizing their mails, or thereby obtain greater belligerent rights as to such ship than they could exercise on the high seas, for there is, in the opinion of the Government of the United States, no legal distinction between the seizure of mails at sea, which is announced as abandoned, and their seizure from vessels voluntarily or involuntarily in port.

The British and French practice amounts to an unwarranted limitation on the use by neutrals of the world's highway for the transmission of correspondence. The practice actually followed by the Allied Powers must be said to justify the conclusion, therefore, that the announcement of Feb. 15 was merely notice that one illegal practice had been abandoned to make place for the development of another more onerous and vexatious in character.

The present practice is a violation not only of the spirit of the announcement of Feb. 15 but of the rule of The Hague Convention upon which it is concededly based. Aside from this it is a violation of the prior practice of nations which Great Britain and her allies have in the past insisted to establish and maintain, notwithstanding the statement in the memorandum "that as late as 1907 the letters and dispatches themselves could be seized and confiscated."

During the war between the United States and Mexico the United States forces allowed British steamers to enter and depart from the port of Vera Cruz without molesting the mails intended for inland points. During the American civil war Lord Russell endeavored to induce the United States to concede that "her Majesty's mails on board a private vessel should be exempted from visitation or detention." This exemption of mails was urged in October, 1862, in the case of British mails on board the Adela. On Oct. 31 Secretary Seward announced that "public mails of any friendly or neutral power duly certified or authenticated as such shall not be searched or opened, but be put as speedily as may be convenient on the way to their designated destination." In accordance with this announcement the Government of the United States in the case of the British steamship Peterhoff, which had been seized with her mails against the protest of her Majesty's Government, had her mails forwarded to destination unopened.

The same rule was followed by France, as I am advised, in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870; by the United States in the Spanish-American war of 1898; by Great Britain in the South African war, in the case of the German mail steamers Bundesrath and General; by Japan, and substantially by Russia, in the Russo-Japanese war of 1904. And even in the present war, as the memorandum of Great Britain and France states, their enemy, Germany, has desisted from the practice of interfering with neutral mails, even on board belligerent steamers. This is illustrated by the case of the French steamer Floride, captured by the auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich, cited by the British and French Governments in support of their argument regarding parcel mails. In this case the letter mails of the Floride, amounting to 144 sacks, were forwarded to their destination by the commander at the first opportunity upon arriving in the United States. It would seem, therefore, to be conclusively established that the interferences with mails of which this Government justly complains are wrong in principle and in practice.

The arbitrary methods employed by the British and French Governments have resulted most disastrously to citizens of the United States. Important papers which can never be duplicated, or can be duplicated only with great difficulty, such as United States patents for inventions, rare documents, legal papers relating to the settlement of estates, powers of attorney, fire insurance claims, income tax returns, and similar matters, have been lost.

Delays in receiving shipping documents have caused great loss and inconvenience by preventing prompt delivery of goods.

In the case of the Macniff Horticultural Company of New York large shipments of plants and bulbs from Holland were, I am informed, frozen on the wharves because possession could not be obtained in the absence of documents relating to them which had been removed from the Nieuw Amsterdam, Costerdyk, and Rotterdam.

Business opportunities are lost by failure to transmit promptly bids, specifications, and contracts.

The Standard Underground Cable Company of Pittsburgh, for example, sent by mail a tender and specifications for certain proposed electrical works to be constructed in Christiania; after several weeks of waiting the papers have failed to arrive. The American company was told that the bids could not be longer held open and the contract was awarded to a British competitor.

Checks, drafts, money orders, securities, and similar property are lost or detained for weeks and months.

Business correspondence relating to legitimate and bona fide trade between neutral countries, correspondence of a personal nature, and also certain official correspondence, such as money order lists and other matter forwarded by Government departments, are detained, lost, or possibly destroyed. For instance, the Postmaster General informs me that certain international money order lists from the United States to Germany, Greece, and other countries, and from Germany to the United States, sent through the mails, have not reached their destination, though dispatched several months ago. It was necessary to have some of these lists duplicated and again dispatched by the steamship Frederick VIII., which sailed from New York on April 19, and from which all the mails intended for Germany have been taken and held in British jurisdiction.

As a further example of the delay and loss consequent upon the British practice, the Postmaster General also sends me a copy of a letter from the British Postal Administration admitting that the mails were removed from the steamer Medan in the Downs on Jan. 30 last and not forwarded until some time "between the 2d of February and the 2d of March," and that 182 bags of these mails "were lost during transmission to Holland on the 26th day of February by the Dutch steamship Mecklenburg." The Medan arrived safely at Rotterdam a day or two after she left the Downs.

Numerous complaints similar to the foregoing have been received by this Government, the details of which are available, but I believe I have cited sufficient facts to show the unprecedented and vexatious nature of the interference with mails persisted in by British and French authorities.

Not only are American commercial interests injured but rights of property are violated, and the rules of international law and custom are palpably disregarded. I can only add that this continuing offense has led to such losses to American citizens and to a possible responsibility of the United States to repair them that this Government will be compelled in the near future to press claims for full reclamation upon the attention of his Majesty's Government and that of the French Republic.

The principle being plain and definite, and the present practice of the Governments of Great Britain and France being clearly in contravention of the principle, I will state more in detail the position of the Government of the United States in regard to the treatment of certain classes of sealed mails under a strict application of the principle upon which our Governments seem to be in general accord.

The Government of the United States is inclined to the opinion that the class of mail matter which includes stocks, bonds, coupons, and similar securities is to be regarded as of the same nature as merchandise or other articles of property and subject to the same exercise of belligerent rights. Money orders, checks, drafts, notes, and other negotiable instruments which may pass as the equivalent of money are, it is considered, also to be classed as merchandise. Correspondence, including shipping documents, money order lists, and papers of that character, even though relating to "enemy supplies or exports," unless carried on the same ship as the property referred to, are, in the opinion of this Government, to be regarded as "genuine correspondence," and entitled to unmolested passage.

The Government of the United States, in view of the improper methods employed by the British and French authorities in interrupting mails passing between the United States and other neutral countries and between the United States and the enemies of Great Britain, can no longer tolerate the wrongs which citizens of the United States have suffered and continue to suffer through these methods. To submit to a lawless practice of this character would open the door to repeated violations of international law by the belligerent powers on the ground of military necessity of which the violator would be the sole judge. Manifestly a neutral nation cannot permit its rights on the high seas to be determined by belligerents or the exercise of those rights to be permitted or denied arbitrarily by the Government of a warring nation. The rights of neutrals are as sacred as the rights of belligerents and must be as strictly observed.

The Government of the United States, confident in the regard for international law and the rights of neutrals which the British and French Governments have so often proclaimed and the disregard of which they have urged so vigorously against their enemies in the present war, expects the present practice of the British and French authorities in the treatment of mails from or to the United States to cease, and belligerent rights, as exercised, to conform to the principle governing the passage of mail matter and to the recognized practice of nations. Only a radical change in the present British and French policy, restoring to the United States its full rights as a neutral power, will satisfy this Government.

I have, &c.,
ROBERT LANSING.

OFFICIAL GERMAN ATTITUDE ON PEACE

real and open enemies any more inclined to peace? Or our supposedly 'neutral' friends, are they any better disposed toward us? We all desire peace; we long for it. I will not deny that, but we ask only for peace which will assure us peace for the longest time possible, and which will be consistent with the sacrifices we have made. An unfavorable peace we do not want. We desire peace only through victory; this is our peace yearning.

"We want to bring about victory with all the means at our disposal, and we do not want to be cheated out of the prize of victory by any mediator, no matter what his name may be. To speak out as free and openly as the heart dictates and to see its feelings freely and openly mirrored in the press the German people have an undeniable right."

BERLIN, May 25, (via London, May 26.)—The United States played a large part in the censorship debate in the Reichstag today. Deputy Hirsch, National Liberal, severely criticised the Government for measures adopted to suppress criticism of the United States in the newspapers and to put brakes on the agitation for a more vigorous submarine campaign.

Dr. Oertel attacked the authorities for their attempt to suppress the gigantic petition circulated by Professor Schaefer of Berlin University against Germany's yielding to the demands of the United States. He also attacked the Government for the censorship which had been exercised over editorial comment on an American note, and for prohibiting the republication of an anti-American article written by the Conservative leader, Heydebrand.

Foreign Minister von Jagow, in reply, declared emphatically that both the military and political authorities had agreed that negotiations with America must not be impeded by press comment. The Minister said that a temperamental article, such as that of Heydebrand, would certainly have stirred up public feeling and that he therefore accepted full responsibility for its suppression.

Deputy Hirsch resumed the floor after Minister von Jagow had concluded. Referring to the possibility of American mediation, he declared it would be impossible to accept the good offices of "an ostensible neutral who soiled its hands with blood by using its best efforts to prolong the war."

DOUAUMONT FIGHT YIELDS SMALL GAINS

Both Sides Report Slight Successes in the Struggle Northeast of Verdun.

BATTLE SOUTH OF THE FORT

German Attack There Repulsed, Paris Says—Fierce Gun Duels West of the Meuse.

LONDON, May 26.—Severe infantry actions continue in the Douaumont region northeast of Verdun, but without decisive results. In fact, both sides claim today slight gains in that hotly contested area.

Berlin asserts that German troops extended their positions to the west of Haudromont quarry and across the Douaumont ravine. South of Fort de Douaumont, it is added, the French were driven back further and an additional 600 prisoners and 12 machine guns were captured.

The day bulletin of the French War Office states that the French succeeded in recovering part of the trenches occupied yesterday by the Germans between Haudromont Wood and Thiaumont Farm.

Tonight's official communication from Paris reports that a strong attack was made by German forces on the French trenches south of Fort de Douaumont, but that it was repulsed.

That Fort de Douaumont was never retaken by the French is now asserted by the German supreme military command, according to a dispatch from Berlin. It is possible, it is declared, that isolated patrolling parties may have reached approach trenches south of the fort, but none of them ever emerged except as prisoners. Since Fort de Douaumont was first reported taken, on Feb. 25, it has been continuously in German possession, it is asserted.

Heavy artillery fire was the only feature of activity on the west side of the Meuse late last night and today. According to Paris, the Germans attempted an attack on Dead Man Hill, but were stopped at the outset by the French curtain of fire.

The French War Office communication tonight says:

> On the left bank of the Meuse the artillery has been particularly active in the region of Avocourt and Hill 304. An intermittent bombardment of our second lines has taken place.
> On the right bank of the Meuse during the afternoon the enemy carried out a strong attack against our trenches on the approach to Fort de Douaumont. This attack was completely repulsed with heavy losses by our infantry and mitrailleuse fire.
>
> Our artillery caught under its fire and scattered German troops on the move in the Chauffour Wood.
>
>
> There is nothing of importance to report from the remainder of the front.

The afternoon statement of the French War Office reads:

> On the left bank of the River Meuse there has been very violent artillery fighting in the sectors of Avocourt and Dead Man Hill. At this latter place a German attack which was about to be made was circumvented by our curtain of fire.
>
> On the right bank of the river a counterattack brought into our possession a section of trench occupied yesterday by the enemy at a point between the wood of Haudromont and the farm of Thiaumont. To the north of this farm we last night made progress with hand grenades and took some prisoners.
>

The German Headquarters statement reads:

> On the east bank of the Meuse we successfully continued our attacks. Our positions to the west of the stone quarry were extended, the Douaumont ravine was crossed, and the enemy south of Fort de Douaumont was thrown further back. Another 600 prisoners and twelve machine guns were captured.
>
>
>
> The enemy aeroplane brought down south of Château-Salins, reported on May 21, was the fifth put out of action in aerial engagements by Lieutenant Wintgens.

GERMANS USING 800,000 MEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, May 27.—A dispatch to the Daily Chronicle says:

"Colonel Feyler, a Swiss military critic, writes in the Journal de Geneve on the effects of the battle upon the German army and people. Both the losses and the impression created by them, he says, are much more serious in Germany than in France. A fortnight ago the Germans estimated them at 300,000, or much more than double the French losses, according to the Colonel. The French losses are not to be measured exactly by the population of France, as there is a considerable contingent of Colonial troops.

"'The 300,000 Germans who have fallen before Verdun,' he goes on, 'have each of them caused in Germany a share of suffering. If the French fallen have been, let us say, 120,000, including 20,000 African troops, there has been in France one-third of the suffering that there has been in Germany.

"'Furthermore, the Germans have to reflect that, while they are assailants, they have lost 100,000 men a month without a decisive result. The French, on the other hand, losing fewer, have a feeling of success.

"'The Germans are known to have brought up five divisions for this week's effort. With at least thirteen army corps already engaged in this battle we have a total of fifteen or sixteen corps, or a force of effectives of at least 800,000 men.'"

BRITISH WORK UNDERGROUND.

Mining Operations the Chief Activity on Their Front.

LONDON, Saturday, May 27.—A British official communication dealing with the operations of the British forces on Thursday and Friday was issued last night (Friday). It says:

> The activity of the last twenty-four hours has been confined mainly to mining operations. The enemy blew up a large mine at Fricourt without damaging our trenches, and also exploded a mine at Camouflet, in the same section.
>
> About the Loos salient underground operations continue and minor explosions occurred during the night. Mutual bombardments occurred at many places, notably at Thiepval, Monchy, Vimy Ridge, between Neuville-St. Vaast and Souchez, and in the St. Eloi sector. In the two latter zones there was considerable night shelling.
>
>
> Two minor affairs occurred last night. At Mametz we raided hostile trenches, which our party entered without difficulty, and maintained a spirited bombing fight before withdrawing after twenty-five minutes. On the northern flank at Ypres salient there was an encounter in No Man's Land with a hostile covering party, which was driven back to its trenches.
>

Greece to Float an Interior Loan.

ATHENS, May 26.—The Minister of Finance, D. G. Rhallis, signed a contract yesterday with the National Bank of Greece under which the bank is to float an interior loan of 115,000,000 drachmae. The loan will be issued at 88½, with interest at 5 per cent. The National Bank will subscribe 75,000,000 drachmae.

whether the changed tone of the utterances of Premier Asquith and Sir Edward Grey and what is regarded as a disavowal of their intention to crush Germany as a nation and a commercial rival or dismember the Empire, are indicative of receptivity toward reasonable peace proposals is an uncertain factor in the reckoning.

The best-posted neutral observers here, particularly diplomats who are in touch with the sentiment in both camps, are inclined to give a negative answer to these questions and to hold that something further must occur to convince the Entente Allies that the expulsion of the German armies from occupied territories and the completion of the "On to Berlin" campaign are impossibilities, even with the aid of the blockade and economic pressure.

As one possible means of bringing about this receptive attitude in Entente capitals, one of these neutral diplomats, who is not suspected of partiality for either side, recently suggested the presentation of evidence gathered by neutral and impartial agencies of Germany's ability to continue the struggle indefinitely, despite the food situation and the other effects of the blockade.

Should the results of such neutral investigation of the number of men and the amounts of munitions and provisions still available in the empire be brought informally to the attention of opposing Governments, with sufficient evidences of its authenticity and reliability, and should this showing convince them of the improbability of breaking through the German line of iron and fire in a future appreciably near, a long step would have been taken, in the opinion of this advocate of peace, toward the opening of peace negotiations.

The plan in question may seem impracticable and fantastic and possibly be catalogued by the German Government with the plans of Henry Ford and other American pacifists, and it is mentioned only because of the prominence of its originator, a diplomat of the practical school who is the very antithesis of a dreamer.

Germany's Possible Terms.

Germany's peace conditions are extremely moderate, in view of the military position of Germany and the Entente Allies, according to opinion here.

That she was open to reason regarding the lot of Belgium and the occupied regions of France, and that arrangements for the restoration of the Belgian kingdom and the return to France of the provinces captured in this war were easily within the bound of possibility, was the belief in many quarters here months ago.

That belief still prevails in such quarters, even despite Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg's phrase about the impossibility of the restoration of the status quo, which may be interpretable in the sense of Belgium's political and military relations to the western powers.

It is thought in these quarters that arrangements are also possible on most of the territorial and financial questions involved in an ultimate settlement, provided the Entente Allies give up the expectation of crushing the military power of Germany and exacting financial compensation for Belgium, or most important of all, reversing the results of the Franco-Prussian war and taking from Germany Alsace and Lorraine. Nothing, it is asserted, would force any portion of the nation, even the most extreme of the peace advocates, to entertain the last-mentioned possibility.

Colonel E. M. House said last night that he had no plans for returning to Europe. When told of press dispatches indicating that he would be welcomed there as a harbinger of peace, his only comment was that he was very much flattered. He and President Wilson had a conference here Wednesday, when it was indicated that the chief subject of their conversation was peace prospects in Europe.

When Colonel House went to Berlin several months ago on a mission for the President, the submarine issue was understood to have been the principal subject discussed by him, although he listened carefully to every mention of peace, and reported fully to the President on several subsequent interviews. He returned with the impression that at that time there was little prospect of peace.

Colonel House is the President's principal confidential adviser on the European situation, and it has been understood for some time that if Mr. Wilson thought it advisable and timely to send a representative to the European capitals on a peace mission he would select Colonel House.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The definite statement in Berlin press dispatches that Germany would welcome peace was read with deep interest by officials here, particularly in view of recent indications that President Wilson is paying close attention to the entire subject.

The only comment made was that the President's speech tomorrow night before the League to Enforce Peace would make plain Mr. Wilson's position.

Officials said that they knew of no intention on the President's part of asking Colonel House to go back to Berlin.

The President and Colonel House had an hour's conference in New York on Wednesday, but the details of their conversation were not revealed.

CALLS IT CHANCELLOR'S 'RUSE'

Says Bethmann Hollweg's Attempt to Deceive Is Understood by Allies.

PARIS, May 26.—The Temps, in an editorial which reflects the prevailing sentiment in high quarters, treats the peace idea of Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, the German Imperial Chancellor, as a "ruse calculated to deceive neutrals and relieve Germany of its embarrassments."

"Let the Chancellor pursue his game," the Temps says. "The Allies fully understand his manoeuvre. They oppose it by an unshakable determination, expressed not only by the chief officers of the Entente Allies' Governments but upon the battlefield, and in the war factories. Germany will not get by ruse that peace which she is unable to get by force."

Deny von Buelow Is Coming.

BERLIN, May 25, (via London, May 26.)—The rumor in circulation broad that Prince von Bülow, former German Chancellor, is going on a special mission to Washington is officially denied here.

TAFT ANALYZES PEACE LEAGUE PLAN

2,000 CHEER SPEAKERS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The first annual convention of the League to Enforce Peace met here today with ex-President Taft presiding and nearly 2,000 members of the organization in attendance. The three sessions held were marked by great enthusiasm. Today's program included an argument by ex-President Taft on the constitutional aspects of the proposition, advanced in the platform of the League to Enforce Peace that the United States should enter into treaties with the powers of the world that all justifiable questions arising between signatory powers not settled by negotiation, subject to the limitations of treaties, shall be submitted to a permanent judicial tribunal for hearing. Secretary of War Baker tonight spoke on "American Ideals and the League Program," in which he indorsed the purposes of the league heartily. Throughout the various addresses there was a studied and dignified avoidance of all references to the belligerents in the present war, although its horrors and consequences were dwelt on from time to time with great emphasis.

Neither the speeches today nor the spirit with which they were received showed any controversial or critical attitude toward the Administration or toward other propaganda for world peace. Mr. Taft referred several times in his remarks to the position taken by ex-Secretary Bryan at the Lake Mohonk Conference, that if the plan of the League to Enforce Peace were carried out it would violate the Constitution of the United States in that it would bind the United States to the avoidance of war for a period following a decision of the permanent court, and this would limit the power of Congress to declare war. Mr. Bryan's name was received in silence, but he was treated with entire respect by Mr. Taft as well as other speakers. So, too, reference to the so-called Bryan peace treaties was received without any expression either of approval or dissent.

Assails Bryan's Argument.

Coming to the discussion of Mr. Bryan's objection, Mr. Taft said:

"The third plank in the platform is as follows: 'The signatory powers shall jointly use forthwith both their economic and military forces against any one of their number that goes to war, or commits acts of hostility, against another of the signatories before any question arising shall be submitted as provided in the foregoing.'

"It is objected to this clause that it violates the Constitution in that the effect of such a treaty signed by the United States would take away from Congress the power conferred upon it by Section 8 of Article I., to declare war.

"I had the pleasure and privilege of hearing Mr. Bryan advance this argument at the Lake Mohonk Conference. He said that we should need an amendment to the Constitution before we could agree to any such provision. He said that in order to carry out the provision we must have a joint council of the powers to determine when the time had arrived for military action and war, and that this would substitute the action of the council for the constitutional discretion of Congress. I venture to think that this view is wholly without foundation.

"Although it is not necessary, I am willing to accept the assumption that some kind of a council would be appointed by the powers to make the announcements when the time had come for the use of economic and military forces against the recalcitrant member. Does that take away from Congress the power to declare war? It does not.

"If the war is a foreign war, it could not be begun under the Constitution until Congress had declared war. The President would not be authorized to direct the army and navy to begin war until Congress had declared it. What, then, would be the situation if the fact were announced upon which the obligation of the United States to make war arose under this treaty?

"It would be to make war by constitutional means; that is, by the preliminary declaration of Congress that war existed. Congress might decline to exercise that power and refuse to declare war. What would be the effect of that? It would merely be a breach of faith on the part of Congress, and so a breach of faith on the part of the United States, and we would not go to war.

"The treaty-making power under the Constitution creates the obligation to declare war in certain contingencies. That obligation is to be discharged by Congress under its constitutional power to declare war. If it fails to do so, and thus comply with the binding obligation created by the treaty-making power, then it merely breaks the contract of the Government. It is left to Congress to carry out that which we in a constitutional way have agreed to do. Thus, to impose in a constitutional way by treaty an obligation on Congress is not to take away its power to discharge it or to refuse to discharge it."

Edward A. Filene of Boston made a hit with the narration of a story which proved to be the Scriptural account of the incident on the Jericho Road and the part played by the Good Samaritan.

"The millions of dollars we have given to relief funds might indicate," said the speaker, "that the United States has adequately played the rôle of the Good Samaritan, but I am convinced that were this parable stated today it would not limit the action of the Good Samaritan to dressing the wounds and paying the hotel bill of the victim, but would have him start a practical movement for ridding the Jericho Road of outlaws."

Straus Urges Preparedness.

When ex-Secretary of Commerce Oscar S. Straus arose to speak on "Preparedness Against Rebarbarization" he was greeted with prolonged applause, and his remarks were constantly cheered as he proceeded to urge that a great world power must have the sanction of military preparedness to take its place among the nations and to enforce peace.

"Let us not deceive ourselves by failing to see," Mr. Straus said, "that this war has let loose throughout the world the spirit of conquest, the hunger for territory, and the rivalry for domination on land and sea. Even our efforts to maintain our neutrality, instead of making for us friends have made us envied, distrusted, and, by some nations, hated. But entirely apart from the menace of foreign attack, if we are to be an effective influence now or hereafter in the promotion or maintenance of the peace of the world, the measure of our influence will certainly not be in proportion to our weakness, but in proportion to our available strength."

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, another of the speakers, analyzed the plan of the league with constant appreciation of its purposes, and especially commended the idea of an industrial boycott to enforce adherence to the obligation to submit questions in dispute to an international tribunal for hearing and decision.

"The league's program," said Mr. Gompers, "by suggesting the use of an economic boycott on an international scale as a means of enforcing law and justice, pays a tribute to the increasing importance and power of industrial forces in world affairs. Labor will insist that such careful thought and constructive statesmanship be put into the working out of the methods in each country by which such a boycott would be applied, that the workers would be insured against the possibility of being forced to bear more than their just share of the necessary sacrifice involved, and that their freedom of action would not be jeopardized.

"The wage earners of the United States, who have so often proved their patriotic loyalty in the civic life of the nation, as well as in the nation's wars, stand ready to bear their just share of any economic sacrifice that may be necessary to maintain the peace of the world, but they must insist that it be only their just share."

Secretary Baker, who was the principal speaker at the night session, heartily indorsed the purposes of the league.

"When this war is over in Europe the people—I speak not of the countries and those in places of privilege and power—are going to demand the preservation of statesmanship," he said. "There is not going to be tolerated any longer the possibility of a recurrence of this fight.

"The economic forces, the industrial forces, labor, agriculture, religion, learning, science, and art, already in an intimate and intricate system of interchange between nations, will rise as the voice of the people in favor of some such expression of the popular conscience of the Continent of Europe as is desired by the league to enforce peace. Now, suppose they get up such a league, suppose Europe determines to have that sort of regulation of international relations, and we are not in it. What then will be the relation we bear to the rest of the world? Their intimacy without our being in partnership with it some day may become confusing to us. And if we, now in the dominant moral position in the world, decline to join hands with the circle that is quite certainly destined to be formed by the nations of the world for the preservation of peace, they will form that circle and we will be on the outside.

"Clearly some sacrifices are entailed. Every advance of civilization demands sacrifices. To some extent our individual liberty for the common good, and when this league comes it may well be that some individualism originally a part of what would have been given as a definition of American ideals may have to be surrendered into the keeping of the nations of the earth as trusteees for the common good. But out of it all there will arise more than a compensation for it: a better understanding among nations and the peoples of the earth, which will prevent a recurrence of what we now have."

GREAT ALLIED ATTACK IN BALKANS EXPECTED

GERMANS MAY ATTACK ON OTHER FRONTS

Great Offensive Against Russians at Riga and Also on British Front Predicted.

LONDON, Saturday, May 27.—The naval correspondent of The Times asserts that the next great German offensive probably will be begun in Northern Russia, taking the form of a combined land and sea attack from the Gulf of Riga and across the Dvina, heralding an endeavor to advance toward Petrograd.

In concert with this campaign some observers anticipate a simultaneous blow at the British front in France and Flanders, and here also, it is believed, an effort may be made by sea as well as by land.

DEAD PILING UP IN ITALIAN VALLEYS

Thousands of Wounded Also Lying There Whom It Is Impossible to Aid.

LOSSES HINDER AUSTRIANS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 25.—News from the front reveals that the Austrian offensive is being conducted principally by artillery. It is being met successfully by the Italian infantry, which at some points have retaken positions they had had to evacuate.

The enemy's artillery today made its first appearance on the Maggio Toraro line north of Posina, but was unable to advance.

The Austrians tactics follow closely those of the Germans, terrific bombardment being followed by rushes of infantry in dense masses. The latter have afforded superb targets for the Italian field and machine guns, with the result that the Austrian losses far outnumber those of the Italians, both in dead and wounded.

"Peace cannot be concluded without first giving a deserved lesson to the Italian traitors," is the prevailing opinion in Austria, says the Giornale d'Italia.

The offensive in great force against the Italian front, the newspaper adds, is due to the Austrian military party, supported by conservatives and clericals, who are convinced that they will obtain a complete victory. Other parties in Germany and Hungary, however, are less optimistic but hope that a partial success will be achieved—a sucess sufficient to enable Austria when peace is concluded not to give even an inch of territory "to those who betrayed us."

ROME, May 26. — Reports from the Trentino front say that the Alpine troops and Bersaglieri are decimating the Austrian infantry whenever they try to attack outside the range of their guns. The Austrian losses are so numerous, it is declared, that they are causing delay in the Austrian action. Communication with the interior of Austria is blocked by the transport of wounded from the front.

The Austrian troops engaged in the battle are chiefly composed of Tyrolese, Hungarians and Bohemians, these nationalities being considered best adapted for the mountain warfare. Their greatest advantage over the Italians continues to be their abundant supply of artillery, the firing of which in the midst of the colossal Alpine barriers produces an effect similar to an earthquake. The batteries of heavy cannon which have been placed by the Austrians in numerous fortifications on the high plateaus of Folgaria and Dos di Fomme apparently are countless. Grenades, shrapnel, bombs and heavy projectiles are being thrown by the guns and are plowing up the land, smashing peaks and pulverizing the rocks.

All the small picturesque villages along the Adige Valley, which is between the fighting lines, have been victims of the Austrian shells. Their inhabitants have been partly interned in Austria and partly have taken refuge in Italy. The towns being almost entirely uninhabited there have virtually been no casualties in them. Some of them have been absolutely razed by the shells.

The valleys in the fighting zone are piled with dead. There are also thousands of helpless wounded in the valleys, as the Austrian cannonade prevents the succoring of victims by either side.

AUSTRIAN ARMY HUNGRY.

Found Country Evacuated by Italians Denuded of All Foodstuffs.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, May 26.—The news filtering through from the Trentino is reassuring, as the Italians are holding their own against the Austrians, who had prepared at all points to make a sensational march to victory.

It appears that the Austrians found the territory evacuated by the Italians absolutely denuded of everything, even greenstuffs, which might have served as food.

They had figured upon the retreat of the Italians being so precipitate that ample stores would have to be abandoned by them. The result was that though the field telephones were kept busy all day the invading army was without food for twenty-four hours.

FOUR MORE SHIPS SUNK, ONE OF THEM NEUTRAL

LONDON, May 26.—Three more ships have been sunk, according to reports received today by Lloyd's Shipping Agency. The vessels lost were the British steamer El Argentino, the Italian steamer Cornigliano, and the Italian ship Australia.

El Argentino was a vessel of 6,809 tons, and was last reported as arriving at Marseilles April 24 from La Plata.

The Cornigliano sailed from the Clyde April 24 for Genoa, and was last reported as passing Gibraltar May 1. She was a vessel of 2,663 tons.

The Australia, a vessel of 1,586 tons, sailed from Norfolk April 10 for Savona, Italy.

BONIFACIO, Corsica, May 26, (via Paris.)—Twenty-four survivors of the crew of the Spanish steamer Aurrera, which was sunk by a submarine, have arrived at this port in two of the ship's small boats.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—A cablegram to the State Department today from American Consul General Skinner at London gave the names of six more vessels that had been sunk in the new campaign against merchant vessels in the Mediterranean. The Consul General's information was based on Lloyd's reports, and so far as he was able to ascertain no Americans were on board these vessels. The message from Mr. Skinner read:

"Lloyd's reports Italian steamer Cornigliano torpedoed; Italian ship Orealta sunk off Barcelona, cause unstated; Italian brigantine Teresa damaged by submarine; French collier Mira torpedoed in Mediterranean by German submarine, master taken prisoner, crew picked up by British steamer; French steamer St. Corentin sunk, cause unstated; British steamer Washington, sunk by submarine."

FIND IN DEWEY A ROOSEVELT AID

Admiral's Letter Backs Colonel's Contention He Obtained Peace in Venezuela Affair.

SAYS FLEET WAS MOBILIZED

Roosevelt Tells Prominent Authors Asking His Leadership He Will Try to Justify Confidence.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., May 26.—The name of Admiral George Dewey, hero of Manila Bay and President of the Navy's General Board, was linked up with the campaign to obtain the nomination of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt today, through a letter which the Admiral sent to Henry A. Wise Wood, formerly a member of the Naval Consulting Board, concerning action taken by the Colonel at the time of the Venezuela incident in the winter of 1902-3.

The Admiral did not indorse the Colonel's campaign for the nomination, but coming at this time the letter in which Admiral Dewey upheld the Colonel's contention that he obtained peace in the above mentioned dispute with Germany by "speaking softly and carrying the big stick" was considered highly important and significant by the Roosevelt adherents.

It has been the contention of those who are putting Colonel Roosevelt forward as the principal advocate of peace because he is respected by nations who know that he would use force to gain peace if force were necessary to uphold the honor and dignity of the country that the Colonel served the interests of this country best, and prevented aggression on the part of Germany in the Venezuela affair by mobilizing the fleet in southern waters, and making it apparent to the then Ambassador to this country that, while he could use soft words, the country was ready to stand on its own feet.

Critics have since stated that the Colonel did not mobilize the fleet as it has been stated, and in order to obtain first-hand information on this point Mr. Wise Wood wrote to Admiral Dewey.

Admiral Dewey's Letter.

Here is the Dewey letter, which was written to Mr. Wise Wood, and was turned over by him to the Colonel:

Office of the Admiral of the Navy,
Washington, D. C., May 23, 1916.
Mr. Henry A. Wise Wood, 25 Madison Avenue, New York City.

My Dear Mr. Wise Wood: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of May 22d asking me to set you right respecting certain facts regarding Colonel Roosevelt's action over Venezuela.

I was at Culebra, Porto Rico, at the time in command of a fleet consisting of over fifty ships, including every battleship and every torpedo boat we had, with orders from Washington to hold the fleet in hand and be ready to move at a moment's notice. Fortunately, however, the whole matter was amicably adjusted and there was no need for action.

Hoping the above statement is exactly what you want, and thanking you for the compliments you pay me, Very truly yours,
GEORGE DEWEY.

Colonel Roosevelt received a delegation of Progressives from Nassau County headed by Regis H. Post, former Governor of Porto Rico, today and was told by them that they were for his nomination for the Presidency no matter what might happen at the Republican convention. In a series of short addresses they pledged him their support, and the Colonel expressed his gratitude. There were twenty at the gathering.

The rest of the day was devoted by the Colonel to the preparation of his addresses to be delivered on his tour to Kansas City, Chicago, St. Louis, and other cities in the Middle West, and at Newark on Thursday evening next upon his return. He received word also today that the demonstration staged for tomorrow, when 1,500 or more of his adherents are expected to come here on three special trains to tell him that they are for his nomination as President, promised to be the biggest affair Oyster Bay has seen.

The trains will start on the first leg of the pilgrimage at 1:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from New York, and upon their arrival here the delegation will march in fours to Sagamore Hill, headed by the Seventh Regiment Band in full uniform. There will also be a cavalcade of motorists.

Richard M. Hurd will make the main address to the Colonel, and then the Colonel will be asked to reply. There promises to be no end of fireworks of one kind or another. Guy Emerson, President, and C. C. Desmond, Treasurer, of the Roosevelt Non-Partisan League, which has taken over the management of the demonstration, came here tonight with Mr. Hurd to see the Colonel. They were enthusiastic over the great demand for tickets on special trains, and said accommodations would be supplied for all who could get here. It would be a good deal like a convention, they said, and the general demand that had been shown for the nomination of Roosevelt came as a surprise even to his most ardent supporters.

Authors Ask Leadership.

It may interest you to learn that on Wednesday, May 24, a number of professional writers gathered at the Players Club in this city to act as the nucleus for a nation-wide mobilization of the literary resources of the country to aid you in the splendid fight you are making for Americanism. It was the unanimous opinion of those present at this gathering that the international crisis makes your re-election to the Presidency essential to the ultimate welfare of our country.

The organization of authors devoted to you and your cause enthusiastically pledges to you its support, and will endeavor to employ for the best interests of the patriotic movements you represent such literary dynamics as it controls. With a full realization of the fact that the restoration of our nation's honor, integrity, and self-respect before the world hangs upon the outcome of the approaching Presidential election, we see clearly that the restoration has become through the logic of circumstances a task for the accomplishment of which you are of all Americans best fitted mentally, temperamentally, by experience, by knowledge of essential details, and by breadth of view.

It will be our pleasure and pride to devote our pens, our voices ,and our votes to the restoration to the White House of a regime during the continuance of which, as precedent proves, the flag of our country will be free from insult, the lives of our citizens will be at least reasonably safeguarded in any part of the world, our professions of regard for international law will be something more weighty than mere idle words, and the perils that inhere in our present condition of military and naval unpreparedness will pass away.

Irrespective of party affiliations, the undersigned maintain that there will be in the coming campaign but one great issue, namely, Americanism; and that you, as incarnating the cause we have at heart, are entitled to, and will receive, our earnest and untiring support.

In the hope that the kind Providence that gave to us a Washington at one great crisis in our history, and a Lincoln at another, will vouchsafe to us a Roosevelt in the portentous days confronting us, we hereby append our names.

The following authors signed the letter:

Lawrence Abbott, George Ade, Irving Batcheller, Rex Beach, Edward Bok, Douglas Doty, Porter Emerson Brown, Winston Churchill, Richard Washburn Child, James Montgomery Flagg, Hamlin Garland, Robert Grant, Arthur Guiterman, Hermann Hagedorn, Walter Hale, Oliver Herford, Emerson Hough, Woods Hutchinson, Owen Johnson, George Barr McCutcheon, S. S. McClure, Isaac F. Marcosson, Don Marquis, Samuel Merwin, Henry Reuterdahl, Louis Evans Shipman, Julian Street, Booth Tarkington, Charles Hanson Towne, William Roscoe Thayer, Walter Trumbull, Edward S. Van Zile, Stewart Edward White, Jesse Lynch Williams, Harry Leon Wilson, Owen Wister.

Colonel Replies to Authors.

There is no American who would not feel a genuine pride in receiving such a letter as yours; and he would be but a poor American unless he thought, in receiving it, not of its personal reference to himself, but of the straightforward and fearless manner with which you present the situation of this country, and the needs of this country at the present moment. With all that you say I am in the heartiest agreement. The one overmastering issue at this moment is the issue of Americanism, for preparedness and international duty are both of them included in Americanism.

You write me as Americans. You include in your number men of the old Colonial American stock—men who were born abroad, or whose parents were born abroad. You include men whose ancestors can be traced back to various European countries, and men from all sections of the United States, representing all shades of politics. But you stand together on the great issues now up for settlement in the great crisis that we confront. You feel as I feel, that this is, in fact, a crisis in the national life such as that which decided at the outset whether we were to continue to be a nation.

The world is now passing through a cataclysm of anguish, terror, and horror, such as has not been surpassed in all recorded history. It is a time of destruction and also a time of birth. When the war comes to an end we shall see the Old World nations changed in many ways, both for good and for evil. But above all we shall see them with an immensely quickened power not only in things military, but in things industrial, and with an immensely quickened sense of the close relationship, whether friendly or hostile, that must hereafter obtain in international matters.

Each nation will come out of this contest with the national spirit and the sense of national solidarity keyed to a higher pitch than ever before, with a stronger average sense in the community of devotion to the common national life, and of the feeling of obligation to render serice in peace and in war for the upbuilding of that national life.

Even if under such conditions we permit our own sense of national feeling to dwindle, if we permit our people to split into jarring fragments along the lines of creed or national origin, if instead of being all of us Americans we become a tangle of mutually hostile German-Americans, English-Americans, Irish-Americans, or French-Americans; if across the national coat of arms we draw the bar sinister of the hyphen, this republic will have before it only an ignoble life and will be even in peril of seeing that ignoble life ended by ignoble death.

It is only by an aroused and aggressive spirit of Americanism, a spirit of patriotism which insists on every word of devotion to the country being translated into a concrete deed of service to the country, that we all face with a national soul the national duties that concern all of us alike.

You have done your part by this letter in trying to develop such a spirit. As far as in me lies I will in my turn try to justify your confidence, and in my turn seek also to aid in the development of that spirit.

Colonel Roosevelt will begin his invasion of the Middle West, the most important tour of his pre-convention fight, on Sunday night when he leaves at 5:30 from New York for Chicago.

AGNEW EXPLAINS ATTITUDE.

Praises Justice Hughes, but Believes Colonel Is Man of Hour.

Former Senator George B. Agnew, who introduced the Hughes anti-race track legislation in the Senate, was asked yesterday why he did not favor Justice Hughes obtaining the Republican nomination. He said:

"I am glad you have asked that question, as I think I can also explain the position of numerous members of the Roosevelt Republican Committee, particularly from New York, who were earnest supporters of Governor Hughes, but who now urge the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt. These men, including myself, retain in full measure the confidence in Justice Hughes which we made known by our public course while he was Governor. We have no doubt of his Americanism or his courage, and we resent the suggestion that if elected President he could by any chance continue the weak and irresolute policies of the present Administration at home and abroad.

"But we favor Colonel Roosevelt at this time because he has been the recognized leader on the vital issue—Americaism; the people have already responded to his leadership, and we believe that the individual members of the Republican Party in large numbers are ready to follow him. Justice Hughes, through a sense of duty, which must be as irksome as it is compelling, feels himself required to remain silent. Issues which would be determined by the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt would simply be thrown into further controversy by the nomination of Charles Evans Hughes. The nomination of Theodore Roosevelt will in itself be a victory for the principles of preparedness and Americanism which he has enunciated in utterances having no connection with the campaign. On the other hand, should Roosevelt fail of nomination, the impetus already gained on behalf of these dominant issues would be entirely lost. The country needs a strong dominant personality as leader in the present crisis in domestic as well as international affairs.

"Justice Hughes is one of the best men we have ever had in the highest court of this country; and the people of the country, we believe, wish him to remain where he is. Justice Hughes is happy in his present work and in the outlook for its continuance, and I am satisfied from what I know of his past and present history and his capacity for public affairs, that he is much better fitted to serve the people on the most powerful court in the world than he is as President of the United States."

Guy Emerson, Secretary of the Roosevelt Non-Partisan League, said yesterday that branches of the league had been opened in Philadelphia, Chicago, Baltimore, San Francisco, Tacoma, Boston, and Newark. The enrollment in Philadelphia the last week, he said, was 4,500 and in Chicago 3,800. George von L. Meyer of the Roosevelt Republican Committee received word yesterday that a branch of the committee has been organized in California and an address sent broadcast to the voters of that State along the lines of the letter sent by Mr. Meyer to every delegate to the Republican Convention.

WOULD TAFT SUPPORT T. R.?

"A Rather Violent Hypothesis," His Answer to Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—William H. Taft, former President of the United States, who is in Washington presiding over the sessions of the League to Enforce Peace, was asked today as to the truth of a published statement that he would support Colonel Roosevelt if the Colonel were nominated for President on the Republican ticket.

Most of Mr. Taft's answer was a laugh. The rest of it was, "That is a rather violent hypothesis."

VERMONT FAVORS HUGHES.

Delegates to Chicago Instructed to Vote for the Justice.

MONTPELIER, Vt., May 26.—The Vermont delegation to the National Republican Convention will go to Chicago instructed for Justice Charles E. Hughes. A resolution to this effect was adopted when the State convention opened today.

The foreign and Mexican policies of the Administration and its attitude on the question of national preparedness were condemned in resolutions.

The delegation elected to the national convention is headed by Theodore N. Vail of Lyndonville, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. The other delegates are E. O. Morse, Rutland; George H. Prouty, Newport; Collins M. Graves, Bennington; Fred H. Babitt, Bellows Falls; Guy M. Bailey, Essex Junction; John T. Cushing, St. Albans, and G. E. Moody, Waterbury.

SWEDEN SACRIFICES AMERICAN IMPORTS

Refuses to Give Guarantees to England That Goods Are for Use of Her People.

LOSES BRITISH TRADE ALSO

Government Holds That as a Matter of Principle It Cannot Give the Assurances Demanded.

STOCKHOLM, May 26, (via London.)—Officials of the Swedish Government are struggling with the task of interpreting a new law known as the "war trade act," which, according to the foreign view of the situation, is likely to have an opposite effect to that which was intended. The representatives of American firms say the new law is seriously handicapping them and may shut off a large part of the trade of America with Sweden.

The law specifically prohibits any one in Sweden from making agreements with foreign Governments covering the disposition of imported goods after reaching Sweden, especially with reference to products manufactured from imported raw materials. It provides that all such agreements must be made through the Government Trade Commission. As a condition in its blockade England lets nothing into Sweden unless it is covered by a guarantee that the goods are for use in Sweden only and that no part of the materials or any goods manufactured from them shall be sold to any country at war with England or to any one likely to resell to such countries. Even the guarantee only holds good when firms arranging shipments are known and approved by the British authorities.

Sweden takes the position that England and other countries are not entitled to lay down conditions covering goods exported from Sweden. The Swedish Trade Commission therefore makes agreements with England covering English imports, but holds on the other hand that neither England nor any other third party has a right to demand guarantees on goods imported into Sweden from another neutral country such as America. Therefore Sweden declines under the new act to give guarantees to England covering shipments from America, whereas England will not permit such goods to pass without a guarantee.

The dilemma of American representatives in Sweden under these conditions is easily imagined. The matter has been taken up by the American legation, but Government officials say that it is a question of principle with Sweden and must be adhered to. They say that Sweden probably will suffer more from the law than any foreign power and that selling countries therefore have no right to complain.

When the law was adopted it was generally believed that it was aimed against England, but in practice it gives a great benefit to that country over the United States. The Trade Commission is said to be willing that such shipments as canned fruits and manufactured articles from America may be covered by unofficial guarantees, but absolutely declines to countenance guarantees covering products from raw materials, holding that these products when manufactured here are distinctly Swedish and that no foreign power has the right to say how they may be disposed of.

Americans also have appealed to the British Legation to ascertain if Great Britain is willing to modify its blockade guarantee requirements, but thus far little encouragement has been given to the Americans' request. In addition the American representatives also have submitted various propositions to the Swedish commission, but these have not yet been answered, the Commissioners saying they are much puzzled themselves regarding many aspects of the new act.

Contracts for American goods aggregating many thousands of dollars are awaiting the interpretation of the new law, which is believed to be elastic enough to permit favorable consideration. There has been some agitation recently to have Sweden make trade agreements with Great Britain, such as those made between Great Britain and Denmark and Norway, but the Swedish Government says that such an agreement would be humiliating. The Swedish people are exceptionally proud and when it comes to a matter of principle it is virtually impossible to move them.

MUNITIONS WORKERS ASK FOR HOLIDAYS

Lloyd George, Refusing, Says Production Fell Off One-half in Easter Fortnight.

LONDON, May 26.—The urgent need of a continuous supply of war materials precludes the prospect of holidays for British munitions workers, according to a statement made by David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, to a deputation of representatives of the Clyde and Tyne engineers and shipbuilders today on the question of Whitsuntide holidays. Mr. Lloyd George said that the increasingly hot fighting on the French and British fronts, the necessity of straining every nerve to supply the machine guns with ammunition and the continuous demands from the navy for all kinds of equipment made it advisable that the subject of holidays should be allowed to remain in abeyance this year.

Mr. Lloyd George began his statement by pointing out that the Easter holidays had a deplorable effect on the production of munitions. During the Easter fortnight, he said, the output of munitions decreased exactly one-half. "You can imagine what that means," he said. "It means a shortage of hundreds of thousands of rounds of ammunition, and such a shortage makes a considerable difference in the character of operations which can be undertaken." He asserted that he felt sure the workers only needed to know the facts to respond willingly to an appeal in behalf of their comrades in the trenches.

It was arranged to convene a general meeting of the workmen, on Monday, to make a final decision, which is expected to be announced in the House of Commons.

REBELLION IN SUDAN CRUSHED BY BRITISH

Sultan of Darfur Flees After Defeat and the Loss of 1,000 Men.

LONDON, May 26.—The War Office tonight issued a report concerning fighting May 23 in the Sudan, which resulted in the defeat of some 3,000 troops of Ali Dinar, Sultan of Darfur, by Colonel Kelley's force. The fight took place at El Fasher. The British losses are given as five men killed and twenty-three wounded, while the losses to the Sultan's force are estimated at 1,000.

The Sultan, whose attitude toward the Sudanese Government for a long time has been truculent, is reported to have fled with a small number of his followers.

MORGAN AGENT SAYS HE EMPLOYED BURNS

HINTS AT CRIME EVIDENCE

Deputy Police Commissioner Lord Asserts He Ordered Wiretapping but Learned Nothing.

Assuming full responsibility for the installation of a detectaphone in the office of Seymour & Seymour, at 120 Broadway, Martin Egan, a representative of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., described before Chief Magistrate McAdoo yesterday the details of an alleged conspiracy whereby secret information concerning munition contracts was said to have been stolen from the private cables of the Morgan concern. Mr. Egan admitted it was he who had employed William J. Burns to spy on certain occupants of the Seymour offices, who were believed to be acting in connivance with a dishonest clerk in the Morgan firm. It was Mr. Egan also who made the complaint upon which Police Commissioner Woods ordered the tapping of the Seymour telephone wires.

Although Mr. Egan anticipated the use of a detectaphone by Burns, he said yesterday he knew nothing of the actual invasion of the Seymour office and the seizure of papers and memoranda there until after that had happened. When he engaged Burns, he said, he gave him no specific instructions, further than to "catch the thief" in the Morgan office who was supposed to be communicating the contents of secret cables to persons outside. To accomplish this object, Mr. Egan said, a detectaphone was also installed in the office of the Morgan suite occupied by an employe who was, and still is, suspected of being the thief in question.

Yesterday's hearing was a continuation of John Doe proceedings to ascertain whether Burns had a right to break into the Seymour office in search of evidence of a crime against the Morgan firm. District Attorney Swann in person again conducted the examination of witnesses. Burns, who was not due to arrive from the West until some time today, was not represented until the hearing was nearly over. Then former United States Attorney General James M. Beck suddenly appeared on the scene, announced that he was counsel for Burns, and asked that he be given until next Wednesday to familiarize himself with the case before being compelled to produce witnesses on behalf of his client. Magistrate McAdoo granted his request.

The first witness yesterday was George T. Mortimer, President of the Equitable Building Corporation, who testified that he had given Burns permission to spy on the Seymour offices after Mr. Egan had informed him of the alleged existence of a criminal conspiracy between a Morgan employe and certain occupants of the Seymour suite.

Mr. Egan followed Mr. Mortimer on the stand. His connections with the affair began on March 11, he said, when H. P. Prindle and Carrington Weems of the Morgan firm called him into conference and told him of the alleged activities of two men from the office of Seymour & Seymour, who were said to have represented themselves as agents of J. P. Morgan & Co.

At that time the Morgan concern, acting on behalf of the French Government, was negotiating with the Anglo-American Cotton Products Company for 5,000 tons of cotton linters. From what Prindle and Weems told him, Egan said he understood that the two men from the Seymour office, Mortimer B. Sultzer and William Hills, Jr., had approached the Cotton Products Company and, by reason of their "pull with the Morgans," had offered to clinch the contract for them on the payment of a commission of 1.4 per cent. per pound, or a total of $25,000.

"Mr. Carrington and Mr. Weems also produced for me," said Egan, "the original of a telegram sent by Mr. O. B. Phillips of the Seymour & Seymour firm to Mr. Jarrell, President of the Humboldt Fibre Company of Humboldt, Tenn., which they said they had compared with the original cablegram received by Morgan & Co. from the French Government. This telegram paraphrases the words of the original cablegram from the French Government. The time of it showed that it had been transmitted to Mr. Jarrell within a very few hours after the cablegram was received by the Morgans and it was conclusive proof to me that the man who wrote that telegram was in possession of the contents of the original cablegram from the French Government."

Mr. Egan produced a photographic copy of the telegram dispatched on March 3 by O. B. Phillips to the Humboldt Fibre Company, as well as the "grapevine" letter of Feb. 4, in which Mr. Phillips informed this concern that the French Government was inclined to accept their cotton linters, "provided the quality is suitable." Although Mr. Egan did not have the original cable from Mr. Harjes, the Paris representative of the Morgan firm, he had a copy of it on hand to prove that Phillips's telegram was a substantially complete paraphrase of the cable. All these documents were presented in evidence at the recent hearing before the Thompson Investigating Committee.

Mr. Egan testified that the men from the office of Seymour & Seymour had proposed to President Jarrell that he contribute to a "slush fund" to bribe Inspectors of the French Government who would, eventually, have to pass on the contract.

"Did Mr. Jarrell tell you this?" asked District Attorney Swann.

"I am repeating what Messrs. Prindle and Weems told me," replied Mr. Egan.

On the day following his conference with Messrs. Weems and Prindle, Mr. Egan said, he employed Burns on behalf of the Morgan firm.

Egan said the name of the supposed German agent who figured in the Burns discoveries was Means. He had the man, he testified, as an agent of Captain Boy-Ed.

Asked in what connection Burns had mentioned the name of Means to him, Egan replied: "I assumed it was in connection with that cartridge shipment, but I did not pursue the matter. I was interested in it only as an American citizen."

Egan told of his bringing the police into the case two weeks after engaging Burns.

What action the Police Commissioner took was described in detail by Deputy Police Commissioner Frank A. Lord, who followed Egan on the stand. The Deputy Commissioner said the matter was taken up at a luncheon, at which were present Martin Egan, Deputy Commissioner Lord, Commissioner Woods, and Junius Spencer Morgan, son of J. Pierpont Morgan. The luncheon took place March 31.

"On the way down to the luncheon," Mr. Lord testified, "the Police Commissioner told me that the firm of Morgan & Co. had made a complaint that cable information was being stolen and that it might be one of nine persons or it might be one, I believe, of fourteen, and that they wanted the co-operation of the Police Department, although their complaint was not against a single person. The Police Commissioner, Egan, young Morgan, and myself talked the matter over. They left then and I went back to the office of the Commissioner, and he said: 'You go ahead and handle it.'"

After examining the evidence which Egan had obtained, Commissioner Lord said he, too, was convinced that a crime had been committed. Deputy Commissioner Lord said he had caused the tapping of the wires of two employes of the Morgan firm. Although Burns and Egan came to confer with him on several occasions, Mr. Lord said, he never revealed to them any reports of the telephone conversations taken from the Seymour wires. Only once, when he was uncertain as to the identity of various persons, Mr. Lord said, he showed Burns a fragment of the report of a conversation. As a police official, Lord said he did not feel free to deliver any information which might be used by a private detective for commercial purposes.

After several weeks of wiretapping had failed to produce anything of value Deputy Commissioner Lord said he ordered the eavesdropping to cease and had paid no further attention to the matter until he was summoned before District Attorney Swann and informed that Burns had made a raid on the Seymour office. On that occasion Lord made it clear to the District Attorney that there had been no co-operation between the Burns agency and the police.

Two more witnesses were called, Charles William Kalb, an electrician employed by Burns to install the detectaphone in the Seymour office, and John A. Dolan, private detective employed in the Equitable Building. Kalb testified that he also installed a detectaphone in one of the rooms of the suite occupied by J. P. Morgan & Co., this room being occupied by the suspected clerk. He had done similar work for Burns in other buildings, he said, but declined to mention names or addresses.

The hearing was adjourned until next Wednesday.

regarding an alleged conversation he had with Dr. Potter on March 20, in which Dr. Potter was quoted as saying he had "done about everything" and that if he got on the witness stand he would "tell about 7,000 things they don't want known." The witness said the conversation had never occurred. He admitted, however, that a conversation between Dr. Potter and himself on March 21, as recorded by the police, was correct. This simply related to the fact that Dean Potter was in Drummond's office at the time Dr. Potter called up.

Regarding another alleged conversation between the witness and Dr. Potter on March 25, in which Dr. Potter was quoted as saying that he was going to slip out of the city and that "it is indispensable that they don't get me on this matter," the witness said it had never occurred. He explained a conversation of the same day in which he was quoted as asking the witness to get two packages out of an adjoining office and put them in Dr. Potter's office, by saying that Dr. Potter referred to two boxes of cigarettes, each containing several packages of cigarettes.

Dr. Potter then went on the stand and told of charitable work he had done in the last thirty years and described the changes in the methods of treatment of orphans. He praised the work of former Controllers Grout and Metz as well as the work he himself had done. He said there was a change in the system shortly after Controller Prendergast took office. Dr. Potter read the statement made by Mayor Mitchel on the stand regarding the Mgr. McMahon affair, and Frank Moss, counsel to the committee, asked:

"I think it appears on the record that that priest is dead and could not come here?"

"Oh, well, I am here," replied the witness. "That man was broken and burdened by the insults heaped upon him in these identical investigations."

That $5,000 Fund.

Regarding the raising of a $5,000 fund as a honorarium and the subscribing of $500 by Father Fitzpatrick, Dr. Potter said:

"There has never been a scintilla of evidence to show that I ever received any of that money. On the contrary, there was unimpeachable evidence that I received none of it. No one ever doubted that the late Mayor Gaynor knew what evidence was when he saw it, and he patiently heard and rejected that full story. Mr. Fosdick's minutes are incomplete. They do not contain his admission that the check was not connected with me, nor do they fully show that he refused to allow me to testify concerning it.

"In the first place, there never was any $5,000 fund. The sworn testimony of men of unquestioned integrity plainly established that there had never been such a fund. And this testimony was given in Mitchel's presence. Dr. McMahon never gave any such testimony as the Mayor attributes to him."

After reading from the records of the investigation made by the then Commissioner of Accounts, Mr. Fosdick, Dr. Potter added:

"It looks as if the Mayor's sole purpose in referring to the matter is to traduce the dead."

Dr. Potter then read the affidavit regarding the matter left by Mgr. McMahon when he died. The witness also referred to Mayor Mitchel's charge that a persistent effort had been made to discredit the Commissioner of Charities and intimidate him, and added:

"How you are going to intimidate a man that goes around with a lot of detectives following him I don't know. And to intimidate the Mayor with a squad like a past potentate!"

When Dr. Potter showed a disposition to finish his testimony, Senator Thompson referred to the necessity of having an investigation of the entire charities subject, saying:

"It ought to be investigated fairly and thoroughly to see whether or not there is such a thing as might be called or denominated a charity trust; and to see whether or not they abuse the power that they have. The various organizations which have to do with the conduct of the business of charity should be investigated also to see whether or not they are abusing their powers or the trust reposed in them and in the expenditure of money the public gives for maintaining charity work.

"I don't want to criticise this Administration and I don't want to criticise the Police Department, because I have not sufficient facts to justify any criticism if I should make it. I think the city administration has tried to improve on the previous administrations as they have seen the light.

"The miscellaneous power to tap a telephone wire is suspicious, and I do not see how a Mayor can at one and the same time tap telephone wires and still be guilty of lighting the statue of the Goddess of Liberty that is down in the harbor."

Rr. Potter here interrupted to say that three of the policemen who tapped his wire had called on him to say they had no ill-feelings against him. He said he knew they simply wanted to hear his voice so as to be able to testify as to the exactness of the telephone talk they had heard. Father Farrell jumped up and said the same thing had occurred with him. Several detectives surrounded him as he came out of the jury room last Friday and engaged him in conversation so as to be able to identify his voice as the one they had heard over the telephone wire.

"This clumsy effort," he said, "only illustrates the clumsy manner and methods of the police, because they could easily have called up my house on the telephone and asked for me, and could have obtained the sound of my voice over the 'phone with exactness. However, they went at it in this clumsy way, and I thought that I ought to bring it before the public."

R. K. Weller, a newspaperman, went on the stand and testified that he had interviewed Father Farrell and Mgr. Dunn early in April and that they had "planted" conversations over the telephone to trap the police who were spying on them.

Squad Organized by Waldo.

At the afternoon session George Yunge, a detective sergeant in charge of the wiretapping squad, was the first witness. He said the squad was organized by former Commissioner Waldo and that he had been in charge of it for two years. Corporation Counsel Hardy objected to his testifying without his having the original copy of the conversations he had testified about before the Kings County Grand Jury. He was allowed to tell, however, of the tapping operations. He said the police had means of listening in on any wire on the entire system of the New York Telephone Company.

The witness said he always took orders from his immediate superiors and reported to them, besides making a regular report to Commissioner Woods. This report sets forth the time the wires were tapped and what was overheard. The headquarters of the squad is some distance from Police Headquarters, he said, and in reply to another question he said Commissioner Woods had never seen the place. He said he had four men under him, and that he had never listened in on any of the telephonic conversations under investigation.

Yunge said the Police Commissioner had to rely on the reports made to him for the accuracy of the conversations taken down. Each report, he said, shows the names of the men at work during a certain period of time, but not the name of the man who reports a particular conversation. These conversations are recorded in a book. The witness denied that he had refused to produce this book before the Strong Committee, but admitted declining to turn over a small memorandum book containing personal data. He said the squad never listens on a wire unless it has been ordered to do so.

"Do you listen continuously?" asked Mr. Moss.

"Yes, when we are there, during the business hours of a person whose wire had been tapped," was the reply.

"Do you hear every message that goes over the wire?"

"We try to."

Mr. Moss wanted to know how many of the 350 cases of tapped wires during the last eighteen months were poolroom cases. The witness said he could not tell, but did not think there were more than a dozen. There were several suspected disorderly houses and gambling places on the list also, he said.

"How do you take these conversations?" asked Mr. Moss.

"We sit around an ordinary table," the witness explained, "and each man has a slate and pencil. As soon as the wire is tapped we begin to listen in on the conversations. We do not write every word down, but only a few words and later fill out the sentence. If it is a long conversation a man borrows his neighbor's slate. We use the slate because it is the faster method. A pencil or pen will sometimes catch in the paper and words will be lost.

Record It on Slates.

The witness admitted they did not use shorthand and that they were not proficient at the typewriter. As soon as the slate is filled, the conversation is transcribed in full on paper and the same day typewritten out.

"This system was devised by your superiors?"

"Yes."

"And they never come in to see you?"

"No, we give them a report."

"Do they know that you skeletonize?"

"I don't know."

Mr. Moss asked the witness who first directed him to listen in on Dr. Potter's wire. He said the order came from Commissioner Woods, and the tap was put on on March 17. The Commissioner's orders were brief, he said, merely stating that he wanted information on the Potter wire. He said he didn't recognize Dr. Potter's voice at first, but later learned who it was. On March 24 the tap was put on Dean Potter's wire, which was a party line.

"Who gave you that order?"

"Deputy Commissioner Scull."

"What did he say?"

"His order was simply 'Cover that wire.'"

"Did you think you were covering a crime?"

"We always do when we tap a wire."

"Wasn't there another case involved?"

"Yes; that of the Hotel Irving."

Corporation Counsel Hardy interrupted to submit a letter from Mayor Mitchel regarding this wire. It was addressed to Senator Thompson, and read:

It has been drawn to my attention since I testified before your committee that an attempt was made to supervise the wire which ran into the apartments of Mr. Hebberd at the Hotel Irving, in addition to the supervision of the wires of the two Potters and of Father Farrell. This was done after it had been ascertained that Hebberd was in constant communication with the Potters, and the attempt lasted for but three days.

I did not testify as to this because it was not drawn to my attention until last evening, and while I am informed there was no result from such supervision and no conversations over this wire were taken, at the same time I have felt it better to state this to you lest a wrong inference be drawn.

Will you kindly insert this in your record as supplemental to my testimony on that detail?

Sergeant Yunge said he tapped the Hotel Irving's wire on March 27 and listened in for three days.

"And that isn't the only hotel whose wires you have listened in on?"

"No."

"Do you do that frequently?"

"Only when we try to get trace of a crime."

Mr. Moss then asked the witness if he had ever tapped a lawyer's telephone to get information regarding a client. The witness said this was done only in case the police were trying to find such a client. When Mr. Hardy objected to any other names being mentioned Mr. Moss scribbled several on a piece of paper and handed it to the witness. In each case the witness admitted that the person's wire had been tapped.

"If you heard a client make a confidential statement to his lawyers you wouldn't tell your superiors about it, would you?"

"I would not."

Sergeant Adolph Blaha was the next witness. He corroborated everything the previous witness had said regarding the method of tapping wires. He said if he heard a confidential message pass between a lawyer and a client he would put the matter up to Sergeant Yunge.

When the witness left the stand Senator Thompson said he was practically through with the wiretapping investigation, but would open it up again if it was necessary. He announced an adjournment until next Wednesday, when the committee will go back to its original line of investigation and take up the subway contracts.

In making public the confidential report of former Commissioner of Accounts Fosdick regarding the alleged collection of a $5,000 fund for Dr. Potter, Mayor Mitchel said he wanted to clear up certain statements that had been made regarding the late Mgr. McMahon. The report was dated Nov. 30, 1910, and set forth Mr. Fosdick's examination of several witnesses in the investigation he made of Dr. Potter, who was then Chief Examiner of the Bureau of Charitable Institutions of the Department of Finance. A check for $500 had been found, dated Jan. 21, 1907, signed by Father Fitzpatrick, Treasurer of the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin, and payable to his order. The voucher accompanying the check was indorsed as follows:

This amt. was our share (Mission) of a fund amt. (I understand) to $5,000, which was to be raised by institutions to take Rev. Dr. Potter out of his financial troubles. This check was cashed and amount given to Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, who saw that it reached the person for whom it was intended.
WM. A. C. DOUGHERTY.

Dougherty was bookkeeper of the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin and testified that he had made the entry on the voucher under instructions from Father Fitzpatrick. Father Fitzpatrick was subpoenaed and testified that Mgr. McMahon told him that there was a movement on foot to raise a fund to defray the expenses of the Supervisor of Charities, and that he would like to "make a present to Dr. Potter, as he was in financial straits at the time."

Father Fitzpatrick, the report stated, admitted he had delivered the cash to Mgr. McMahon with the understanding that the latter was to turn it over to Dr. Potter. Father Fitzpatrick also testified hat he never learned from Mgr. McMahon whether or not the money had actually been paid to Dr. Potter. The report went on to state that Mgr. McMahon, when examined, admitted receiving the $500 from Father Fitzpatrick, but stated that the money had not been paid to Dr. Potter, as the plan had been changed, and the money was used for other purposes. Mr. Fosdick's report then continued:

"In regard to the judgment claim of Austin Nichols against Dr. Potter, which Father Fitzpatrick was alleged to have purchased out of funds of his institution, Dr. Potter testified he knew nothing of this transaction until after Father Fitzpatrick had settled the claim. This claim, which was originally in the amount of $800 for groceries furnished to an institution with which Dr. Potter had formerly been connected, was sold to Father Fitzpatrick for $200. Dr. Potter had apparently never seen fit to reimburse Father Fitzpatrick, although he continued in the Finance Department for some time at a salary of $5,000 per annum."

10 MEAT DEALERS HELD FOR BRIBERY

Eight Health Inspectors Also Suspended for Passing Unfit Carcasses.

GOING ON FOR 20 YEARS

Accused Men, It Is Charged, Paid Out $40,000 a Year in Bribes.

Through the arrest yesterday of ten men engaged in the wholesale meat business in this city and the suspension of the Chief Veterinarian Inspector and seven Inspectors of the Health Department the authorities believe they have uncovered a system whereby diseased meat was being put on the market in defiance of law and with a total disregard of the health of millions of the poor of New York.

The concerted action of Dr. Haven Emerson, Health Commissioner, and Commissioner of Accounts Wallstein came after months of investigation during which bribes were given to investigators and step by step the working of the system of pernicious co-operation between packer and official made manifest. It is charged that the plot advanced so far that a bribe was given for the removal of an incorruptible inspector from his office of supervisor and the putting in his place of an investigator who was supposed to be amenable to bribes.

In the removal of the undesirable inspector the alleged collector for the investigators was to use his influence with a certain State Senator with whom he said he was on terms of familiarity.

The packers arrested are:

ROBERT PLAUT of Robert Plaut & Sons, of Johnson Avenue, Brooklyn.
SAMUEL PLAUT of the same firm.
ARTHUR PLAUT of the same firm.
HENRY PLAUT of S. & H. Plaut, of Johnson Avenue, Brooklyn.
SIMON PLAUT of the same firm.
ROBERT PLAUT of the same firm.
DAVID FEINBERG of Strauss, Schick & Feinberg, Johnson Avenue, Brooklyn.
AARON SCHICK of the same firm.
HERMAN BRAUNSCHWEIG of 321 Johnson Avenue, Brooklyn.

Warrants are out for two other men in the trade.

Inspectors Suspended.

The Inspectors suspended pending trial by the Health Board are Alfred E. Luks, Chief Veterinary Inspector; Inspectors John Kent, August Johnson, Peter Amsher, Morris Millman, William F. Braisted, Charles E. Caulfield, and Alexander Slawson.

At the same time it was made known that the Board of Health permits, under which the slaughter houses were operated, were revoked. The slaughter houses thus losing their permits were those of Robert Plaut & Sons, S. & H. Plaut, Strauss, Schick & Feinberg, H Braunschweig, and H. Bulnick, Dumont and Christopher Avenues, Brownsville.

The ten who were arrested were arraigned before Magistrate Dodd in the Bedford Avenue Court, Brooklyn, and each was held for further examination on charges of having violated Section 378 of the Penal Code, referring to the bribing of a public official. The penalty for the offense may be ten years in prison or a $5,000 fine. The case will be referred to District Attorney Lewis of Kings County today.

For twenty years or more, the authorities believe, the practice of bribing Inspectors to pass diseased meat into the market has been going on, the price ranging from $50 to $75 a week, according to services rendered. The graft amounted to between $35,000 and $40,000 a year.

An Investigation Made.

Early in February Health Commissioner Emerson became convinced that deception was being practiced in connection with meat inspection in several of the packing houses. He reported to Mayor Mitchel and the latter ordered the Commissioner of Accounts to begin an investigation. That investigation continued up to Thursday night when, it is charged, the last installment of a five-hundred-dollar bribe for having the Supervising Inspector removed was paid and the authorities decided that their chain of evidence warranted arrests. Four of the defendants were arrested when they called at the Municipal Building to see Commissioner Wallstein.

The chief work of investigation was carried on by Dr. Frederic W. Schoneweg, a veterinarian inspector. In the work he was assisted by William H. Boyle, a special investigator in the office of the Commissioner of Accounts, who posed as James Callahan, a Bronx expressman and local politician with a friend in the State Senate. Their work was supplemented by the efforts of Dr. Crittenden Ross, who was Supervising Inspector until he was ostensibly removed, and Dr. Max Danziger, both Inspectors of the Health Department. Boyle's part was to obtain corroborative evidence of bribery. He found that in some cases the bribe money was passed in ice boxes.

In a complaint against six of the prisoners, Dr. Schoneweg narrates his experiences at the plant of S. & H. Plaut. On Feb. 8, he said, he was working in the plant when Robert Plaut told him if he would "look out" for the firm the firm would "look out" for him. The packer, he said, offered $25 to $35 a week if he would not find "sleepers," which is the name in the trade for meat unfit for human consumption. Later in the same day the inspector got an offer of $40 if he would pass an unfit carcass.

The Bribes Variable.

The affidavit recites that another time the amount he was to receive depended upon how much of the unfit carcass he would pass. He wanted to know how much that would be and Robert Plaut, he said, told him: "See what you save of it first." Dr. Schoneweg also came into business relations with Strauss, Schick & Feinberg's establishment. On March 22 Plaut took him to the Strauss firm and after conferring with Philip Strauss the latter called him into the large refrigerator and said to him:

"It will be $75 or $100 here. Will that be all right?" and the Inspector said, "Well, I suppose so." Robert Plaut then said, "Shall I collect it for you?" Schoneweg replied that he had a man who managed his express business and collected money for him from H. Braunschweig, and that he would meet some one from Strauss, Schick & Feinberg's somewhere and introduce his collector.

This brought Boyle into the case as "collector." Strauss did not like the idea of a collector. A meeting was arranged for March 24 at the Ritz Restaurant, 10 Nevins Street, Brooklyn, with Feinberg.

The meat dealer, according to the affidavit, paid a bribe of $50. On March 31 both Boyle and Schoneweg met Feinberg. On that occasion Feinberg told Boyle that Schoneweg had been "very good," and had only condemned four head. He gave him $75 for Schoneweg, says the affidavit. Boyle swore Feinberg told him that if Schoneweg could get rid of Dr. Ross and Inspector Danziger he could give Schoneweg $85 a week as Supervising Inspector, and obtain for him besides $10 a week from each slaughter house over which he would have supervision.

There was another meeting in a restaurant uptown in Manhattan about a week ago, and at that meeting, it is charged, Feinberg gave Schoneweg $200.

In an affidavit Boyle said that Arthur Plaut told him that Schoneweg was "doing nicely," and Boyle asked, "How about that cow he condemned the other day?" Plaut replied, "My father buys one of those every once in a while purposely for the Inspector to take it."

In the office of the Commissioner of Accounts is $1,270, which is an exhibit in the case. Some of the bills are blood-stained and have fingerprints, which will be used in the trials.

It was said last night that at least one of those who are under arrest had confessed and given information to the authorities.

LANSING TO STAY IN OFFICE.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The State Department today denied and branded as the work of propagandists the story printed this morning to the effect that Secretary of State Lansing was contemplating resigning as a result of differences with President Wilson on matters of foreign policy. Secretary Lansing also personally denied the report, saying:

The denial issued by the State Department today charged that the story was circulated to create the impression that there are dissensions in the Cabinet which do not exist. In order to further disprove the report Secretary Lansing attended today's Cabinet meeting. He had been confined to his home here for about a week suffering from an attack of indigestion. The Secretary today said he was able to do a little work during his illness, the effects of which he still showed when he arrived at the White House for the Cabinet meeting.

The statement made by the State Department today was as follows:

"The story which appeared this morning to the effect that Mr. Lansing is about to resign as Secretary of State as a result of differences between the President and himself is totally without foundation. This story is part of a propaganda the deliberate purpose of which is to create an impression of dissension in the Government which does not exist.

"The story was first born last February or March, when the relations between the United States and Germany were somewhat strained. It was sent to Berlin by wireless in press dispatches. It was picked up in transit in an allied country and subsequently published there.

"In that way the State Department became cognizant of the story, and instructions were sent to Berlin to watch out for it. Apparently the persons responsible found out that we were prepared for the story, for it never was published in Germany. The directors of this propaganda have now taken advantage of Secretary Lansing's illness to put out the story again."

"JULIO ACOSTA,
"General.
"CERVANTES,
"Colonel."

"Signed at Serrianavade, April 10, 1916."

Las Cruces, an adobe town, about twenty-three miles north of Namiquipa, is one of the most hostile towns through which the American line of communication passes. Between this point and Namiquipa, a short distance north of this town, is what is known to the American soldiers as the Cruces canon, through which the trunk trains must pass on their way to the front and back. Ever since the soldiers first reached this place on the road, it has been considered extremely dangerous. It is so long and rugged that it is practically impossible to guard it well enough to insure the safety of the passing trains.

It is the belief among those familiar with the road here that Cervantes was on his way to this cañon with the intention of ambushing the first small force of Americans that passed. The road is constantly in such bad condition in this region that it has been necessary to keep a company of engineers at work on it regularly.

Captain Ernest Graves, ("Pott" Graves,) the one-time West Point football star, has been in charge of these men, and it is said that his organization has done a great deal toward breaking up Mexican interference with the American buzzer wire along the road. Mexicans, cutting the line, delayed receipt here of the report of the encounter.

ASSAILS AMERICAN 'PERFIDY.'

Mexican Government Paper Fears Election of Roosevelt.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, May 26.—A strong editorial in a Government paper today, denouncing the "perfidy" of the United States in its attitude against Central American countries, said:

"With the election of Roosevelt as President all Central American countries would be in danger."

The secrecy maintained by Government officials regarding the note sent to Washington by special messenger has caused a feeling here that conditions are serious. Sentiment against the United States Government for maintaining its troops in Mexico is increasing daily. Possible intervention is a topic generally discussed. Many alarming rumors are circulated daily, and a number of families are leaving for the border.

Government officials deny there is any danger of a break with the United States. They state that the international situation, while serious, yet is not irreparable, and they expect that Ambassador Arredondo they will reach a satisfactory settlement. General Carranza will not discuss these matters, as he states they are diplomatic secrets. Many Mexicans not identified with the Government have offered their services in case affairs arrive at the actual stage of intervention. All the stores here have sold their stocks of English flags, many people buying English flags to use in case of intervention.

The sailing of the Ward liner, due to leave Vera Cruz on Saturday has been canceled.

MEXICO CITY, May 26.—Foreign Minister Aguilar issued a statement today saying that, in spite of an agreement made by General Scott with General Obregon that no more American troops would cross the border, 400 soldiers of the United States had entered Mexican territory in pursuit of bandits near Boquillas. The statement says that these troops have now been withdrawn from Mexican soil.

The Government newspapers in their editorials today make savage attacks on the policy of the United States in Latin America, which they denounce as imperialistic and hypocritical. Colonel Roosevelt is charged with attempting to foment war, and the papers assert that President Wilson is unable to cope with this "campaign of the Republican Party."

TWO PACIFIC SHIPS SOLD TO JAPAN LINE

way there. They are cargo carriers of more than 13,000 tons each. Mr. Franklin said they were good ships. He was asked if the company proposed to sell them also.

"Every Ship Has a Price."

"No one can tell," he replied. "Every ship has a price."

Harold A. Sanderson, President of the International Mercantile Marine Company, and a British subject resident in England, spent last week in this city, primarily to present the British Government's suggestions regarding the reorganization of the company, which, though an American corporation, operates 75 per cent. of its tonnage under the British flag, and is bound by contract, made in 1902 with the British Government, to preserve the nationality of its British subsidiaries and British ships.

Plans for the reorganization were upset by Mr. Sanderson's suggestions, and Mr. Franklin was asked if the problems of reorganization had any relation to the sale of the steamers to the Japanese. He replied that there was no connection whatever between the two matters. He would not discuss the reorganization proceedings on the ground that they were entirely separate from the sale.

The American International Corporation, the $50,000,000 company organized to develop this country's foreign trade, bought all the ships and other property of the Pacific Mail which were not taken by the International Mercantile Marine, acting in conjunction with W. R. Grace & Co. The company has developed other ambitious plans for the extension of American shipping, and not long ago purchased in the open market a large stock interest in the International Mercantile Marine Company. That purchase is understood to have made more perplexing the task of reorganizing the Marine company. In response to a suggestion that a purchaser might have been found in the American International for the ships sold to the Japanese Mr. Franklin vouchsafed no reply.

Delivery of the Siberia and Korea will be made to the Japanese within two months. The China has already been turned over to its new owners.

that he had attended church regularly while he was poisoning his wife's relatives.

Hymn Singing Fooled Her.

"Miss Peck said that when she remembered how beautifully I had sung hymns in church while my wife's relatives were visiting us, she could not believe that I committed the crimes," Waite was quoted as saying by Dr. Diefendorf. "It was my real nature that appeared then," Waite said, according to the alienist.

Dr. Karpas said that Waite had told him he believed his soul and body were separated and that his soul dwelt in Egypt.

"He said he believed in the doctrine of reincarnation, and this had given him the belief in 'The Man From Egypt.'"

There was a good deal of testimony about Dr. Waite's literary tastes from both the alienists, though they made it clear that the defendant said he took an interest in great writers principally for the purpose of increasing his vocabulary and improving his social graces.

"He said he was very fond of Ibsen," said Dr. Karpas. "He liked Maeterlinck and Victor Hugo, and enjoyed Poe's poems because they were musical. He said he read Carlyle and Ruskin a good deal, mainly for their vocabularies. When I asked him about the books he owned, he admitted that the only ones he had were a medical library which he had bought for $45 for the purpose of making a show and which he had never read."

Dr. Karpas said that when Waite told him his bad self lived in Egypt, he asked Waite to tell him something about Egypt and he could mention nothing but "Caesar, Cleopatra, and the Pyramids."

Denies Faking Insanity.

After Waite, who took the stand again yesterday morning, had completed his story by saying that he might have killed his wife, if his other plans had been successful, Assistant District Attorney Brothers began to cross-examine him with the view of showing that Waite had displayed sanity in his efforts to commit his crimes so as to leave no traces and in his elaborate efforts to cover up the crime afterward. After several questions had been put concerning conversations which Waite failed to recall, Mr. Brothers asked:

"You were faking insanity in Bellevue Hospital, weren't you?"

"I did not fake insanity at any time," replied Waite.

"You faked insanity in the Tombs, did you not?"

"No."

"You read books on nervous diseases in the Tombs. You deliberately planned a false defense, did you not?"

"I did not." Waite added that he had read some medical magazines in the Tombs, but remembered reading no books.

"You don't remember this, yet you have a wonderful memory which goes back to events before your sixth birthday. Have you forgotten these recent events?"

"I don't remember the conversations you refer to."

Waite could recall nothing of his letter to Margaret Horton, in which he said that for her sake he would try to go to an institution instead of to "la chaise," and that he hoped to see her as a free man within a few years. He denied that he had told Mr. Brothers and Mr. Swann that "the man from Egypt" had killed Peck.

"Are you crazy?" he was asked.

"I think not."

"After you took Mr. Peck's life you could not sleep, could you?"

"I slept perfectly."

"You wanted to kill yourself," did you?"

"Yes."

"Why didn't you?"

"I tried hard enough."

"If you wanted to kill the Pecks why did you not shoot them?"

"I don't know."

"Have you ever been punished for any of the crimes which you have committed?"

Only a Sneak Thief.

"No."

"You began to believe that you were above the law and that you would never be punished for anything that you did? Was that it?"

"No. I don't know anything about it."

"You never committed a burglary or a highway robbery, did you?"

"No."

"You have never been anything but a sneak thief, have you?"

"That's all."

"You were a gambler?"

"Yes."

"You told persons that you played for high stakes, that you lost in the Peck case?"

"No."

"You planned the murder of the Pecks to win $2,000,000, didn't you?"

"Not that much. I did not know the amount."

"You and Margaret Horton were going to leave the country, were you not? Where were you going?"

"I don't know that we were even going away."

"Tell the jury, now, did you not picture yourself yesterday as worse than you really were?"

"No."

"Isn't that your defense?"

"No. I admitted my guilt."

"Haven't you been informed that if you made yourself out a madman some one on this jury might think you were crazy?"

Knew It Wrong to Steal.

Waite said he did not remember telling Dr. Karpas that every time he got into trouble he bluffed his way out. Justice Shearn interrupted the examination to ask Waite if he knew that it was wrong to steal, and got an affirmative reply.

"If you knew it was wrong to steal," Mr. Brothers asked, "did you know it was wrong to commit murder?"

"I don't remember."

"When you were a member of the Christian Endeavor Society you learned that it was wrong to take human life and against the laws of God?"

"I don't remember."

Waite answered the questions put to him very calmly, but seemed to feel injured at the abrupt tone of Mr. Brothers's questions. After finishing his long ordeal on the witness stand he took his seat wearily and sat most of the remainder of the day with his hands over his eyes and his elbows resting on the table in an attitude of physical exhaustion.

Waite had opposed taking the stand since the first day in court, when he found himself surrounded by unfriendly eyes. He was much hurt, according to the alienists, to find that his smile met no response in the courtroom. When Waite was asked by the alienists what he thought of his own personality he answered that he considered himself "attractive and charming," and that every one he met liked him.

"He said he did not want to take the witness stand," said Dr. Diefendorf, "because he was very fond of Mrs. Horton, and she would be in court and would lose confidence in him after hearing him tell his story. He added that his pride would be too much hurt to tell his story with the Pecks looking on, especially Percy Peck, whom he had always disliked. He said he thought Percy Peck would enjoy seeing him humiliated."

On Stand for Duty's Sake.

Dr. Diefendorf said he argued that it was Waite's duty to his family to take the stand, and that he ought to take his counsel's advice. "Oh, very well, I will, then," he said Waite replied.

Dr. Diefendorf said he mentioned this as an instance to prove that Waite was weak-willed. The alienist said the mind was divided into three parts, the intellect, the will, and the emotional or moral sense. Waite, he said, like most "moral idiots," was totally lacking in the emotional or moral side of his mind and was defective in the other two.

One of the few additions to the case against Waite which seemed to register with the jury was the statement of Dr. Diefendorf that Waite had confessed to the act of a ghoul.

"He told me," said the alienist, "that he had taken $8 from the clothes of Mr. Peck immediately after his death."

Waite told the alienist that he sometimes had something like fits of remorse. Once he took to reading the Bible, after being caught stealing at Ann Arbor, but it failed, he said, to keep his from making advances to women of easy morals. Waite added: "I am afraid it would take a good deal of remaking to reform me."

"What is your principal pleasure?" was one of the alienist's questions.

"Life is a hollow, miserable shell," was the reply.

A hint of Waite's grandiose plans for the future after he had obtained his riches was given by the alienist.

"He told me," said Dr. Diefendorf, "that he intended to buy an estate a little way up the Hudson from New York, that he had conferred with a real estate agency about it, and that he had made a trip and looked over several places that he thought he might want."

Amazingly Egotistical.

Dr. Diefendorf said he found Waite "amazingly egotistical," and utterly devoid of emotion or feelings. The doctor continued:

"When I talked to him he smiled gladly over the most serious matters. He showed no signs of sorrow and none of shame in telling of what he had done and smiled easily through it all. He was egotistical in his association of ideas, which centred continually on himself, his conversation always running into side remarks, which I regarded as bragging and vain. I often had to ask questions to bring him back to the subject."

Dr. Karpas said he found Waite writing poetry in prison. One of the things the prisoner said was that he loved nature in all its forms of beauty, that watering flowers "so that May should not die" was one of his chief amusements and that on the voyage from South Africa to this country he had paced the deck looking at the stars and weeping. Dr. Karpas quoted him as saying:

"Mrs. Waite was not soulful. She was not romantic. She did not satisfy me. I wanted her money and expected to accomplish great things with it. I have always been for myself, and never cared for others. If I wanted money, I got it. I never gave a thought of others and lived entirely for myself. I am a coward and whenever I have been in a hole I took the easiest way out. My life consists of lying, cheating, stealing and killing. My personality was that of a gentleman and I went in for music, art and poetry, as far as I thought it was required by my vocation."

Waite told Dr. Karpas that he did not love Mrs. Horton and that his intimacy with her would probably have been short-lived. He added that his relations with her had been purely platonic.

Mr. Deuel took thirty-three minutes to read a hypothetical question to the alienists. Both answered that they thought Waite was suffering from an unsound mind and did not know the nature of his act when he murdered Mr. Peck. Both alienists on cross-examination said emphatically that they thought Waite ought to go to an insane asylum for life.

"Don't you think that, if he goes to an asylum, he'll be right out again?" asked Mr. Brothers of Dr. Karpas.

"That would be the Superintendent's fault if he did," said Dr. Karpas.

"What? Don't you know what writs of habeas corpus can do?"

"I don't think they would help this defendant."

"Don't you think that he could convince any jury and Judge that he is sane?"

"No."

"Don't you consider him a clever man?"

"No, I consider him stupid, very stupid."

"Is he an imbecile?"

"No, he is not an imbecile in the ordinary sense. He is a moral imbecile."

"Now, if you were the Superintendent of an insane asylum, you could not keep him overnight, could you?"

"Yes, Sir, I could."

"Do moral imbeciles have good memories?"

"Yes."

"Have they good business ability?"

"Yes, to a certain extent."

"Can moral imbeciles earn $500 a month at dentistry?"

"They might."

"Can they appear in all respects like ordinary men?"

"Yes, they can appear so."

Dr. Karpas admitted that most criminals that he had examined had no moral sense. He denied that Waite had shown cleverness in trying to bribe the embalmer to put arsenic into the embalming fluid to cover up the murder of Mr. Peck and insisted that it would have been better judgment if he had confessed in the first place. He allowed Waite a certain amount of mental ability in perpetrating his crimes, but held that it was unaccompanied by any appreciation of the moral quality of his deeds.

Mr. Brothers led Dr. Karpas to say that one of the strongest reasons for believing that Waite was insane was the fact that, since he was in comfortable circumstances, he acted without adequate motive when he killed Dr. Peck in order to get $500,000. Dr. Karpas was led to repeat over and over that the motive was one of the essential things to consider in respect to the mental state.

Dr. Diefendorf, who followed him on the stand, took exactly the opposite position on this point, saying that motive had nothing or very little to do with the queston of the mental state shown in a man's acts.

"Do you believe that Waite's reading the Bible after stealing showed a knowledge that the act was wrong?"

"Yes."

"Do you believe that the fact that Waite has been reading the Bible in the Tombs after murdering John Peck shows that he knew that act to be wrong?"

"It shows that he has an insane knowledge of the fact."

Dr. Diefendorf admitted that the elaborate precautions taken by Waite before and after the murder to conceal his hand in it showed that he knew something about what he was doing, but the alienist insisted that Waite had only an insane grasp of the situation.

The trial will continue this morning at 10 o'clock.

German Agent, Indicted Again, May Be Sent Here by England.

Franz Rintelen, the German agent, who came to the United States to instigate strikes in American munitions works, and is alleged to have endeavored to bring about American intervention in Mexico, on the theory that such intervention would put an end to the shipment of war munitions to the Allies, may be extradited to this country by the British, in whose hands he is now a prisoner of war.

Rintelen is already under indictment for his activities in endeavoring to instigate strikes and yesterday a second indictment charging forgery in his alleged attempt fraudulently to obtain an American passport was returned by the Federal Grand Jury.

LARGEST GIFT OF THE KIND

Hoover of Commission for Relief in Belgium to be in Charge of the Food Distribution.

The Rockefeller Foundation announced last night the appropriation of $1,000,000 to be applied to the relief of the war sufferers in Serbia, Poland, Montenegro, and Albania. This is the largest single donation yet made in this country for relief work in Europe since the outbreak of the European war. Under a proposed agreement drawn up with the proper authorities in Germany and the other belligerent countries, whereby a neutral commission, with H. C. Hoover of the Commission for Relief in Belgium as its directing head, will be empowered to undertake the relief of sufferers in the countries named. The $1,000,000 appropriation, it was announced, would be immediately available.

The announcement of the Rockefeller Foundation read as follows:

"The Rockefeller Foundation has appropriated $1,000,000 for relief in Poland, Serbia, Montenegro, and Albania. This sum is to be expended at the discretion of the Executive Committee whenever satisfactory arrangements for the importation of relief supplies can be effected. The appropriation was made in the hope that arrangements for its effective expenditure in the countries mentioned might soon be consummated, although assurances of the successful outcome of negotiations to this end have not yet been received.

"A year ago the War Relief Commission of the Rockefeller Foundation drew up a tentative plan for the organization of a neutral commission for relief in Poland, under which certain guarantees were provided by the German and Austrian Governments for the inviolability of any food supplies imported into Poland through Germany or Austria and destined for the relief of the civil population. The Rockefeller Foundation guaranteed the administrative expenses of the neutral commission to the amount of $120,000. This plan failed, owing to the impracticability of importing food from abroad.

"A few months ago the German Government invited one of the members of the War Relief Commission of the Rockefeller Foundation, Frederic C. Walcott, to visit Poland with a representative of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, in order that fresh and accurate information might be secured as to conditions of destitution and that new measures of relief might be devised. The result of this visit was that a plan was again drawn up containing certain arrangements and guarantees whereby food might be imported into Germany from abroad, transported to Poland, and distributed among the civil population under the protection, supervision, and active management of a neutral commission directed by Herbert C. Hoover.

Terms of the Plan.

"The terms of this plan may be summarized as follows:

1. A neutral commission to be organized under the direction of Herbert C. Hoover, the head of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, and to carry on its operations according to the methods now obtaining in Belgium and Northern France.
2. Germany to contribute 15,000,000 marks a month for the purchase and importation of food supplies.
3. Suitable guarantees to be furnished regarding the inviolability of food supplies while in transit through Germany into Poland, where the distribution is to be made through the Polish local committees under the supervision of the American representatives.
4. Importations of food by the neutral commission to be confirmed to the populations of Warsaw, Lodz, Schenzochow, Vilna, Kovno, Biala, and Ettap, (from 3,500,000 to 4,000,000 persons in and about these cities.) Germany to provide a partial ration for these populations, as well as to supply the needs of all other parts of the occupied territory.
5. Railroad transportation from Danzig, the port of importation, to the German Polish frontier at half rate, and thence without charge to the points of destination in Poland.
6. Ocean transportation of supplies to be provided by German ships flying a neutral flag and manned and controlled by neutrals.

"With this tentative agreement in his possession Mr. Walcott proceeded to London and made every effort, through the good offices of Ambassador Page and in co-operation with Mr. Hoover, to commend the plan to the favorable consideration of the British Government and its allies. As a result of these efforts, the British Government delivered to the American Ambassador on May 11 a memorandum setting forth the terms and conditions upon which the blockade of German ports would be relaxed to the extent of permitting imports of relief supplies through a German port.

"This memorandum stated that the consent of the British Government to the proposed plan of relief would be given only upon certain additional conditions, among which the most significant were the following:

1. The system of relief in Poland to be applied to the occupied territory as a whole. Any surplus of local food products in southern Poland to be employed exclusively for the provisioning of northern Poland.
2. The constabulary in the occupied territory not to be permitted to requisition or purchase food imported by the commission.
3. No food supplies to be exported from Poland unless in the case of an excess of potatoes over and above the needs of the entire occupied territory as certified by the neutral commission.
4. The German and Austro-Hungarian Governments to undertake as part of the present arrangement to supply and care for the populations of Serbia, Albania, and Montenegro.

Great Distress in Poland.

"The next step to be taken was to ascertain whether the Central Powers would agree to the additional conditions imposed by Great Britain on behalf of the allied Governments, and negotiations to this end are now going on.

"The appropriation of $1,000,000 by the Rockefeller Foundation is made at this time in order that prompt advantage may be taken of a favorable termination of the negotiations, so that the stream of food may begin to pour into Poland with the least possible delay. At the same time, under the terms proposed, the effective relief of Serbia and Montenegro and Albania would become possible.

"The needs of a large part of the inhabitants of Poland are now being met by local supplies of potatoes and by the importation of limited quantities of other provisions from Germany, but it is estimated that about three and a half million people in the eastern portion of Russian Poland and that part of western Russia now occupied by the German armies have no such resources to depend upon, and are in a state of actual starvation. The mortality has already assumed fearful proportions, especially among the youngest and oldest elements of the population. To the ravages of hunger are added those of diseases, which inevitably accompany the extremes of physical exhaustion. The bones of hundreds of thousands of men, women, and children, made homeless by the destruction incident to the retreat of the Russian armies at the time of the great German advance, lined the main highways which lead eastward into Russia.

Imported Food Only Hope.

"While the money that has hitherto been raised for Poland has afforded relief to many refugees who escaped from the occupied region, the area to be relieved under the proposed plan has been practically inaccessible, and apparently the only hope of the millions in that area now lies in the importation of food from abroad.

"It is understood that in addition to the million dollars just appropriated by the Rockefeller Foundation, a large amount of money raised by Polish relief agencies in different countries is held ready to be applied to the importation of relief supplies under the proposed agreement. There is much reason to hope that if the news should be received that the belligerent Governments had come to an agreement permitting the importation of food, the response from the whole world, stimulated by graphic and reliable accounts of the tragedy that has overwhelmed Poland and her people during the last two years, would equal or surpass anything that has yet been done since the war began for the relief of suffering noncombatants.

"Prompt notice will be given to the public upon the receipt of any information indicating the kinds of relief supplies that will be accepted for the relief of Poland and any new channels through which aid may be given."

The American Armenian and Syrian Relief Committee in a report given out yesterday tells of a gift of $25,000 made by the Rockefeller Foundation to the committee for relief work in Armenia and Syria. The Foundation has also contributed in the past hundreds of thousands of dollars to relief activities in Belgium, northern France, the Near East and other parts of the war zone.

SPRAGUE WON'T AID T. R.

Can't Do So, He Says, While Representing Fellow-Engineers—Edison Will.

Frank J. Sprague of the Naval Consulting Board has declined to become a member of the Advisory Committee of the Roosevelt Nonpartisan League. An invitation was extended to Mr. Sprague a few days ago to become a member of the committee and he replied as follows to Thomas C. Desmond, Secretary of the league, yesterday:

Thomas C. Desmond, Esq., Treasurer Roosevelt Non-partisan League, 12 Vanderbilt Avenue, New York.

Dear Sir.—I beg to acknowledge your letter of May 21 asking me to become a member of the Advisory Committee of the league and to take active steps in promoting the principles for which the league stands, as well as the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt as the representative of those principles.

While appreciating the honor of your invitation, and likewise the fact that no man, Republican or Democrat, should be elected President of the United States unless he can subscribe whole-heartedly to the views so well enunciated by Mr. Roosevelt in his Detroit address, it is at present quite impossible for me to take any personal active part either for or against any particular candidate.

As you are probably aware, I am a member of the Naval Consulting Board, and as such am one of two elected representatives of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, a national body comprising several thousand men of every shade of political opinion.

This board was created by the present Administration and through its efforts will probably receive Congressional sanction.

It is actively concerned in promoting measures for preparedness, as for example the creation of a research laboratory and experimental station and the mobilization of a knowledge of industrial facilities. Whatever the political leanings of the individual members of the board, so long as they remain such their duty is to loyally work for its highest success and not to weaken its influence by venturing into the political field.

Very truly yours,
F. J. SPRAGUE.

Thomas A. Edison, who is also a member of the Naval Consulting Board, recently accepted an invitation to go on the Roosevelt Nonpartisan Leagues's Advisory Committee.

THIS WELFARE WORK SHOWS GOOD PROFIT

BOYS FITTED TO THEIR JOBS

"Hungry Hollow" Changed to "Lincoln Place" to Suit the Aspirations of Its Residents.

When Clarence H. Howard, President of the Commonwealth Steel Company of St. Louis, conceived the idea of inaugurating welfare work among the employes at the steel plant ten years ago he laid the foundation for what has since grown to be one of the most successful co-operative schemes in this country. The Good Fellowship Club of the Commonwealth Steel Company, with its more than 1,000 earnest members, its splendid new clubhouse, and its indomitable spirit of "get together," has shown that employer and employe need only to be fully informed of each other's problems to insure avoidance of disputes.

When the present management came into control of the steel company about the first thing President Howard did was to inquire about the young men in the plant. He wished to know whether they liked the work and whether they were in the right places in the shops to work out their ambitions. The young men were at first a bit bashful in the presence of "the big boss," but as soon as they found that he was talking with them and not at them the young fellows became quite confidential. As a result of his information Mr. Howard formed the Good Fellowship Club, and at once started a night school to complete the education of employes who had been forced to go to work young.

Volunteer instructors from the drafting rooms gave lessons in drawing and mathematics. Later the attendance grew and the company hired experts to teach. It was found, however, that the young men, after a hard day's work, were fatigued and could not get the full benefit of the courses. Finally a day school was established, and every young man in the plant not yet twenty-two years old was put into the school one morning or one afternoon each week, during which time he was paid as though he were working for the company and not for himself. There are now about 120 men getting advantage of the school and the results are said to have been beyond expectations.

There is a bit of real Americanism in the fact that the only requirement to enroll for the courses is the ability to read and write the English language. In addition to the technical branch of the school a complete course in commerce is given for the clerical force. Employes are graduated after a course of four years.

About 35 per cent. of the Commonwealth employes are foreigners and the problem of how to get into intimate touch with them was difficult, as the men were suspicious of the company's intentions. In an attempt to solve the question Miss Edna Haas, an expert in welfare work, was employed. Miss Haas went to board with a family in the foreign settlement known as "Hungry Hollow," a corruption of Hungary Hollow. She organized educational meetings and taught the people that the true American spirit was co-operation and not antagonism. A short time ago a committee of foreigners went to officials of the steel company and said that "Hungry Hollow" didn't seem to fit their neighborhood any longer; they thought that "Lincoln Place" was more in keeping with their new ideals. Lately a school for foreigners has been established with all academic subjects in the course. Special stress, however, is laid upon instruction in methods for safety while at work.

One thing that has pleased the men is the method of employ and discharge in operation at the plant. When a man makes application for employment he is rigidly examined as to his ability. This is done to protect the men already at work and to provide that they shall not have to bear the burden of working with men not as skillful as themselves. If the applicant proves his fitness he is examined by a physician, and if his health is good he is hired. This medical examination works against the introduction of diseases to other workmen. No man is ever "fired." If complaint is made about him the charges are laid before a committee and the continued employment or discharge of the man rests solely upon the committee's decision.

In order to bring to the men realization that their own prosperity depends upon the manner of service they give, a prize system has been put into effect. Under the system the entire administrative force of a shop receives a percentage of their monthly salaries, if the shop record in efficiency, safety, and production justifies it. This has aroused a joint interest, and the workers have come to feel that they are, in fact, partners in their employer's success.

The question of safety received attention in 1912 when the Commonwealth Company installed a well-equipped laboratory, with a surgeon in constant attendance, at the plant. To impress the importance of care, lectures on safety are given frequently. The company's desire to have the worker united with the officials in all matters of mutual interest is further evidenced in the safety work. Boxes have been put in all over the plant, and employes drop suggestions into them. For the best suggestions a monthly prize of $10 is awarded. The work has met with remarkable success, and last year there were only three minor accidents due to negligence.

The Board of Governors of the Fellowship Club—all workmen—some time ago came to the conclusion that the plant needed a restaurant. They referred the matter to the company, and the Fellowship Restaurant was the result. In the restaurant, which, with its sunshine and openness, gives grateful change to the men who have been in the turmoil of the shops, plain home cooking and inexpensiveness are the rule. The average cost of a meal, according to statistics compiled by the company, is 17 cents. All sorts of vegetables are supplied in generous portions at 3 cents a serving. Another reason why the Commonwealth men are not worrying about the high cost of living is that any meat with all the trimmings can be had in the restaurant for 12 cents a portion.

Since its establishment the restaurant has served 1,200 meals a day. Quick service is given, and even when the noon hour rush is at its greatest the men are seated and served in exactly six minutes. Music, occasionally by the employes' band, goes with all the meals.

Separate from, but adjoining the restaurant, is a lunchroom, where the same type of equipment as is in the main dining room has been installed. Here the man who prefers to carry his own lunch is provided for, and on gas plates he may heat beverages.

In connection with the work of the welfare the Good Fellowship Club issues "every little while" a periodical called The Commonwealther, which chronicles all the happenings of the plant. There aren't any prosy, better-than-thou editorials in The Commonwealther. But there are stories about the baseball club, the glee club, and intimate personal notes that show how deeply and earnestly the workers have entered into the latest phase of the relations between labor and capital.

While President Wilson was on his trip through the West he inspected the Commonwealth plant and was impressed by the spirit of the men. Later he wrote a letter to President Howard in which he expressed his appreciation. Down in an obscure corner of the latest issue of The Commonwealther there appeared a brief notice to the effect that all employes except officials would get a 10 per cent. increase on the next pay day. Evidently the "make-up man" of the little sheet thought the notice was of such common occurrence that the best it deserved was an inch below the many inches of a story about the changes of the baseball team.

President Howard is now in New York in connection with the tenth annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute, which will close today at the Waldorf-Astoria. He did not care to talk about the welfare work at his plant yesterday, but expressed himself as well pleased with the results.

ROOSEVELT AND LUSITANIA.

Story of What He Says He Would Have Done to Protect the Liner.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 26.—The Chicago Herald will print this editorial in its edition tomorrow:

"Here is a Roosevelt story that has come to The Herald, which may or not be true:

"Late in April, after delivering a speech in Washington, Colonel Roosevelt when asked what he would have done after the Lusitania was blown up by the Germans, replied:

"'I would have done nothing after. When the German Embassy advised Americans in an advertisement not to sail I would have advised the Secretary of State to appoint a representative to sail on the Lusitania and would have cabled the Kaiser personally that the Lusitania was under American protection. Then it would not have been blown up.'"

Men's Pay for German Women.

Women replacing men in German breweries are entitled to all the benefits of the wage agreements made between the employers and the workers and must receive the same pay for the same work, according to a decision of the Industrial Court in Frankfort-on-the-Main in the case of a complaint made by a woman brewery employe against a brewery in that city. German newspapers reporting this decision lay considerable stress upon the importance of the woman's victory as a precedent for future cases of a similar nature sure to occur in consequence of the widespread employment of women in industry due to the war.

WASHINGTON ARCH GETS HEROIC GROUP

FAME AND VALOR FIGURES

West Pedestal to be Occupied by Another Statue of Washington When $8,200 More Is Subscribed.

William Rhinelander Stewart of 31 Nassau Street, Chairman of the Washington Arch Committee, announced yesterday that a heroic figure of George Washington, in the uniform of General in Chief of the Continental Army, would be placed on the easterly pedestal at the base of the arch today. At the back of the pedestal two allegorical figures, Fame and Valor, were placed in position yesterday. Through an accident a small piece was broken off the right-hand top corner, which will have to be replaced after the statue is on the pedestal.

The Washington Arch was constructed to commemorate the centennial of the inauguration of Washington as President, which took place in this city on April 30, 1899, and was completed on May 4, 1895, when it was turned over to Mayor Strong by William R. Stewart, then Treasurer of the committee. The arch was designed by Stanford White, who gave his services without charge.

Two pedestals on the easterly and westerly sides of the base of the arch were left vacant, to be filled later with groups of statuary. The cost of the arch as it now stands was $133,577.75, and was subscribed by private citizens. Under Mr. Stewart's Chairmanship the committee was reorganized to provide for the groups of marble for the vacant pedestals.

The easterly group, which is now to adorn the front of the arch, was executed by Herman A. MacNeil, who was two years at work on his models, and consists of seven pieces of marble. The largest, which is the figure of Washington, was cut from a single block, weighing thirty-four tons when it was quarried and delivered to the yards of Piccirilli Brothers, at 142d Street. The carved figure weighs sixteen tons and is 12 feet 8 inches high.

Said Mr. MacNeil, the sculptor, yesterday:

"The Washington Arch pedestals are about to be occupied by Washington as General and Washington as President. The former is already carved in marble and represents Washington as General in Chief of the Continental Army, alert, and with hands resting on his sword, intently waching the manoeuvres of his army. He is garbed with a cloak thrown over his Continental uniform and cockade hat.

The massive character of the arch and pedestals calls for a vigorous, solid mass in the sculpture. As a transition both in idea and treatment between the portrait statue and the pier behind it, two standing figures in relief are decoratively arranged beyond the Washington and set into the pier of the arch. These figures typify Fame and Valor and are bearing emblems appropriate to their character, as well as supporting the shield, encircled by a wreath, which forms a background to the head of Washington himself."

"The total cost of the two groups of marble figures for the Washington Arch," Mr. Stewart said yesterday, "will be $32,000, of which $23,800 has been subscribed. The second group, typifying Washington as President, will be erected as soon as the balance of $8,200 is obtained."

Jacob H. Schiff is the Treasurer of the Washington Arch Committee and Clarence W. Bowen, Secretary. Among the members are George F. Baker, Eugene Delano, J. Pierpont Morgan, Arthur Curtis James, V. Everit Macy, Isaac N. Seligman, Lispenard Stewart, Frederick W. Whitridge, and Archer M. Huntington.

JUDGE GARY PLEADS FOR HIGHER TARIFF

Tells Iron and Steel Institute War Orders Alone Have Saved the Industry.

FAVORS ADEQUATE DEFENSE

E. N. Hurley of Federal Trade Board Sees No Danger in Foreign Competition.

The tenth general meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute came to a close last night with a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria, which was attended by more than 700 of the members and their friends. It was the largest gathering ever called out by an annual meeting of the institute, many of the visitors from distant points taking advantage of the opportunity to spend Memorial Day in New York. At the morning session Judge Gary pleaded for an adequate tariff.

The feature of the dinner was the address by Edward N. Hurley, Vice Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, on "Co-operation and Efficiency in Developing Our Foreign Trade." At its conclusion Judge Gary, who presided, brought a great outburst of applause from the diners by stating that if co-operation for foreign trade was as desirable as Mr. Hurley had called it, it was just as desirable in the domestic trade. Judge Gary said that there had never been a Gary dinner which had not been followed by the transmission to the proper authorities at Washington of a truthful account of all that had been done there.

Jacob Lowenstein, engineer with the American Bridge Company, delivered an illustrated lecture on the $35,000,000 connection which will make it possible for passengers to go from Boston to Washington without leaving their cars. Charles M. Schwab, Chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation; J. G. Butler, Jr., of Youngstown, and other leaders in the steel industry, followed with brief remarks in a lighter vein.

A telegram to Judge Gary from Elliott W. Major, Governor of St. Louis, extending a cordial invitation to the institute to hold its October meeting in St. Louis, was accepted. The members will be guests of the Business Men's League of that city. Clarence H. Howard, President of the Commonwealth Steel Company, is President of the league.

At the speaker's table last night there were seated, among others, James A. Burden, J. G. Butler, Jr., James A. Campbell, William H. Childs, W. H. Donner, E. C. Felton, E. H. Gary, James Gayley, J. H. Hoyt, E. N. Hurley, Willis L. King, Samuel Mather, George W. Perkins, William A. Rogers, C. M. Schwab, Powell Stackhouse and John A. Topping. It was said to be the first meeting of the institute ever addressed by an outsider, and Judge Gary characterized the appearance on the platform with steel men of a representative of the Federal Government as an epochal event in the business relationship of American manufacturers.

At the Waldorf-Astoria in the morning Judge Gary spoke on a number of pressing national questions, and it was not till near the end of his remarks that he touched directly on the steel business, the prosperity of which, he said, had never equaled that now being enjoyed.

Judge Gary said that public sentiment, which rules this country, is turning away from the demagogue and the leadership of men who have achieved prominence by attacking successful business. "Business interests, if and when deserving, may expect hereafter to receive due consideration and fair treatment by the public," he said. He followed this with a warning as to what may happen if a proper protective tariff is not enforced:

"From the time the present tariff laws came into force, in October, 1913, until some time after the war was started the effect upon our business was very bad," he said. "It was almost desperate with many. The prices of imported goods dumped into our markets, though not large in volume as to some items, were so low that we were compelled to put our prices down to about cost, and in some instances below. Many were operating at a loss. We were going from bad to worse. Except for the war orders, wages would necessarily have been materially reduced, and even then many employers would have had to suspend. We know by sad experience that unless our tariff laws are changed so as to protect our business and place us on a parity with our foreign competitors, the large majority of producers will suffer, that business will be depressed, that the number of idle mills and cars and men will be increased, and that wages will be lowered. We have seen these conditions before and there is reason to fear that they may be worse than ever unless our tariff laws are improved."

On the matter of adequate preparedness for the United States Judge Gary had this to say:

"It is not certain that there is a universal demand throughout this country for complete military preparation proportioned to its population and wealth; but it is certain that there are large and increasing numbers who are awake to the necessities of prompt, diligent and persistent efforts in this direction; and as the subject is discussed and considered and it is fully comprehended that the only purpose of those who are most emphatic in their insistence that there must be no delay in completing a sufficient military strength on land and sea is to secure peace, there will be little opposition to the measures proposed for the accomplishment of these objects.

"The cost of providing and maintaining a sufficient army and navy will be large, but small in comparison with the cost of war if one should be forced upon us because of a state of unpreparedness. When we read that the money expended for war purposes by a single European belligerent nation amounts to $25,000,000 per day, it is seen that any estimate of the cost of military preparation and maintenance is insignificant in comparison. As a mere matter of economy it is quite probable there would be saved billions of dollars by expending hundreds of thousands for military purposes. Withholding appropriations needed for purposes of preparing and keeping prepared for defense would be a false economy. It would be comparable to a refusal to make the necessary outlay for a good and sufficient lock to the doors of a house containing valuables and located in a burglar-infested district, or one that might be so infested by reason of the fact that protection was insufficient. Besides, if the United States is to assume and maintain the important position among nations that has been thrust upon her, she must be possessed of the same elements of power and strength that others have. She must be prepared to protect her commerce on the seas, which, let us hope, may equal that of any other single country. She must be ready to support other nations in the insistence that the ports of all foreign friendly nations shall remain free and open to all. And even more important to consider, we would be able to exert a powerful influence in aiding, and even compelling, international peace."

The speaker concluded with a brief statement as to conditions in the steel trade:

"The steel industry is good, better than ever before," Judge Gary said. "There have recently been publications to the effect that there is a falling off in new orders, and this may be true to a slight extent, but the daily bookings generally are larger in volume than the total producing capacity, and as the unfinished orders on hand are sufficient to keep the mills busy for the remainder of this calendar year and a large portion of 1917, there is not much, if any, cause for concern on the part of manufacturers for the next twelve months, at least. We could hope that we had been permitted to continue co-operation on a basis that would have influenced greater stability in prices, higher in times of depression, and lower in times of great activity, for it would have been satisfactory and beneficial to both producer and consumer and to their employes; but circumstances over which we had no control brought about a change in this particular. Public sentiment may bring about a restoration of the former and better methods. Who can tell? We know, at least, that conditions in our industry are infinitely better than they were fifteen years ago or more."

Edward N. Hurley, Vice Chairman of the new Federal Trade Commission, delivered the principal address at the annual dinner of the institute, speaking at length on "Co-operation and Efficiency in Developing Our Foreign Trade." He said, in part:

"European iron and steel producers have repeatedly called attention to the fact that their system of co-operation has enabled them to prevent or, at least, tide over periods of business depression and industrial crisis. I believe that not merely in natural resources but in management and organization the American iron and steel industry is in a position to meet the severest competition of its foreign competitors, and in the end to conquer the iron and steel markets of the world.

"Unfortunately, our business men and our Government have been losing valuable time during the last fifteen years in trying to settle our economic and business problems, not by co-operation, not by any scientific method which will bring about results beneficial to our people as a whole, but by resorting to the courts. I know business has been sick, and business has undoubtedly been in a large measure to blame for its illness, but instead of sending for a doctor who could prescribe a remedy that would give practical and permanent relief, the Government sent for lawyers, and you know the result.

"We are talking a great deal these days about mobilizing our industries and co-operating for industrial preparedness. We have been floundering about for many years with no definite plan; in fact, the first step has hardly been taken toward solving our industrial problems and toward attaining the result which we all know is absolutely necessary. Co-operation requires the interest and good-will of both sides. Business men are anxious to co-operate with our Government. It is now the duty of the Government to lend its active constructive aid, and it is the earnest desire of the Federal Trade Commission to do everything in its power to help foster American industries.

"The question of giving to our workmen continuous employment so that they may average longer periods of prosperity can be solved and other plans for their welfare can be worked out through trade associations. As we have grown in manufacturing capacity we have come to realize that our employes are one of the most important parts of a successful establishment. That management is successful which is not only efficient in working out economies in production, but which also has the real interests of its employes at heart and which is anxious to have as many of its employes stockholders as possible, and which also realizes that without the hearty co-operation and enthusiasm of its men the best results cannot be obtained.

"So rapid has been the expansion of American business during the last year that the public are unable to realize the vast advantage it will be to the nation as a whole. This business expansion is placing the United States in the forefront among exporting nations and giving it control of the financing and producing forces of the world which other nations have spent many decades in building up. This prosperity is an advantage not merely to those businesses which are benefiting directly, but to the great masses of the American people who are employed in these industries or who benefit indirectly by everything which increases national prosperity.

"The Federal Trade Commission does not believe that Congress intended by the anti-trust laws to prevent Americans from co-operating in export trade for the purpose of competing effectively with foreigners, where such co-operation does not restrain trade within the United States and where no attempt is made to hinder American competitors from securing their due share of the trade. By its investigation the commission has established the fact that doubt as to the application of the anti-trust laws to export trade now prevents concerted action by American business men in export trade, even among producers of noncompeting goods.

PRESBYTERIANS FAIL TO VOTE ON SUFFRAGE

Assembly, Before Adjourning, Declines to Go on Record on Woman Question.

NEXT MEETING AT DALLAS

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY N. J., May 26.—The one hundred and eighteenth General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, which began its sessions here on May 18, adjourned this evening after voting to meet on May 17, 1917, in Dallas, Texas. The committee appointed to consider invitations from various cities recommended that St. Louis be selected, but for the first time since the opening of the assembly the Commissioners overrode the decision of a committee.

A. C. Biggery of the Presbytery of Dallas won for his side when he told the Commissioners that if they came to Dallas they would make their headquarters in a new hotel large enough to accommodate every member of the assembly and including under its roof an auditorium more than sufficient in size for the meetings of the assembly. The fame of St. Louis for its beer seemed to turn many Commissioners against that place. When the vote was taken it stood 365 for Dallas and 259 for St. Louis.

During the luncheon hour, after the vote had been recorded, some of the Commissioners learned that the "home" which the assembly will have in Dallas is the Hotel Adolphus, which is owned by the estate of Adolphus Busch, the man who did much to make St. Louis nearly as famous as Milwaukee. When this fact was reported to members of the committee on the place of the next assembly, they said that the best solution of the difficulty could be found by the local Dallas committee in having the bar of the hotel closed while the assembly was in session.

The assembly declined today to go on record on the question of woman suffrage. After intermittent efforts which were frustrated by rulings that he was out of order, the Rev. Walter E. Spoonts of Jacksonville, Ill., finally got his suffrage resolution before the assembly. He based it on temperance grounds, urging that "wives and mothers should be given an equal right to assist in the great fight against the liquor traffic." Many Commissioners opposed this action, because they did not think the assembly should vote upon a purely political question, and others were frankly opposed to "votes for women." The motion to lay the resolution on the table was carried by a viva voce vote.

The thirty-six members of the General Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, which, it is intended, shall absorb the present Board of Education and the College Board, were elected today without a contest, the recommendations of the Executive Commission being accepted by the assembly.

A resolution calling upon the Presbyterians of each State to make efforts to obtain Bible reading in the public schools was passed.

The Rev. Dr. David Tully, of Media, Penn., who, though 98 years old, has attended the sessions of the assembly regularly, participating in a number of debates, was the object of resolutions in which the assembly congratulated itself for his presence, and expressed the hope that he would be a member of the 1918 assembly, so that that body might have a centenarian in its deliberations.

The committee to investigate the relations of Union and other theological seminaries to the Church, as well as other important committees, will be appointed by the Moderator within ten days.

ELECT METHODIST EDITORS.

Saratoga Conference Picks Men to Manage Church Publications.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, May 26.—The progressives in the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, whose program for a complete reorganization of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension was adopted by the Conference on Thursday, won another victory today in the election of the Rev. David D. Forsyth of New York as General Secretary of the reorganized board. The Rev. Charles M. Boswell, one of the three Corresponding Secretaries in charge of the board, was a candidate against Mr. Forsyth.

The General Conference today also elected President A. W. Harris of Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., as Secretary of the Board of Education to succeed Bishop-elect Thomas Nicholson.

Other Secretaries elected today were: Board of Sunday Schools—Edgar Blake, who succeeds himself; Epworth League—Wilbur F. Sheridan, who succeeds himself; Board of Foreign Missions—S. Earl Taylor and Frank Mason North, who succeeded themselves; Board of Conference Claimants—Joseph B. Hingeley, Secretary Emeritus of the General Conference, who succeeded himself; Freedman's Aid Society—Patrick J. Maveety and I. Garland Penn.

The following editors of publications of the church also were elected: Methodist Review—William V. Kelley; Christian Advocate—James R. Joy; Sunday School Publications—Henry H. Meyer; California Advocate—F. M. Larkin; Central Christian Advocate—Claudius B. Spencer; Methodist Advocate Journal—James M. Melear, to succeed the Rev. John M. Manker, who died suddenly while attending the General Conference; Western Christian Advocate—E. C. Wareing; Northwestern Christian Advocate—E. Robb Zaring; Pacific Christian Advocate—Robert H. Hughes; Pittsburgh Christian Advocate—John J. Wallace; Southwestern Christian Advocate—Robert E. Jones; Epworth Herald—D. B. Brummitt; Der Chrisliche Apologete—Albert J. Nast, Hans Herd, and A. J. Bucher.

The General Conference tonight adopted a report presented by Judge Henry Wade Rogers urging the admission of laymen to annual conferences. Rolla V. Watt, an insurance broker of San Francisco, asserted in a supporting speech that there were matters continually arising in the annual conferences which affected benevolences in which the laymen, who contributed the funds, were interested. He asserted, therefore, that they ought to be represented on a parity with the clergymen and have the right to vote.

The adoption of the report by the General Conference puts the matter for final decision up to the annual and lay electarol conferences. If these also favor the proposal, the constitution of the Church will be changed in accordance with the report. The change cannot go into effect before 1920.

FED MR. ENO LIKE A BABY.

Witness in Will Contest Often Saw Valet Cut His Food.

Further testimony to show the mental condition of Amos F. Eno when he willed the residue of his estate, estimated at $5,000,000 or more, to Columbia University, was given yesterday when the trial was resumed before Surrogate Cohalan and a jury.

Charles H. Beckett of counsel for the contestants, who include Gifford Pinchot, Amos R. E. Pinchot, and William P. Eno, placed on the stand Miss Emma Yeoward, Mr. Eno's housekeeper, who told of his animosity toward colleges. Mrs. M. H. C. Beste, for many years a close friend of Mr. Eno, testified to changes she noticed in his habits and manners during his last year. On several occasions she saw Edmund Bigaut, Mr. Eno's valet, cut up his food and feed him like a baby. Mrs. Beste declared that she believed Mr. Eno was irrational when she saw him last Summer.

LINCOLN TAKEN ABOARD SHIP

German Spy Sails for England on the Cameronia Today.

Ignatius T. T. Lincoln, the self-styled German spy, will sail for England today on the Cameronia. Lincoln was turned over to Alfred Ward, Chief Inspector of Scotland Yard, and George Brewer, a London Detective Sergeant, last evening by United States Marshal James M. Power at the Raymond Street Jail, Brooklyn.

Lincoln bade good-bye to the jailers, and was put into an automobile with the two detectives and an attaché of the British Consular office. The curtains were drawn, and the machine crossed the Manhattan Bridge at forty miles an hour. At Thirteenth Street and Fourth Avenue a mounted policeman was almost run down, and at other points pedestrians had close calls.

When the auto reached the pier at West Twenty-fourth Street it was driven up to the gangplank of the Cameronia.

None of the party guarding Lincoln would talk at the jail or permit any one to see the prisoner or talk to him.

MAY NOT TAX GOOD WILL.

Surrogate's Decision May Affect Morgan and Other Large Estates.

Surrogate Fowler decided yesterday that the good will of a corporation is not liable to transfer tax as part of the estate of a decedent member of the concern. The decision is important because it may bear on the estates of J. P. Morgan, James A. Hearn, and other rich men that are still up for adjustment as to tax charges.

The Controller had appealed from the transfer tax appraiser, who had refused to assess the good will of M. C. D. Borden & Sons in appraising the estate of Matthew C. D. Borden.

The Surrogate decided that good will may be transferred by contract and that when the assignment is founded on a valuable consideration it is not within "the purview of the Transfer Tax Law relating to posthumous successions."

PROFESSORS ASSAIL NEARING DISMISSAL

Academic Freedom Violated by University of Pennsylvania, Committee Finds.

REPORTS ON THREE CASES

"Danger" Seen in Discharge of Fisher of Wesleyan—Complaint by Brewster Not Upheld.

The American Association of University Professors made public yesterday the reports of those of its committees which have been investigating alleged interferences with academic freedom. Three cases were reported on; those of Professor Scott Nearing of the University of Pennsylvania, Professor James H. Brewster of the University of Colorado and Professor Willard C. Fisher of Wesleyan University, Connecticut. These three professors were dismissed because, so it was alleged, their opinions on public questions, expressed outside of their universities, were unpalatable to their superiors or to persons having influence with the latter.

The committees find that Professor Nearing's dismissal was an infringement of academic freedom; that Professor Brewster's was not; and that the method of Professor Fisher's involved "dangers to academic freedom."

The only explicit reasons assigned by the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania for dismissing Mr. Nearing were that "during the entire period of the few (i. e. nine) years in which he was connected with the university, his efforts—though doubtless perfectly sincere—were constantly and continuously misunderstood by the public and by many parents of student" and that his "methods, language and temperament" provoked "continued and widespread criticism alike from parents of students and from the general public, who knew him only by his public utterances."

On the grounds for Nearing's dismissal, the committee finds as follows:

A. That the Board of Trustees, in the only statement which it has, as a body, given in explanation of its action of June 14, 1915, declares explicitly that its decision not to retain Dr. Nearing was made necessary by the criticisms of him, and the antagonistic attitude toward him of persons not members of the board, including persons who knew him only by his public (i. e., his extra-mural) utterances.

B. That much of this outside criticism, and, in particular, the most weighty and important part of it—that which came before the board shortly before its June meeting with the official indorsement of the Alumni Committee on the Wharton School and the Directors of the General Society of Alumni, and with the published individual indorsement of one of the board's own members—was unmistakably based upon objections to the character of Dr. Nearing's social and economic teachings, or what the objectors supposed to be his teachings.

These two facts alone would compel your committee to conclude that the action of the Board of Trustees, in relation to Dr. Nearing, constituted an infringement of freedom of teaching in economics in that university.

Professor Brewster alleged that he had been dismissed by the University of Colorado because he had testified about the Colorado strike before the Commission on Industrial Relations. The committee found, however, that he lost his place merely because of a reorganization of the Law School, in which he taught, and that his appointment in the first place was only a temporary one, pending that reorganization.

The case of Professor Fisher was dismissed briefly, because his dismissal took place on Jan. 27, 1913, more than three years ago, and came late and only indirectly before the committee.

PEACE BOARD QUITS IN GARMENT TRADE

MAY BE STRIKE OF 70,000

Rabbi Magnes, Dr. Moskowitz, and C. L. Bernheimer Accuse Union of Violating a Contract.

Rabbi J. L. Magnes, Dr. Henry Moskowitz, and Charles L. Bernheimer announced yesterday their resignations as members of a Board of Moderators to keep peace in the men's garment industry. Their resignation revealed a crisis which may result in a strike or lockout of 70,000 workers. The resignation of the Council of Conciliation in the women's garment industry, headed by Dr. Felix Adler, occurred a few days before the lockout of the 60,000 workers in that industry, four weeks ago.

The Board of Moderators last year averted a strike of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America against the American Clothing Manufacturers' Association, both sides accepting the mediation by the board.

Dr. Magnes, Dr. Moskowitz, and Mr. Bernheimer quit because, they said, the union refused to abide by the agreement it had signed. It was because the manufacturers refused to arbitrate that Dr. Adler's committee resigned.

About a month ago questions of dispute arose between the workers and several shops, and several hundred workers struck. The moderators went to work to compose their differences and on May 5, through the work of Mr. Bernheimer, the following document was signed for the employers:

> When the men who are out on strike in both the inside and outside shops of the members of the American Clothing Manufacturers' Association are back at work, the association will leave all questions of dispute to the Board of Moderators, Dr. Henry Moskowitz, Dr. J. L. Magnes, Mr. Charles L. Bernheimer, and agree to abide by their decision.
>
> HERBERT C. ANSORGE, President, American Clothing Manufacturers' Association.

This document was signed for the workers:

> I beg to inform you that the Board of Directors of the New York Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America has considered the contents of the above statement in conjunction with your letter of May 5, relative to the returning, by the firm of Light & Schlessinger to their employes in the pants shop, the securities received by that firm from said employes and decided to accept the proposition contained in the above-mentioned statement.
>
> All the members of our organization will be notified accordingly and will return to work Monday morning.
>
> Trusting you will find this satisfactory, I beg to remain,
>

The Board's Resignation.

Accompanied by copies of the above agreements the Board of Moderators has sent the following notice to both employers and union:

> Despite repeated efforts on the part of the moderators to have the above agreement carried out—namely, to have the men who are out on strike back at work, and to have all questions in dispute brought before the moderators after the men are back at their work—the employes of the Kevitz shop had not returned to work on May 23. We therefore addressed a letter an that day to the General Secretary of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America to the effect that it was the unanimous opinion of the moderators that the strike in the Kevitz shop shall be called off at once, and that the people shall be sent back to work not later than May 25 at noon, and that the moderators expected a written notification from him (the General Secretary) to that effect to reacn them not later than noon on Thursday, May 25, at 356 Second Avenue, New York.
>
> At the present writing—4 P. M., May 25, 1916—there is no resumption of work in the Kevitz shop. We regret to say that inasmuch as the union has failed to return the workers to the Kevitz shop, which, despite the agreement, has been on strike, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America have not lived up to this stipulation of the agreement of May 5.
>
> Under these circumstances we feel, to our regret, that our usefulness as moderators representing the public is at an end.
>
> Our services are at the disposal of both sides as heretofore just as soon as there is indication of a sufficient change of heart that will enable us to serve, and to be assured in advance that an agreement entered into will be carried out in good faith, and that the spirit of contentiousness now prevailing will give way to a desire to work together harmoniously.

Yesterday Mr. Ansorge, for his association, sent a letter to the members of the Board of Moderators in which he said:

> We deplore exceedingly the conditions that have made necessary the resignation of your honored board, which you explain is due to your inability to induce the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America to live up to the agreement which they made with your board.
>
> We realize that your board, realizing the great responsibilities devolving upon it, has left no stone unturned in its efforts to influence the union to fulfill its written promise; we know that while the national officers of the union were in convention at Rochester several weeks ago you repeatedly telephoned to them demanding that they respect their agreement with you, and after they failed to keep their several promises to return to New York in order to enforce your agreement, you even went so far as to send one of your members, Dr. Moskowitz, to Rochester to urge them to do so.
>
> We regret that all of these efforts have been unavailing, and we wish to tender to you our sincere thanks and appreciation for your untiring efforts and personal sacrifices of time which you have unselfishly devoted, simply from a high sense of public duty.

Mr. Ansorge would make no further statement, nor would he discuss the probability of a strike. There now exists between the workers and the manufacturers no agreement of any nature.

GEN. WOOD APPEALS TO BOYS

Commends Military Training Camps to High School Students.

In a talk on preparedness, in favor of schoolboy training camps, before an audience of 500 high school students in Brooklyn yesterday, General Leonard Wood declared that $40,000,000 more is spent in this country in a year for automobile tires than it costs the nation to maintain its army. Even the money spent for chewing gum equals one-half the outlay on the army.

General Wood was introduced by Colonel William V. Hester, who referred to General Wood as a close friend of former President Roosevelt, and at the mention of Mr. Roosevelt's name there was an outburst of applause from the boys.

"There isn't anything in this matter of preparedness," said General Wood, "but plain common sense. Some kinds of peace are worse than some kinds of war, and the man who preaches nonresistance and nonpreparedness is guilty of a breach of faith. We know that righteousness will not protect us from highwaymen and criminals. Aggression is as frequent among nations as it is among men."

"The survival of the fittest holds good among nations as well as it does among men," said General Wood in a final appeal to boys to take advantage of the military training camps.

HOUSE WILL RUSH NAVAL BUDGET BILL

ARMOR PLANT A RIDER

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The passage of the Naval Appropriation bill in the House before the National Conventions meet was assured today when the lower chamber adopted a special rule providing for immediate consideration of the measure and a final vote upon it not later than next Friday afternoon.

The rule likewise provides that legislation for the establishment of a Government armor plate plant shall be in order as a "rider" upon the Appropriation bill. The Senate already has passed the Armor Plate bill as a separate measure, but early action in the House was improbable because of the crowded condition of the calendars. A short cut by means of a rider on the Annual Supply bill was decided upon today.

The naval budget will be passed a few hours prior to the time when many Republican members will leave for the Chicago Convention. The rule stipulates that all debate on the bill shall end at 2 o'clock next Friday. General debate on the Naval bill will end on Monday afternoon.

It is planned that amendments first shall be offered to the controversial sections of the bill, including that relating to the building program, in order to avoid the possibility of a flood of amendments in the closing hours of the debate.

Although the Republicans tacitly agreed to consider the naval budget under a special rule, most of them voted "present" on its adoption. Many of the minority members desired more time for consideration of the bill, but the Democratic leaders announced their determination to dispose of the naval controversy before legislators begin to leave Washington for the convention.

The vote on the special rule was 158 to 21, with 109 members voting present. Representatives Keating of Colorado and Tavenner of Illinois were the only Democrats voting against the rule. The House will meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow to get an early start on the naval budget.

The decision to include the Armor Plate bill as a rider on the supply measure probably will result in the passage of the former. Democrats of the Naval Affairs Committee voted in favor of the Armor Plate bill several weeks ago, following favorable action by the Senate.

Under the terms of the rule adopted all legislative riders in the naval budget will be in order. These include authorization for a projectile plant, an experimental laboratory for the Naval Consulting Board, increases of the naval reserve, the bestowal of additional powers and higher rank on the Chief of Naval Operations, appointment of a commission to investigate navy yard conditions, and the Hensley "peace conference" proposal.

The passage of the naval budget by the House will be the only major legislation attempted before the Chicago and St. Louis conventions. Scores of Republican members plan to leave Washington on next Friday night for Chicago, and a week later the Democrats will start for St. Louis. While the conventions are in progress the House will devote itself to bills on the unanimous consent calendar and to measures upon which no one will demand a roll call. A "gentlemen's agreement" will be reached, according to present plans, under which no member will raise a point of "no quorum" during the two weeks' truce.

The Army Appropriation bill, which will appropriate the money to carry into effect the recently passed Army Reorganization bill, will be reported to the House next week but will not be considered until the conventions are over. The army budget, which is now practically complete, will carry approximately $150,000,000, which is $50,000,000 in excess of the amount carried in the last bill.

Total appropriations of $241,000,000 are carried in the naval budget, this amount being about $91,000,000 in excess of the bill reported for the current fiscal year.

POLICE DRILL BEGINS TODAY

Military Camp for 338 Members Opens at Fort Wadsworth.

The first police training camp will open this morning at Fort Wadsworth, S. I., when 338 members of the department will land from the steamer Patrol and pitch their tents. The detail for the camp will form at Pier A, North River, at 7:30 o'clock. Inspector Henry Cohen will command.

When the camp is established Captain E. B. Martendale, U. S. Coast Artillery, will be the instructor. Police Captains Matthew Robinson, August Kuhne, and William A. Coleman, and eleven Lieutenants will be among the initial contingent of campers.

The camp will be maintained all Summer. Each detail will remain two weeks, and it is estimated that 3,500 members of the department will have had the camp experience when the Summer is over. The men will be thoroughly trained in military tactics and calisthenics. They may not leave the camp except on passes, which will be issued only for good reasons. On Saturdays and Sundays families of policemen may visit the camp. Tomorrow afternoon a dress parade and band concert will be given at 5 o'clock.

SAVE POSTAL SERVICE BILL.

Its Advocates Get It Retransferred to Post Office Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The Griffin bill for the retirement with pay of superannuated employes of the postal service, including clerks of the railway mail and the rural and city delivery services, received an impetus toward passage today when the House rescinded its former action referring this bill to the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service.

Representative Daniel J. Griffin of New York and other advocates of the bill raised a rumpus in the House when they ascertained that the bill, once referred to the Committee on Post Offices, had been re-referred by unanimous consent to the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service at the instance of Representative Cox of Indiana. This move was construed as an attempt to bury the bill and caused a spirited debate.

Speaker Clark finally decided to permit the House to vote on revoking the unanimous consent, which was done, and by 176 to 112 the bill was returned to the Post Office Committee.

BRANDEIS VOTE WEDNESDAY

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The Senate agreed in executive session this afternoon to vote next Wednesday on the nomination of Louis D. Brandeis of Boston to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. This marks a final decision by the opposition not to filibuster against Mr. Brandeis, in fact there will be hardly any speeches, as even Senators opposing him do not wish to attack a man certain of ultimate confirmation.

From the Committee on the Judiciary will come a favorable report and the views of the minority in opposition, and these papers will be made public along with the final vote. Mr. Brandeis will be confirmed

The New Reo-"Six"
$1250

Do You Realize—
Decoration Day Is Almost Here?

AND YOU HAVEN'T that Reo Six yet?

OF COURSE YOU'LL WANT to go for a good long ride Decoration Day—looks as if the weather will be ideal, and the roads the past week or so have been at their best.

WE THOUGHT FOR YOU—anticipated, as the result of past experience, the tremendous Decoration Day demand. And we got the factory to give us just a little advantage on our quota of the popular Reo Six for this occasion.

THEY'LL BE HERE, we feel certain, and for just this once we can promise immediate delivery of a limited number of Reo Sixes.

OF COURSE THERE WON'T be enough to go round—never has been, of Reos—and those who leave it till the very last minute will surely be disappointed.

BUT THERE ARE THREE DAYS YET and now that you've seen them all; tried them all; heard all that could be said (in truth and otherwise) about them, and have selected a Reo Six for yours, why delay another minute?

THE TOURING SEASON opens Decoration Day—and every day out of doors you get is just one day more added to your life—that at least.

TO GET 100 PER CENT pleasure out of motoring one must have a car that is absolutely dependable—that goes without saying.

ALL OTHER QUALITIES—all "talking points" pale to insignificance beside that great quality "dependability."

NO MATTER HOW "quick on the trigger." No matter how "great" as a racing car; no matter how spectacular a performer on the pavements—these are secondary when on tour.

THEN, THE ONE QUALITY YOU MOST VALUE is dependability, "Not the getaway—but the stay there"—as one Reo enthusiast expressed it.

STAYING QUALITIES—day-in-and-day-out performance with a never-a-break—never-a-quaver in the beautiful rhythm of that wonderful motor.

AND GASOLINE ECONOMY—need we tell you that Reo cars always have used less gasoline than racing cars? You know it.

SO IF YOU HADN'T actually decided on a Reo we'd say this to you:

IF YOU'D ENJOY the coming season's touring to the utmost; if you covet the pleasure of closing each day's drive with a smile of satisfaction; if in a word, you'd know all the joy of motoring, then surely you can't afford to take a chance—a Reo for yours.

AND A REO SIX OF COURSE—if the party and the luggage call for more than a five passenger car.

A SIX IS THE ACME of motoring quality—that has now been proved beyond question. Watch the trend—it is, from all directions, towards Sixes when the need is for a big luxurious touring car.

AND THE NEW REO SIX has earned the title "the Gold Standard of Values in Sixes"—is so recognized throughout motordom.

SERVICE?—WE REO FOLK do not talk so much about "service afterward" as some. Don't need to! Reo service is "built into the car."

BUT IF YOU EVER DO need service on tour—an adjustment or replacement part—you'll appreciate as never before the advantage of owning a Reo.

THERE ARE MORE THAN 1500 Reo distributors located at as many points throughout this country—and every one is a Reo enthusiast. A Reo fanatic almost—for verily, Reo is their religion.

AND YOU'LL FIND you can obtain better service, quicker service, and at less cost than you have ever known.

SO ON ALL COUNTS—unless you are one of the foolish few who seek novelty at the sacrifice of all else—a Reo. And a Reo Six if you'd have the sweetest running, roomiest, sturdiest and most dependable thing on wheels.

BUT; WE WARN YOU the number that can be accommodated with immediate delivery of Reo Sixes is limited.

ONLY THOSE WHO CAN decide at once—today—and place their orders—now—can hope to get a Reo Six and have it for Decoration Day.

50,000 FAMILIES GET CHARITY AID HERE

Dr. Riley, Secretary of Brooklyn Bureau, Addresses New York Conference.

MAY ESTABLISH LOAN FUND

Paper by George McAneny on "Zoning for Social Welfare" Read at Evening Session.

The second day's session of the New York Conference of Charities and Correction was held yesterday afternoon and evening in the Assembly Hall of the United Charities Building, 105 East Twenty-second Street. The afternoon topic of discussion was "Families." The evening papers and discussion were on "Municipal Needs."

Dr. Thomas J. Riley, General Secretary of the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities, speaking at the afternoon session, reported that it requires under present economic conditions from $900 to $1,000 a year to support a family consisting of father, mother, and three children under working age on an acceptible standard of living. Upon that basis, he said, there were 50,000 families who received aid from the half dozen largest charitable institutions in the city during the last year. Dr. Riley's speech was followed by a discussion of the feasibility of establishing loan funds for families in temporary difficulties in order that the standard of well-being may be maintained over periods of uncertain conditions.

Others speakers of the afternoon were Miss Margaret F. Byington of the American Association for Organizing Charity, William Vetter of the Brooklyn Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and Miss Elizabeth Wood of the New York Charity Organization Society.

At the evening session Dr. Hastings Hart of the Russell Sage Foundation read a paper on "Zoning for Social Welfare," by George McAneny, Former President of the Board of Aldermen, who recommended the division of the metropolitan area into districts, each with a distinct character of its own, in order that the present conditions of haphazard growth may not destroy both health and property. The whole difficulty, said Mr. McAneny, lies in segregation as it exists at present. "Districting, or zoning, that is by restricting the height of all future buildings," wrote Mr. McAneny, "will remedy all this. The motive of it is to spread buildings out, and to attract people out where there is plenty of sunlight and air and space to play. The old ideal of the city, made up of community groups, each homegeneous and actively expressing its individuality, will at last be realized. It may seem like a Utopian dream, but many are the hard-headed men in the city today who believe that nothing that the city has ever done will contribute so much toward making this dream come true as will the present plan of zoning."

In discussing Mr. McAneny's paper Edward M. Bassett, former member of the Public Service Commission, now a member of the commission to look into the regulating of the height of buildings, said that 450 conferences had been held on the subject of limiting the heights of buildings and that the commission had submitted reports after a study of conditions in every city where the problem was present. "The end of the chapter is approaching," said Mr. Bassett. "In ten days we expect to hand our final report to the Board of Estimate, and if the board gives its approval of our plans and our maps they will become a law of the city and can only be overturned by the courts if they deem that the city has exceeded the constitutional police powers."

The two final sessions of the conference will be held today at the Assembly Hall of the New York Catholic Protectory, Walker Avenue and Unionport Road, the Bronx.

ENGLAND TO REFUSE TO PASS DYESTUFFS

Lord Robert Cecil Says Understanding of Last Year Was Not Lived Up To by Germany.

THINKS WE CAN GET ON

Having Done Without German Dyes for So Long — Shipments Would Help German Exchange Rate.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 26.—Lord Robert Cecil amplified today his recent statement in the House of Commons when he said Great Britain would be obliged to deny the request of America that cargoes of dyestuffs from Germany be permitted to go through as a relief to the industries of America.

"Our answer to America's request must be 'No,'" he said. "When we agreed over a year ago to allow two cargoes of dyestuffs to pass through from Germany to America it was stipulated by America and Germany that these cargoes were to go in exchange for a cargo of cotton from America to Germany, which had been contracted for before March, 1915. The matter was allowed to run along by Germany and America until finally the American shipments for Germany came over and we permitted them to go through to Germany, presuming they were intended in exchange for the dyestuffs. But it developed later that Germany paid for the cotton cargoes in cash, while not shipping the dyestuffs.

"On April 22, neaerly a year later, the American Government asked us if we could not arrange to allow the dyestuff cargoes to go out. We were informed that American industries were suffering from want of dyestuffs, which same argument was used a year ago when we gave permission for the exchange cargoes. Our attitude is that if American industries are able to get along a whole year without German dyestuffs cargoes some way must be found to overcome the difficulty that might be applied now. In other words, we don't feel an urgent necessity to exist that ought to cause us to allow the dyestuffs out at this late day. In any event the conditions under which we allowed the exchange of cargoes was not observed when Germany paid cash for cotton instead of shipping dyestuffs, so it must be admitted that whatever the failure was to carry out the agreement it is no fault of ours.

"It must also be borne in mind that while Germany only expected to get two cargoes of dyestuffs to America a year ago, now, according to figures given the House the other day, she is trying to get $50,000,000 worth to America. It is easy to see what a huge advantage it would be to Germany to reopen any of her markets. Great Britain does not intend to allow her to do it now. We are trying to keep all of Germany's goods out of the world's markets while the war is on, and it is only in rare cases, such as shipments of drugs, where we feel like making exceptions to any market."

LONDON, May 26.—Discussing with The Associated Press today the request of the American Government that Great Britain permit the export of dyestuffs from Germany to the United States, Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of War Trade, pointed out that Great Britain had granted a permit for the exportation of a certain amount of dyestuffs in April, 1915, but that advantage had never been taken of the permit.

In April of this year, the War Trade Minister continued, nothing having been done, Great Britain pointed out to the American Government that it was felt the permit could not be extended further. It was assumed, he said, that since American industries had got along for over a year without dyestuffs they could not still be in need of them.

The most recent request of the American Government, said Lord Robert, was still under consideration. He would not say what the present attitude of Great Britain was, but he referred to his recent statement in the House of Commons, when he agreed with Lord Lonsdale that the object of the German desire to export dyestuffs was to keep up the exchange rate with the United States, and added that unquestionably it was not in the interest of Great Britain to allow that to take place—a consideration which would be borne in mind when a reply was sent to the American request.

CLUB WOMEN TOLD TO SHUN 'FASHIONS'

PROFESSOR TALKS OF FOOD

Relates How Laboring Man Got Along Well on a Diet of Potatoes and Butter Exclusively.

The convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, for the first time, was in smooth running order at the business session at the Seventh Regiment Armory yesterday morning. A newly built sounding board made it possible for speakers to be heard.

One of the biggest affairs yesterday was the Household Economics Conference in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor. In addition to the regular program, the women had been promised that they would see a live model "built into" a frock on the stage. Before the hour for that announcement was made from the stage that only delegates and alternates could be admitted to the floor, and that visiting clubwomen would have to go into the balconies.

"Mme. President, won't you see that we have chairs if we have to come up here," women called from the balcony.

"I can't get chairs for my speakers on the platform," called back the Chairman, Miss Helen Louise Johnson, "and I am afraid you will have to wait."

The women stood through the meeting, and in the ballroom proper many sat on the floor.

A leading New York dressmaker draped gauzy fabrics on a model whom, she said, artists called the most beautiful woman in the world.

The dressmaker told the women how not to dress.

"Never follow the fashions," she said. "You cannot do worse than to get the latest horror from Paris. If you are poor, you can dress very well with only two gowns. A poor man could never afford to pay the prices for the gowns made by the fashionable dressmaker. If you follow the fashions you will need many changes and you could not possibly get along without twenty or thirty gowns. You could not get one of those for less than $150 each. I would not make one for less than $250."

Another pretty model came on the stage wearing a gown said to be for a well-known dancer.

"That frock will cost $600," said the gown builder, "and it is beautiful for a dancing frock, but don't try to copy it in cheap materials. If you did it would be awful.

"If you can't afford to pay those ridiculous prices—and I say myself that they are ridiculous—just have two simple gowns. One gown would be a very simple serge, and with that you could have two blouses. One would be very simple and the other a little more elaborate. Then, with that, you could have a black charmeuse gown. With that you could have two waists. One with long sleeves and the other with short sleeves for evening, and you would be dressed well for all occasions."

Mrs. W. K. James of St. Joseph, Mo., also talked to the women about clothes. She said women should wear simpler clothes because of the increased expense and the greater number of changes for the seasons.

Miss Sarah Louise Arnold, Dean of Simons College, Boston; Miss Julia Lathrop, Chief of the Children's Bureau, Washington, and Lawrence Veiller of the National Housing Association were a few of the many speakers of the afternoon.

Dr. Graham Lusk, Professor of Physiology of Cornell University, talked on foods. He told of a man who lived 300 days, doing hard labor, by eating only potatoes and butter. The last 95 days the man ate 800 pounds of potatoes and 50 pounds of butter, drinking the water in which the potatoes were boiled, so as to get all the nourishment, and eating parts of the skins, the professor said.

Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker and Mrs. Samuel Sneath, the First Vice President, presided at the business meeting of the morning in the armory. Following the reports and addresses on Art and Home Economics, Mrs. Pennypacker read her biennial address. Mrs. Rudolph Blankenburg reported that the Federation Magazine had gone out of business because of financial difficulties.

There were two receptions in the afternoon—one for each of the candidates for the Presidency—Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles being entertained by the Californians and Mrs. Samuel B. Snead of Ohio by the Ohio women.

There were many luncheons and dinners at hotels. In the evening there were reports by the State Chairmen at a meeting in the armory.

At the Household Economic Conference Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, Mrs. William Jennings Bryan, and Lady Aberdeen were on the platform.

TIMES SQ. GRATINGS GO.

Service Board Orders Removal of Many on Broadway.

The Public Service Commission settled yesterday the much-discussed question as to whether sidewalk gratings should be allowed to remain in Times Square and the more congested parts of Broadway by ordering the elimination of the offending gratings in Broadway between Twenty-ninth and Thirty-fifth Streets and between Thirty-ninth and Forty-sixth Streets.

The commission has found it impossible to eliminate sidewalk gratings between Thirty-fifth and Thirty-ninth Streets because of the long distance to the nearest ventilating chamber and the inability to pump air over these long stretches effectively. It is planned, however, that where the gratings are necessary between Twenty-ninth and Thirty-fifth Streets and between Thirty-ninth and Forty-sixth Streets they will be placed in the roadway so as not to interfere in any way with pedestrian traffic.

In Times Square, just north of Forty-third Street and in the triangle formed by the junction of Seventh Avenue and Broadway, a ventilating chamber will be placed in the roadway. Another ventilating chamber will be placed just south of Forty-fourth Street, at the north end of the square.

Commissioner Hodge, whose report on the subject was adopted, said he was sure that ventilation can be obtained without sidewalk gratings.

Law Institute Elects Officers.

The following officers of the New York Law Institute were elected yesterday: President, E. Henry Lacombe; Vice Presidents, George L. Ingraham, Alton B. Parker, and William H. Harris; Treasurer, Egerton L. Winthrop; Secretary, Alfred E. Hinrichs; Executive Committee, Robert E. Deyo and John G. Milburn; Auditing Committee, Daniel S. Remsen, John H. Parsons, and Allan McCulloh. The members of the Nominating Committee for 1917 are Henry W. Sackett, Lawrence E. Sexton, William E. Curtis, Frederic B. Jennings, and Eugene D. Hawkins.

Trouble Due Indirectly to Diseased Teeth—Special Train Brings Surgeon to Railroad Builder.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, May 26.—Dr. W. J. Mayo, the famous surgeon of Rochester, Minn., was brought by a special railroad train late this afternoon to this city to give counsel in the case of James J. Hill, the railroad builder, who has been ill with an intestinal complaint since May 16.

Dr. James S. Gilfillan, the Hill family physician, said this evening after his consultation with Dr. Mayo that Mr. Hill's condition was not serious and no operation would be necessary. Dr. Gilfillan said that the intestinal trouble had been followed by a slight infection. Dr. Mayo returned to Rochester this evening.

Dr. Mayo was in St. Paul four days ago and examined Mr. Hill. At that time he said that he thought the complaint was an ordinary one and that Mr. Hill would recover very soon. During Mr. Hill's ten days of illness he has suffered much pain, but on different occasions has been up and about his room.

For several years Mr. Hill has had trouble with his teeth, and last year he had a number extracted. The theory is that the poison from the diseased teeth has created the condition in the intestines.

Until today Mr. Hill's family had regarded his illness without much concern, and even today L. W. Hill said that nothing grave had developed in his father's condition.

"The family and Dr. Mayo are great friends," said Mr. Hill, "and we felt we would like to have Dr. Mayo's advice."

L. W. Hill, who is the President of the Great Northern, went personally in a special train to Rochester to summon Dr. Mayo.

CHOATE URGES READINESS.

Wants Every Man and Woman to Join a Defense Organization.

Joseph H. Choate, taking the recent business men's preparedness parade as his text, issued yesterday an appeal in which he asked that all citizens of New York do their part in the work for adequate national defense. He suggested that the best way would be for everybody to join some reliable and trustworthy defense organization. Mr. Choate is himself the Honorary President of the National Security League, of which Robert Bacon, former Ambassador to France, is the active head.

Mr. Choate said in part:

> We are not all conditioned to train for military service, but every man—and every woman, too—may serve the country well by lending aid to preparedness. Some, on account of age, physical feebleness, or other disqualifying consideration, may not be fitted for soldiers, but their patriotism need not, for this reason, be passive.
>
> The simplest and surest way to do this is for every citizen to ally himself or herself with some organization working for preparedness. New associations for this work will undoubtedly be formed among men of particular professions, occupations, industries, and employment, but a thing that seems to me to be of vital importance should be work which, like the composition of Saturday's parade, shall include citizens from all fields of endeavor and which is nonprofessional, nonpartisan, nonsectarian, and unclassified as to occupation.

Mr. Choate said that he had personally derived the greatest possible satisfaction from his connection with the National Security League, and that he hoped to see its membership increase until it amounted to several millions of good American citizens.

LAMAR STARTS FOR ATLANTA

Federal Judge Denies Plea for More Delay in Serving Sentence.

While David Lamar, waited at the Pennsylvania Station for the train that was to take him to Atlanta, Ga., yesterday to serve a two years' sentence in the Federal Prison there his lawyers were making a last attempt before Judge Wolverton in the Federal District Court to stay the execution of his sentence. Through counsel the one-time "Wolf of Wall Street" argued that time should be given him to move for the quashing of an indictment against him in connection with German activities.

He also sought delay to prepare answers to two civil suits, notice of which has been served on him since he surrendered to the United States District Attorney here. Judge Wolverton decided, however, that there was no cause why Lamar should not begin to serve his sentence, and when an afternoon train for the South left the station Lamar was on board.

Jaunty as ever and smiling as in more fortunate days, Lamar left the Tombs. He was handcuffed to Deputy Marshal Russo and another deputy followed bearing his bag. The trio walked to Franklin Street to the Sixth Avenue elevated station. When asked whether he had a last word to say in the newspapers Lamar replied shortly that he had not. He was convicted of impersonating Congressman Palmer of Pennsylvania.

This reply was received shortly afterward:

BOY SHOT CRIMMINS'S DOG.

Court Fines Him, and Now Summer Colony Is Upset.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 26.—Collender's Point, the Summer home of a number of wealthy families, is much aroused over the arrest and conviction yesterday of Palmer Renshaw, the twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Renshaw, for shooting a German police dog owned by Cyril Crimmins, son of John D. Crimmins of New York. It was on Sunday, May 14, that young Renshaw shot the dog in a hind leg with a rifle because he says it attacked his pet Airedale terrier. A complaint was lodged with the Darien authorities and young Renshaw was summoned to court and fined $5 and costs by Justice of the Peace Sherer. His father immediately apealed to the Court of Common Pleas and bail was fixed at $100. Mr. Renshaw is engaged in the manufacture of switch engines and other railroad devices.

TEACHER SUES PRINCIPAL.

Alleges That He Used the Word "Liar" in an Argument.

Lottie Schlank, a teacher in Hoboken, said yesterday that she had engaged counsel to sue August I. Dillon, Principal of Public School 3, from which she recently was transferred, for slander.

For several months, it is alleged, there have been differences between the teachers and the Principal of No. 3 in regards to paper napkins, milk bottles, and crumbs scattered about the teacher's room at noon hour recesses.

Miss Schlank said that on one occasion, in the presence of her class, the Principal came to the room and in an argument used the word liar.

Principal Dillon yesterday said: "Cases of insubordination occur in schools. This matter has been put into the hands of my attorneys. Further than that I do not wish to discuss the case."

CHEER WAR POEMS BY MISS MARLOWE

HER BENEFIT YIELDS $2,800

Sir Herbert Tree in the Bill—Four Performances Include One for Wounded Irish Soldiers.

Four entertainments for the benefit of as many war charities were given in New York yesterday. In the afternoon, at the Shubert Theatre, Julia Marlowe received an unusual ovation when she appeared at a benefit she had arranged for the crippled French soldiers. Simultaneously at the Candler an entertainment in aid of Irish soldiers wounded in battle was given, while at the Hudson Elinor Foster offered a program of dramatic readings for the benefit of the Belgian Relief Fund. A concert to raise funds to help rebuild the homes of the inhabitants of the Carpathian Mountains in Hungary last night at Carnegie Hall completed the day's offerings.

Miss Marlowe's entertainment was the most successful of the lot, due largely, no doubt, to the fact that after a brief appearance in the same theatre tonight she will not be seen on the American stage again. Her appearance toward the end of the program was the occasion of prolonged applause. E. H. Sothern introduced his wife, who recited four war poems—"Verdun," by Harold Begbee; "Hymn of Love," by Helen Gray Cone; "For All We Have and Are," by Rudyard Kipling, and Rupert Brooke's sonnet, "1914." Miss Marlowe recited "The Star-Spangled Banner" as her closing number, and when she had finished the audience arose and cheered, waved handkerchiefs, or applauded. Miss Marlowe returned to the stage led by Mr. Sothern, who stood holding her by the hand while he thanked the audience and told of the pleasure with which they looked forward to their retirement to private life after tonight.

Miss Marlowe wore a flame-colored gown of crêpe with a drapery of the same material that hung from the right shoulder and gave the efect of a tunic. She was radiantly beautiful and it was some moments after she had finished before the audience finally subsided.

An interesting program had been arranged by Miss Marlowe. Sir Herbert Tree recited Bret Harte's "Jim" and mixed the speeches and voices of Hamlet and Falstaff. Mrs. Langtry appeared in a one-act playlet, entitled "Ashes," in which she has been seen here in vaudeville, and another playlet, "A Nocturne," by Anthony P. Wharton, was presented by Haidee Wright and company. Anna Fitziu and Andrea de Segurola sang, and Mr. Sothern and company were seen in the first act of "If I Were King."

A good many people bought programs of Mrs. Vernon Castle without realizing her identity, but that was before ushers passed down the aisles announcing that Mrs. Castle would sell programs. Edna Wallace Hopper, Mlle. Samya, Lois Meredith, Vivienne Segal, and Susanne Feindel sold programs unadvertised. Upwards of $2,800 was realized by Miss Marlowe's benefit.

The performance at the Candler, under the auspices of the British War Relief Association, was for the benefit of Irish soldiers wounded in battle, and it raised about $2,000 for the purpose.

The program was made up of songs, recitations, and playlets, many of them given by Irish artists. J. M. Synge's "The Shadow of the Glen," which was first acted here by the Dublin Abbey Players, was given by a cast that included A. G. Andrews, Kathryn Kidder, Louis Anspacher, and Robert Stuart Piggot. "The Lennan Shee," an Irish fairy drama by Norreys Jephson O'Conor, included in its cast Ashton Tonge, Rupert Harvey, Watson White, Saxon Kling, Sybil Maitland, and Eleanor Hale. Beverly Sitgreaves, Elizabeth Murray, Frank Fogarty, John McCowan, Emily Gordon, Alfred De Manby, Frank Sheridan, William Cahill, Augustus Barratt, Victor Foster, Evelyn McVay McNamee, and Regina Vicarino were others on the program.

Souvenirs programs that included copies of paintings by Robert Henri and a poem by Theodosia Garrison were sold by Miss Mabelle Adams, Miss Vera Bloom, Miss Dagmer Godowsky, Mrs. P. G. Grant, Mrs. Cosmo Hamilton, Mrs. Robert Henri, Mrs. Paul Herzog, Mrs. Harvey J. O'Higgins, Mrs. W. A. Johnston, Miss Lillian Palmer, Mrs. Frederick Pope, Miss Elaine Sterne, and Mrs. P. G. Wodehouse.

The principal number of Elinor Foster's dramatic recital was J. M. Barrie's playlet, "Rosalind." Miss Foster was assisted by Mrs. John W. Nichols, pianiste.

The concert in Carnegie Hall was arranged by Armand Vecsey, musical director of the Ritz-Carlton. Mr. Vecsey conducted an orchestra recruited from the New York Symphony and other organizations. Carl Braun, Miss Mary Zentay, and Mme. Melaine Kurt were the soloists.

Community Masque May Be Given All of Next Week.

Another great audience that filled the City College Stadium saw the community masque "Caliban" last night. The demand for seats has been so large that it was decided yesterday by the directors to give two more performances next week, and perhaps more. The performance that was to have been given last Wednesday will take place Monday night, and then there will be extra performances Tuesday and Wednesday nights. If the demand keeps up the masque will be continued throughout the week. A special train will be run from Boston and another from New Jersey points.

After the last performance the players will hold a dance in one of the armories. On this occasion a permanent organization will be formed for the purpose of giving other masques.

WOULD RENT VACANT FORT

As Refuge for the Homeless, Detroit Workers Urge.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., May 26.—The Federation of Labor adopted a resolution today asking President Wilson to turn over to Detroit families which are unable to find suitable homes because of the lack of houses, the ban on children and the prevailing high rents, the buildings at Fort Wayne at present unoccupied.

The resolution calls on the President for immediate action, "just as though there had been a great fire, a flood or other public calamity."

Fort Wayne, which has been practically deserted for four years, since the troops were sent to the Mexican border, has accommodations for 800 soldiers, in two barracks. In addition to this there is an old prison. The buildings, it is urged, should be made available to the public at reasonable rentals.

It is thought that 1,000 persons could be accommodated at the fort.

E. H. Sothern's Farewell Tonight.

E. H. Sothern will bid farewell to the stage with his performance of "If I Were King" tonight at the Shubert. Julia Marlowe, who quit the stage two years ago and does not plan to act again, will appear and read some verses written especially for the occasion. The receipts of Mr. Sothern's four weeks' farewell engagement have been devoted to various charities, and tonight's will go to the Actors' Fund.

OLMSTED'S PARK PLAN APPROVED

West End Association's Counsel Says His Suggestions in The Times Are Important.

THE MAYOR IN OPPOSITION

Thinks Hearings on Track Relocation in Riverside Should Not Be Reopened.

Frederick Law Olmsted's article in Thursday's TIMES on the plans for placing the New York Central tracks in Riverside Park were hailed last night by Charles L. Craig, counsel for the West End Association, as the best statement on conditions there that had yet been made. Mr. Olmsted, a landscape architect, was of the opinion that modifications of the landscaping problems should be worked out before the contract with the railroad was signed. He also asserted that the tracks in the section from Seventy-second Street to Eighty-third Street should not be covered, as is planned at present.

"Mr. Olmsted's statement is the most important and authoritative declaration yet made in regard to the inevitable consequences of the railroad construction in Riverside Park," Mr. Craig said. "This should dispel for all time the idea that the railroad tracks can be extended eastward into the park without doing irreparable injury. All thought of extending the railroad yards into Riverside Park should be abandoned.

"It is evident that a railroad yard and a great waterfront park cannot exist together. The main-line tracks should be depressed in their present location and the park finished over them to the water's edge."

While refusing to discuss Mr. Olmsted's letter Mayor Mitchel said yesterday that he did not favor reopening the hearings on the Riverside Park matter. Dock Commissioner Smith said that few persons in the city would agree with Mr. Olmsted. Borough President Marks, who returned from out of town late last night, said he had not had any opportunity to study Mr. Olmsted's article sufficiently to express an opinion on it. He said, however, that he was in favor of reopening the hearings.

"If I understand him," he said, "he desires that the entire railroad matter be re-opened and the treatment he thinks best is that the section between Seventy-second and Eighty-third Streets should be left open and the present plan to provide additional park area abandoned.

"The greatest consideration, in my opinion, is to give more park space. Riverside, as it exists today, gives little recreation space. What the people do not generally understand is that the Port and Terminal Committee has been working on the correct surveys, and that the relocation of the tracks had been planned with the utmost care to provide these recreational features.

"I am satisfied that the Park Department will complete the work properly from the standpoint of landscaping. I do not agree with Mr. Olmsted that in certain sections the present plan would not give a view of the river. I am sure that it provides for ample view of the river. I do not believe any one is in sympathy with the open cut proposal of Mr. Olmstead, certainly no official that I know of would recommend it."

FLOWER GIRLS IN AUTOS.

Suffragists to Sell Bouquets All Over Town Today.

Suffragists will sell flowers all over the city today from 100 automobiles which will start from Union Square at 9 A. M. In preparation for the traveling flower markets the suffragists took a store at 19 East Sixteenth Street and all day yesterday flowers were being unloaded there. Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip sent in ten automobile loads of flowers, and other cars came in from suburban estates.

Last night the workers were busy all night making up the flowers into pretty little bouquets with old-fashioned frills to have them fresh for this morning. Men and women, the women, many of them in handsome evening gowns, worked by candlelight, as the temporary market was not adequately lighted. Among the workers were Mr. and Mrs. John Humphreys Watkins, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Hone, Mrs. Joel Spingarn, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Van Zile, and Mrs. John Noel Edge.

GOOD WORK FOR PRINCETON.

Large Increase in Alumni Donors and in Gifts.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 26.—An increase of 20 per cent. in the number of Princeton graduates enrolled as subscribers to the Alumni Fund, and an increase of $15,000 in the subscription were reported today by Major Francis G. Landon, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Graduate Council, as a result of the whirlwind campaign.

Last year on June 1 only 4½ per cent. of all the living Princeton alumni were enrolled, while now 24½ per cent. are enrolled and $75,000 was raised as against $60,000 for the corresponding date last year.

The Alumni Fund is meant to make up the deficit between expenses and income. Statistics have shown that it costs the university three times as much to educate a student as he pays for tuition. The Alumni Fund makes up the difference through voluntary contributions from graduates.

Old New York View Brings $2,450.

A rare New York view brought a big price at the sale of engravings and etchings of different estates and owners at the Anderson Galleries last evening, going to Max Williams for $2,450. It is an aquatine, proof before all letters, title written in ink and large margin, and is known as the Atlantic Nepture View," or the "Wooded Heights View." It shows New York from the northwest. The date is about 1773-1777. Another rare view, an etching from nature, by St. Memin, 1796, New York City from Long Island, on paper watermarked I. Taylor, went to Robert Fridenberg for $755. The returns for 438 numbers were $7,683.

NAVAL OFFICER A SUICIDE.

Special to The New York Times.

SAG HARBOR, L. I., May 26.—Harry D. Christian, night watchman at the plant here of the Long Island Lighting Company, protested to no avail at 1 o'clock this morning, when a young man demanded admission to the plant, saying he was a Government Inspector. He shoved Christian aside, exclaiming:

"How dare you interfere with a Government officer?"

Then he stepped quickly to a switchboard and seized two plugs through which 2,600 volts of electricity were passing. There were flashes of flame from his hands, his body stiffened and Christian, horrified, shut off the power. The body of the young man fell to the floor. He was dead.

Papers in the dead man's pockets showed he was Lieutenant Clarence Alvin Richards, in command of the United States Torpedo Destroyer Fanning, one of the fleet which had been maneuvring in Gardiner's Bay recently.

Tonight the cause of the young officer's suicide, for suicide Christian is certain it was, is as much a matter for speculation as it proved to be this morning when other officers learned of Richards's death.

Richards was 30 years old. He had seemed in the best of spirits last night, according to brother officers. A possible motive for the suicide was suggested by a letter in Richards's pocket telling him his mother was to undergo a major operation and it is possible the young man was overcome by worry. Friends do not credit this, however.

Lieutenant L. C. Jennings, in command of the shore station at Gardiner's Bay, took charge of Richards's body and reported his death to the naval authorities in Washington.

TO PROSECUTE ENGRAVERS.

District Attorney Says Board Violated Promise to Dissolve.

Following a conference with a representative of the New York Trade Press Association, District Attorney Swann decided yesterday that the Photo Engravers Board of Trade had failed to live up to its agreement to abandon a combination in restraint of trade. Last week the board, threatened with prosecution, submitted a letter to the District Attorney, which said the combination would be dissolved. Relying upon this assurance, the District Attorney suspended the Grand Jury investigation, which he was about to begin.

Milton Weil, representing the New York Trade Press Association, went to the District Attorney yesterday with evidence and the prosecutor declared he would proceed at once with a Grand Jury inquiry.

"After seeing Mr. Weil," said the District Attorney, "I was convinced that the Photo Engravers' Board of Trade had played false. For their combination they have substituted a gentlemen's agreement to carry on the new scale, believing that they have thereby avoided prosecution. But they are mistaken. Their present arrangement is similar to Gary dinner proceedings."

PURELY PARTISAN.

While the recommendations of the minority members of the House Naval Committee in regard to measures that should be adopted to upbuild our sea defenses are, as we said yesterday, generally reasonable enough, the object of their report is so clearly political that it can have little influence on the public mind. The Republican Party has no recent record of naval management that it can fairly brag about. What is more, the Republican minority in the present Congress, with a few notable individual exceptions, has not done much to advance preparedness or any other important matter. It is not to be forgotten that of the Republican members of the Committee on Naval Affairs who sign this eloquent report in favor of a stronger navy than the Democratic majority has provided for, Messrs. BUTLER of Pennsylvania, BRITTEN of Illinois, ROBERTS of Massachusetts, and MUDD of Maryland voted against tabling the McLemore resolution in the memorable session of March 7. They are violently in favor now of a strong navy to protect the honor of the nation, but in that political crisis they were thinking less of national honor than of a possible opportunity to block the President's efforts to solve a grave international complication in accordance with the settled principles of international law. The minority report is well worded and reads well. Its authors are not burdened with legislative responsibility. They have no idea that their suggestions will be accepted. It is their own fault if the people choose to believe that if they had hoped their recommendations would be heeded they would not have made them.

Amendments to the Naval bill are most desirable, but we must look to the majority in both houses of Congress to make them, not to the minority. After all, both the Naval bill and the Military bill, even as they stand are vastly better than any preparedness measures the Republican Party has framed. They have serious defects, but present partisan criticism of those defects is not convincing enough to make votes. The minority report is a purely partisan document for Republican consumption.

ANOTHER SHIPPING BILL.

Something more than a hundred years ago there was enacted a bill for encouragement of American shipping by discrimination against foreign shipping. It was one of the earliest acts of the new nation. Senator GALLINGER now proposes another measure of the same sort. The tonnage tax for foreign ships is to be double that collected from American. And the duty on imports in foreign ships is to be 10 per cent. above that on imports in American ships. Any stick to beat a dog with.

Yet the opposition bill is worse than the Administration's. That is new, at least. Senator GALLINGER's bill must fail now for the reason which caused the failure a century ago—unless human nature has changed in the meantime. Foreign Governments will not take such treatment lying down any more now than then. We have had modern illustrations that commerce is not promoted with a club. There are over a score of commercial treaties which would have to be revised before such a bill could be put into effect. Foreign countries would retaliate against us as certainly as they did against France in 1873. France reconsidered, as it is sure that we should. We are more vulnerable than France, for our enormous export trade exposes us to countervailing duties.

For domestic reasons discriminatory duties are objectionable. Cargoes are of different values, and voyages are of varying lengths. Discriminating duties therefore penalize commerce inequitably. On some cargoes the discrimination might be in excess of the freight, but less than the freight on another cargo of the same tonnage from the same port. One cargo might come from a few hundred miles distant, and another thousands of miles. The discrimination would be the same. There could be no discrimination on that large part of our imports which are on the free list, a full half more or less, according to the tariffs at various times, and with a tendency to increase.

At the present time the Government is in trouble over the 5 per cent. discount from the customs on goods imported in American bottoms. There is pending a batch of protests from many nations, and the Treasury is embarrassed by the demand for the return of duties collected under constructions of the law which the courts have not approved. This second bill illustrates what hard work Congress is making of what might be a simple business. Why not repeal the laws which make it impossible to earn a profit in American ships?

TO DISCIPLINE MILITIAMEN.

The court-martial ordered in the case of the 116 Texas militiamen who disobeyed the President's call to duty is the first really serious action taken by the Federal Government to enforce the authority over the State troops bestowed upon it by the Dick law of 1903 and the amendments of 1908. National Guard discipline in many States has been lax, in spite of the large annual cost to the War Department of equipment and training. The Dick law will be a dead letter when the new military bill, under which the National Guardsmen will be compelled to take the oath of allegiance to both the Governor of the State and the President of the United States, is signed, but the offense of these militiamen can be punished under the older law. It should be punished. National Guardsmen throughout the country, who are proud of their organization and believe that its federalization is justified, will hope that the punishment will be as severe as the offense deserves.

The summoning of the National Guard of three border States to help guard the frontier has not resulted in relieving the burdens of General FUNSTON to any great extent, but it has served to show how heavy is the burden which the Hay provision for the federalization of the Guard will place upon the States and the nation. To make the organized militia conform to the regular army requirements of organization and discipline will require long and tedious work. The Texas court-martial is a good beginning in the enforcement of discipline. The rejection of the physically unfit members of the militia who responded to the call is another important step toward the needed reform of the Guard. The War Department must be cruel only to be kind.

VICE PRESIDENTS.

"In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice President." This language of the Constitution should be pondered by every delegate to the Democratic and the Republican national convention. It should be impressed on his mind that no man is fit to be Vice President who is not fit to be President. Of the resignation of a President there is not likely ever to be an instance, but that the founders of the Government could not foresee. Three Presidents have been assassinated, two have died in office of natural causes, the first HARRISON after a month in office. The contingency of mortality, of incapacitating disease, must be reckoned with.

The Vice Presidency, illustrated by some famous names, has come to be considered as a sort of reward of mediocrity. Public men of no great distinction have sometimes contemptuously referred to it as a place too inferior for their eminence. If the post is largely otiose, if its holder is somewhat in the unpleasant situation of a memento mori or an heir-apparent, if a sort of penumbra spreads around its occupant, it is his fault or that of a popular misconception of the facts. It is often proposed to give the Vice President more to do, to bring him forward more, to add to his dignity and his importance. No external and artificial means, no new activity, is needed. The power or want of power of the office is what it was. The man makes it great or small, according to his own intellectual dimensions. JOHN ADAMS, THOMAS JEFFERSON, JOHN C. CALHOUN were themselves. They were forces and powers not to be shrunk into powerlessness or obscurity because their place was not perpetually in the public eye. It is not additional duties that Vice Presidents require for their satisfaction or magnification. For that office are needed men of strength, of personal distinction and dignity, men worthy to be President.

The happy-go-lucky tradition and habit of American politics, in the matter of Vice Presidents should be given up. It may bring us to disaster any time. The task of selecting a candidate for Vice President seems so trivial to conventions that often delegates think the getting of a train home more momentous. Sometimes it is done in haste. Sometimes it is the fruit of arrangement by which votes for the candidate for President pay their gratitude. Sometimes its purpose is to "recognize" or carry a doubtful State. Sometimes it is founded on those mysterious reasons of political geography which seem so strong to the minds, curiously childlike in some regards, for all their shrewdness, of the professional politicians. This man has a lot of money. Just the man to name for Vice President. Give it to that man as a consolation prize for the loss of the higher nomination, which he never had any expectation or dream of a shadow of getting. So-and-So is "strong" with such and such an "element." Name him for Vice President. Whatever of dicker, of small politics, of unreasonable reason, sometimes apparently of desperation at finding a worthier candidate, enters into the choice of a nominee for Vice President, that choice has too often been treated as of little moment. Most of the thought and passion of the convention is spent, if there be a sharp, doubtful contest in the convention, on the "head of the ticket." For Vice President almost anybody will do, sometimes a nobody does.

The Democrats know whom they will name for President. They should concentrate their convention energies, aside from the making of a hearty, clear American and preparedness platform, on naming for Vice President a statesman, a contemporary figure, if they can find him, deserving to be ranked among Democrats like ALLEN G. THURMAN and JOHN G. CARLISLE. Mr. THURMAN, by the way, was not too lofty to take the nomination for Vice President in 1888. The Republicans, in their feverish uncertainty as to their man of men for President, should not forget to find a public man of the first eminence to be Vice President. Two Presidents, an actual and a potential, are to be chosen. Any man who thinks he is too great to be Vice President is either a megalomaniac or knows little of the history of the United States.

Supreme issues of national patriotism and safety are before the country. The next Administration may be called to exercise a beneficent, or even a dominant, influence in bringing peace to half the world at war. Mighty problems of economic, industrial, financial, commercial, political readjustment and reconstruction will come to Europe; and their repercussion and reaction will be felt mightily here. A man's work, work for the noblest intelligence, the most adroit tact, diplomacy, and delicacy, constructive work, will come to the next President. The United States can afford to take no chances. Elect two Presidents, a President and a Vice President notably equal to take up that work, if Fate should so ordain.

REVIVE THE PROTOCOL.

The strike and lockout in the cloak, suit, and skirt industry is now in its fourth week. The union has from the beginning maintained its willingness to submit to a peaceful settlement of the dispute. But the manufacturers have stubbornly persisted in declining all offers of mediation or arbitration. "We do not believe in outside bodies interfering in our affairs." That is the reason which President E. J. WILE of the Manufacturers' Association gives for rejecting the good offices of the Mayor, of Mr. SCHIFF, and of various civic organizations. But Mr. WILE is wrong, he is woefully mistaken, in supposing that the trouble in the women's garment industry is exclusively the affair of the manufacturers. Has the Mayor, on whom rests the duty to preserve law and order, no interest in promoting peace in an industry which employs more than 60,000 workers? Have the consumers of this city, the men and women who buy the products of the manufacturers, no interest in the way they conduct their shops? Has the public at large no interest in preventing a wasteful industrial war which is bound to injure employers almost as much as it injures workers?

The present attitude of the manufacturers is all the more unfortunate because it deals a blow to the whole system of peaceful and enlightened bargaining that has been carefully worked out in the clothing industry. The protocol adopted in 1910, which for five years insured peace in the cloak and suit trade by providing for the judicial settlement of all grievances, came to naught last year. Now the employers have come out frankly against the principle of the protocol. There is still time, before the busy Summer season arrives, for the manufacturers to make peace with their workmen. The old protocol should be revived and rewritten along lines that will be acceptable to both sides. The union asks for recognition and the "preferential shop," the employers for the right and the freedom to run their shops efficiently. The two things are not inconsistent, they can be reconciled, as shown in the improved and successful protocol recently adopted in the dress and waist trade. If the manufacturers remain obstinate, if they refuse to listen to suggestions of peace, if they continue to heed rash and unenlightened leaders and to reject disinterested offers of aid, they will deserve the public reproach and condemnation which such a course is sure to bring upon them.

THE POST OFFICE LOBBY.

Heterodoxy, it is well understood, is the other fellow's doxy. Likewise it is equally understood that every man thinks it right for him to influence legislation, but wrong for other men. The question now arises regarding the class to which the Post Office lobby belongs. Its operations were a retort to the railway lobby's activity against the railway mail pay proposal of the Post Office. It is not alleged that the railways bribed anybody, or did or concealed anything blameworthy in any other way than by opposing the department's plans, by publicity and argument. The Post Office must have thought the railways were making progress, for it "ordered" Postmasters to inspire communications to Congressmen in support of the department's legislation. Ready-made arguments are supplied for these popular petitions. Congressmen are told that if the Post Office is compelled to pay the railways more, there must be a curtailment of popular Post Office facilities. Is that a good or a bad lobby?

It is to be remarked that the Post Office has means of access to Congress which are not available to the railways. It is the department's duty to make official reports. Prestige and authority attach to them in a degree which puts the railways on the defensive in the beginning. Prejudice instead of prestige attaches to the railways' resistance to the department's proposals. They did not dare to open a lobby at Washington. They had no alternative but to go direct to the people, or to allow the case against them to go by default. The success of the railways' popular campaign has been remarkablie. "Greater New York," the organ of the Merchants' Association, contains this week three pages of expressions of opinion by representative commercial organizations throughout the United States. The mere list of mercantile organizations supporting the railways' request for fair play is too long to reproduce. No doubt these expressions contrary to the department's desires are based on the railways' appeal, but they could not be had by "order." One may be quoted in part, that of the Pittsburgh Commercial Club:

> Resolved, That the plan of space payment for mail carriage proposed by the Bourne and Moon bills is excessively discriminatory in favor of the United States Government, in that it makes for mail-freight carried on passenger trains a rate of only about one-third to one-half the rate paid for high-grade freight carried on freight trains, which conditions will promote the diversion to the mails of large quantities of high-grade merchandise, on all of which the railways will suffer a loss of one-half to two-thirds of their present freight revenues.

That is the dollars and cents of it, in part, but is by no means the whole argument. The Government proposes this jug-handled arrangement without consulting the railways, and proposes to enact fine and imprisonment if the railways decline it. The Government makes itself judge in its own case, in avoidance of the methods which it establishes for all others. The Government proposes to buy space in railway cars, and then fill it with greater weights than could be carried under the present arrangement for the same money. Thus it proposes to make a profit by the loss of the railways. If this fails, the threat is that other facilities will be reduced by the increased sums paid to the railways.

This puts the issue before Congress and the people. Which is the better lobby? Which is the better case? Do the people want service they do not pay for, but which is requisitioned by forms of law in times of peace? Would the people prefer that their facilities should be reduced for that reason, or that fair payment should be made and money enough appropriated to pay the cost? How much of the presumption in the Post Office's favor has been lost by a propaganda which wealthy malefactors would not be heard to defend?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Authorized a Negro Regiment.

As statements of fact, the reasons given by Governor WHITMAN for authorizing the addition to the New York National Guard of a negro regiment will be generally accepted as sound. The black man with the usual qualifications, physical and mental, has the same right as any other citizen to serve the State as a member of its militia, and that he considers it a privilege to do so is as much of a credit to him as is the glad performance of an obvious public duty by anybody else. And about the negro's courage, and his military efficiency, when adequately trained and competently led, there can be no question, as both qualities have been often demonstrated.

The Governor went a little far, perhaps—further, indeed, than he could have safely gone if he had been describing white troops—when he said that "history shows that our negro soldiers have always rendered distinguished service to the country." Even that, however, is sufficiently near the truth to pass for it. But after all this has been admitted, there are other statements of fact that weigh against—which is not to say outweigh—those made by the Governor.

In the first place, it is something distinctly and essentially wrong, as regards service in the National Guard, to divide into separate groups, by race, religion, or social standing, American citizens who, for this particular purpose at least, are supposed and officially declared to be on perfect equality. It is just this dividing, in one form or another, that causes or constitutes the Guard's most serious failure to be what it should. But that objection to a negro regiment must be ignored if there is to be one at all, and the question whether there should be must be determined on other grounds.

The proposed regiment, according to the announcements, is to be "exclusively" negro, and that must mean that its officers as well as its privates are to be negroes—an experiment likely to excite some apprehension. Account must be taken, too, of the probability that coercive measures used by such a regiment at times of internal disorder—during strikes, for instance—would be more hotly resented and resisted than like actions on the part of white soldiers, and thus the disorders would be aggravated.

A Problem for the Engineers.

Our warm weather can hardly be said to have begun, for our often more than tropical Summer is still before us, but already the temperature has risen sufficiently to disclose a decidedly serious fault in one of the street surfacings provided by our municipal rulers.

The wooden pavement laid down on Amsterdam Avenue, in Columbus Circle, and in some other parts of the city, has many good qualities, including those of comparative noiselessness, a better foothold for horses than several other pavements, and a reasonable return in durability for its cost. But the tar that is poured between its joints has a most evil habit of not remaining where it belongs—of coming up to the top and spreading itself in a sticky and unsightly layer, through which pedestrians have to paddle and slip, to the ruination of their shoes and tempers.

People who ought to know about such things soothingly say in answer to complaints about this nuisance that it will be of brief duration and will only occur in the first Summer after a pavement of this kind is laid down. That, however, is a plea in mitigation rather than of justification, and it cannot really be beyond the justly celebrated resources of science as known to engineers so to treat and modify that too aspiring tar as to prevent it from making itself obnoxious even for a single season.

A like inclination on the part of the asphalt pavements has been pretty successfully conquered, and a similar triumph over the perversity of inanimate matter is presumably in store for him who with intelligence, good will and determination attacks this seemingly much simpler problem.

A Problem Full of Difficulty.

Evidently the WAITE trial is little more than the presentation to the jurors of a problem in psychiatry and sociology combined. There are no differences of opinion or contention between defense and prosecution as to what the man did or why he did it. The only question at issue is as to the state of his mind now and at the time when he killed his parents-by-marriage.

The jurors, as is usual in such cases, will be confused rather than helped by the expert testimony submitted to them, for they are told on about equal authority that WAITE is both insane and sane. Normal he evidently is not—a fact demonstrated less by what he did, perhaps, than by the way in which he told his amazing story on the stand. But, as evidently, he is not mad in any of the ordinary senses of that term, for now, as always in the past, he is in complete possession of what would be called "all his faculties," and throughout his life he has been able to escape exciting more than occasional suspicion as to his honesty. Habitual liar and thief as he is known to have been, yet he did not lack pleasing qualities and has had no difficulty in making himself liked by both men and women. His taste for and ability in athletic games are peculiarities not to be expected in a madman.

A notable characteristic of WAITE is that, in spite of his strength and intelligence, he has rarely if ever earned honest money by honest work. There be those who would ascribe that, not to viciousness and laziness, but to actual incapacity for that form of exertion—the same excuse or explanation that they make for most tramps and many criminals. Their theory can be supported with arguments of some plausibility, but its acceptance is still so far from general that it has no place in the statute books.

As a matter of fact, of course, insanity is not a fixed and definite condition. It is of many kinds and almost infinitely numerous gradations, and, most confusing thing of all, the same man may be a raving maniac or driveling idiot as regards one or more subjects, and as sane as anybody else on all others. Indeed, every one of us is regarded as a bit "queer," which is only a euphemism for mad, in at least a single point by all neighbors. And we all are!

The Silence of Mr. Hughes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

No service that a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States might render to his country if he were transferred to the Presidency could compensate for the mischief he would make in shattering our tradition that Justices of the Supreme Bench have taken self-denying vows and put political ambition behind them.

As if this fact were not an all-sufficient reason why Mr. Justice Hughes should not for one moment be thought of for the Republican nomination, he is gratuitously offering another, only less cogent. He is holding his tongue, not after the manner of the statesman, who speaks or is silent as great public interests may require, but he is asking the Republican Party and the American people to buy a pig in a poke. The pretense that he is not a candidate deceives no one. Least of all should it deceive Mr. Hughes, who presumably does not need to be reminded that what the State permits it commands, and that this maxim applies to men in stations of responsibility. Between loquacity and dumbness lie all the possibilities of golden and righteous speech. There are occasions when the public man has no more moral right to hold his tongue than the United States had to keep silent when Belgium was invaded.

FRANKLIN H. GIDDINGS.

Manhattan Indicted.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is no wonder that the population of Manhattan Island diminished by over 100,000 between the two last censuses. When one considers the dirt, the disorder, the crowded subways, the unnecessary noise, the rudeness, the general disregard of others' convenience, and the dialect which has crept so far from its original source on the Bowery, it is easy to see that people who wish to live in comfort and quiet, and to have their children hear only good English, move to the suburbs. It is up to the Manhattanites to make this borough an enjoyable place of abode, or its population will fall off still further.

WISHMARG.

THE DESTROYER.

To reap his harvest,
Death has set them at each other.
Their curtains of red fire and their veils of black smoke
Are his banners.
The hand that murdered the Archduke
Was a hand saluting the Great Monarch.
When he summoned his subjects,
They came
From the four corners of the earth,
And he was sure of his victory.
Do you read of defeat?
It is his triumph!
Do you read of victory?
It is he who has conquered.
Where they are making cannon
And its food,
He is there.
Where they are shaping bombs
In their laboratories,
He stands beside them.
When they search the plains for horses
That men must ride into battle,
His eye sweeps that plain before them.
He is the General of all the armies.
It is his cry that is heard at night—
The cry that torments their dreams.
His voice is in the throat of every one in council
Who says:
"Let this war go on,
That we may win."
He is Master.

ART NOTES.

Petrus Stuyvesant Club Exhibition —Shakespeare Book Plates.

In the graveyard of St. Mark's Church two sheep are tethered. The gray corrugated surface of their wool so much resembles granite that one might assume them monuments carved in memory of those silly ones of Milton's time. But they nibble the grass and give other signs of life, and Petrus Stuyvesant seems to enjoy them. These little touches of nature are the best kind of publicity work for the exhibitions held in the neighborhood of St. Mark's. It would be a pleasure to visit an exhibition of postage stamps if it were held in the gallery of the Petrus Stuyvesant Club. As a matter of fact the art shown there is apt to be tingling with modernity and competent to a degree.

This week groups of drawings by Jerome Myers and Carl Springhorn with some fans by the latter, statuettes and drawings by Ethel Myers, water-colors by Florence Dreyfous and Edith Haworth, pastels by Ethel Louise Paddock, and oil sketches by Edith Haworth are on view. Many of these have been seen in other exhibitions, but it makes a lively little exhibition that will be appreciated by the public to which it addresses itself. It is worthy of note that the work in water-color and pastel is much more effective than the work in oil. Oil color lends itself unwillingly to impetuous sketching. It gets in the way of its artistic message and frequently leads the observer to assume a desperate confusion of mind on the part of the artist.

Bookplates of Tercentenary.

The bookplates entered in the book plate competition of the American Institute of Graphic Arts are on view at the National Arts Club Gallery. The theme was the tercentenary, and the ideas embodied in the designs show a truly remarkable lack of variety. There are many versions of the Shakespeare likeness, there are many special characters from the plays presented in isolated insignificance, there are a few conventional bookish conceptions of bookplate art, and there are two or three admirable and appropriate designs, of which the finest is that bearing the lines:

"His mind was an intellectual ocean whose waves touched all the shores of thought. He knew all crimes and all regrets, all virtues and their rich rewards."

In this design the intricate yet definite ornament, the beautiful drawing, and the dignified spirit of the invention express the importance of the commemoration to a satisfying degree.

Electrical Poster Tour.

Electrical posters by noted artists and illustrators and by art students and high-school pupils from nearly every leading city in the United States are being received in each express delivery at the offices of the National Poster Committee, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street. More than 200 designs done by younger artists in academies and high schools where industrial art is taught have been entered to date. Many have been entered by French, Belgian, Italian, and German artists who have entered the poster field here because of war conditions abroad.

The Poster Committee announces that it will allow artists, art students, and high-school pupils competing for the $2,200 in prizes who reside outside of New York City to place their posters in their home express offices up to midnight, June 1. This affords the artist who lives in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Denver, and other Western cities, where art progress is highly advanced, the same advantages in time accorded artists residing in New York.

All the posters entered will be placed on exhibit in one of New York's big galleries during the week beginning June 19. On June 17 the decision of the judges announcing the winners of the $1,000 prize and the $500 prize will be made. After exhibits of these posters are had during the three following weeks in Boston, Pittsburgh, and Chicago, the winner of the third or public choice prize will be announced with the winners of the five high-school prizes and the art students' prizes.

After these awards the posters will be framed and assembled for an exhibit tour across the continent. This traveling exhibit will be conducted up to the country-wide celebration during America's Electrical Week, Dec. 2 to 9. The Society for Electrical Development, which managed the contest, plans to send the exhibit to South American cities about Dec. 15.

Pronunciation of Pacifist.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You say that "pacifist," if there must be such a word, is presumably to be accented on the second syllable because that syllable is accented in its presumable primitive, "pacific." According to that we should accent "historical," "victorious," "indicative," all on their first syllables. When a word, however badly formed, has a pretense of being of Latin or Greek formation and no pretense of being of any other, and it is too new to have established a customary pronunciation, the only thing we can do is to pronounce it by the rules for pronouncing such words in English. In the case of words ending in "ist," "ism," of real or pretended Latin or Greek formation, the first part of the rule is that the accent must never fall on the syllable just before "ist" if there is any syllable further back. Thus "mechanist," "mechanism," are not accented by the analogy of "mechanical," but on the first syllable. It is only when the word does not pretend to be of Latin or Greek type, but is made by tacking "ist" to a complete English word as such that the accent may get next to the "ist," as in "violinist." In "pianist," although the word is frankly not Latin, the fact that it Latinizes enough to drop the final vowel of "piano" is enough to divide usage, some speakers and dictionaries preferring to accent the first syllable in accordance with the general analogy of words in "ist."

The Looking Glass Country.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just been reading the provisions of the Hay Army bill; discouraged by this travesty on preparedness, I turned to the "Looking Glass Country" for refreshment. Was it allegory or prophecy which I found there recorded in the conversation of Alice with the King?

"Another sandwich!" said the King.

"Hay, then," the King murmured in a faint whisper.

"There's nothing like eating hay when you're faint," he remarked to Alice as he munched away.

"I should think throwing cold water over you would be better," Alice suggested.

"I didn't say there was nothing better," the King replied. "I said there was nothing like it." Which Alice did not venture to deny.

A Stern Word.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In spite of unpreparedness, in spite of all that is said of our weakness, the belligerents of either side are constantly bringing their grievances to the attention of the President, almost like children complaining to a teacher. Perhaps a stern word might bring them to their senses.

THE FATE OF GERMANISM IN THIS COUNTRY.

Only Anglo-Saxon Sterility and Help from the Fatherland Could Save It from Extinction, Argued Lamprecht, the Historian.

An Illuminating Translation from His Book.

By T. M. R. VON KELER.

Montclair, N. J., May 25, 1916.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There has appeared no clearer analysis of German-Americanism than is contained in the latest volume of Lamprecht's history of "Germany's Recent Development," printed just before the war. The author, Germany's leading living historian, puts his finger on the critical phase of German ambitions in the United States and her hopes and fears. The matter that follows is from the chapter on "Foreign Politics," in the second supplementary volume.

T. M. R. VON KELER.

Translation.

[From Lamprecht's work, "Germany's Recent Development," chapter on "Foreign Politics," subdivision, "The Germanic Element and Its Bearing on the United States," second supplementary volume, pp. 531-534.]

There can be no doubt whatever that the North American Germans cannot continue to maintain or retain their characteristics and Germanic ideals—without assistance from home—in the shape of additional immigrants of high calibre. If the German immigration to the United States continues in the future in as small numbers as in the years since 1900, then the German element in the United States will be swallowed!

Besides there is another greater danger to be met. In the first place, we find that slowly and gradually there is being evolved in the United States a true "American Nation," a real homogeneous community of the inhabitants, and this evolution must continue at ever-increasing speed and with ever-growing intensity, with every additional decade of national existence. The longer the United States occupies a seat at the table of the great nations the more thoroughly assimilated will be its inhabitants; they are only just beginning to realize their existence as a distinct nation! This national character, because of the inevitable course of events in the past, must bear a preponderating Anglo-Saxon character, although by no means an "English" one; the German element will be engulfed and absorbed—perhaps with the incorporation of a few Germanic ideas. How long it will take is a question which a future historian will answer; at present the process is going on with continually increasing speed.

The psychological process is still vague and indefinite, but the physiological phase is clearly evident. Or is there anybody who will deny the existence of a peculiar, distinct "American type"? The impartial observer from the distance can see a grave danger to the "Yankees" in just this physiological element—and therefore a consequent hope for the German—because of the alarming increase of sterility among Anglo-Saxon women! Whether the causes be economical or natural-physiological is a matter for dispute; no one can close his eyes to the facts. What this sterility will bring forth in the future is a mystery which the historian has no right to prophesy; for the present, the German element in the United States should make up its mind to submit to a complete absorption into the body of the American Nation.

Be this as it may, the future of Germanism in the United States is decidedly dark and dim; and it is this fact which controls the political relationship between the German-Americans and the Germans at home. In case of war between the United States and Germany the German Empire, although the central representative of Germanism in the world, cannot count on the assistance, or even the sympathy, of the German-Americans, except in the almost incredible case that its cause is so just, so clear, as to banish even the shadow of suspicion. If it should be wrong, even in the slightest degree, American citizens of German descent will inevitably take the part of their adopted country. For the entire domestic and foreign politics of the United States it has been of the utmost importance that the highest offices in the executive and administrative departments have been for years in the hands of anti-Germans, and that the majority of the citizens are moved by distinctly anti-German motives. This can be understood easily when one remembers that the Union can only have two really important opponents among white races—England and Germany! Of these two, England seems to be less feared, and whatever differences may be adjusted or demand adjustment between Englishmen and Americans can be left to some future time! And who knows but that, after having swallowed the Germanic element, America would need fear an argument with England? It would not be improbable to find America and England in the old relationship—the United States a sort of protected stepchild of the British Empire, forming a separate Western half of this empire with Canada, under the gracious, velvet-gloved hand of Great Britain. And if this calculation of England's friends in America should not be fulfilled in just this manner, is it not true that England could always be struck in a vital spot by an invasion and annexation of Canada? So, why should they quarrel with England now! There is really left but a single, serious enemy — possible enemy — Germany! And the German at home must be absorbed, swallowed, eliminated—the greatness of the growing American Nation demands it!

AN UNATTRACTIVE ARMY.

What of Preparedness if Men Will Not Now Enlist.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On May 17 you published a letter from Mr. Henry A. Wise Wood in which he speaks of his interview with Mr. Ford. Mr. Wood should know better than to go to Mr. Ford for a detailed discussion on the question of preparedness or pacificism. Most of us know that Mr. Ford is an idealist and that he is spending his money to back what he thinks are the proper theories.

It is evident from the statements which he has made that Mr. Ford's advertising on the preparedness question is prepared for him by others, and Mr. Wood should seek an interview with the leading spirits who write the advertising.

I should like to say that there is a large number of people, probably a majority, who are not being seriously influenced by the extreme preparedness views of Mr. Wood any more than they are by the extreme pacifist views of Mr. Ford. Most of us do not believe in emotional preparedness. It is all very well to advocate an army big enough to lick any other two countries combined, and a navy of similar proportions, as advocated by Mr. Wood, but it is a great deal more serious matter to obtain the men, material, and money for such an army. Both pacifist and preparedness advocates talk about the great American flag, and shout about the glorious Stars and Stripes, while the audience shouts and yells itself hoarse.

It may be painful to contemplate, but it is a fact that there are mighty few of the men who marched on May 13 who are willing themselves to join the American Army, and there are mighty few who would even recommend that their sons join it. Some would be willing to have their sons go to a college and take up military tactics, some are willing to have their sons go to West Point, and there are quite a few who would make some sacrifice to attend the military training camps. But the men who will join the United States Army are few and far between.

New York provided one hundred and fourteen thousand men in the preparedness march, but there have only been about six hundred men who joined the army for New York City since the recent increase of twenty thousand men. Is it not a fact that enlistment of from four to seven years in the United States Army at obsolete army posts is unattractive to our young men? and is it not time to give that some serious consideration when at the present rate of enlistment it will take sixteen months to recruit our army up to one hundred and sixty thousand, as authorized by the new bill?

Where Is That Utopia?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Very interesting is the protest of the indignant mother whose letter appears in THE TIMES. She speaks of this country as a haven, but appears to have forgotten the meaning of the word. A haven is a place where one is protected from danger, is it not? And who is to protect this tender mother and her two brave boys in the hour of danger? Who is to guarantee them shelter from harm? Does she accept police protection? Has she never realized that she lives in a State that uses violence at times to coerce the lawless? Does she forget that the State would not be here at all if our great-grandfathers had not fought for its independence? She would do well to read the history of the State in which she lives. She asks if, in order to bring up her children according to her convictions, she must flee the State. Logically speaking, she ought to do so at once, for even if her brave boys are taught that it is wrong to fight, they are and must be hereafter the beneficiaries of those who think it right to fight. But where is the Utopia to which she can flee?

Breathing Places for a City.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I suggest to Mr. Fehr of the Park Board that he refuse to allow, or ask the Board of Estimate to refuse to allow, Jasper Oval to be given for the exclusive use of the City College? When we consider the vast part of the population that desires a space in which to "let off energy" in the form of outdoor sports, and compare this number with the relatively few places open for the purpose, it appears unwise to devote any of these places to other uses. Give us more fields for recreation, not less.

J. HAROLD HART.

MR. JOHNSON'S APPOINTEES.

He Says They Were Efficient, Though They Were Democrats.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Nelson S. Spencer said in an address before the City Club that I had violated the principles of decent administration by naming as temporary inspectors in the Bureau of Fire Prevention Democrats presumably suggested by Charles F. Murphy. He thought it was terrible that the President ever thought of replacing Postmaster Morgan with me. I do not desire to discuss the President's evident intention of displacing Postmaster Morgan. I am rather sensitive, however, upon animadversions against my administration of the New York Fire Department.

The facts are these: Under the law, one must make temporary appointments pending the making up of a civil service eligible list. It is not possible to obtain temporary appointees, except that they stand an examination for such temporary places before the Civil Service Commission. The records will show, of course, that each of my temporary appointees passed this examination and was certified to me by our local commission. The Civil Service Commission does not know nor does it care whether these appointees be Democrats, Republicans, or Progressives. The whole charge made by the civil service reformers was that nearly all of my appointees were Democrats. I have never heard to this moment that they were charged with inefficiency. The essence of the wrong was that I, a member of a Democratic Administration, had made only Democratic appointments. The inference is pretty plain, therefore, that no charge would have been lodged had I appointed a fair share of Republicans. These gentlemen argue, in effect, that efficiency is Republican, that decency is Republican, and that the proof of whole-hearted devotion to civil service lies in leavening the flat loaf of Democratic patronage with Republicans. There is no yeast to make the bread of public service rise save Republican yeast. This to me has always been the dogma of hypocrisy. One must inevitably suspect Spencer of this sin. I don't know Spencer, or whether he is in office or not, but if universal history repeats itself and he has any luck at all, his career will be rounded out and his virtue and industry will be rewarded by the blushing acceptance of some commissionership or other, with pay attached. Such reward should, of course, never go to brutal partisans like myself—men who assume that offices should go to friends instead of enemies; men who dare to declare that one can pick a hundred competent Democrats for appointment out of a registration of 300,000.

Spencer knows perfectly well that real civil service was a sort of religion with Mayor Gaynor. He knows that Judge Gaynor lifted it up single-handed and without Spencer's aid or advice. He knows, too, that it remained for Judge Gaynor, a Democratic Mayor, first to take appointees one, two, three down the list and forever drive out the untoward influence of politics in the selection of city servants from the eligible lists. He knows that in the Fire Department the promotion and appointment of men in and out of the uniform force were made, in every single instance, without the interference of any outside influence whatsoever and that we started there a new era, memorable in our civic history. Nor did he tell his City Club diners that those Democratic temporary appointees in the Bureau of Fire Prevention succeeded for the first time in making a breach in the walls of arson and commercial incendiarism, in putting the fear of the Lord into the heart of the firebug, and making the first substantial reduction in New York's fire loss which the city had witnessed since consolidation.

Reading The Times.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I first became acquainted with your paper when I was 11 years old, at which time I only cared for the baseball news. But as time elapsed I discovered that reading just the sporting page would not be cleaning a road to success, therefore I spread my attention to its other pages. As soon as I took office I recommended THE TIMES to the club, and through a clean vote we made it obligatory that at each weekly meeting we go over the editorials for the great benefits thereby attained. We certainly consider the paper invaluable, and we will put up any kind of battle to prove that THE NEW YORK TIMES is incomparable.

ARMY IN DRILLS AT GARDEN PARTY

RED CROSS DOG AS RESCUER

Mrs. Leonard Wood Holds Reception in a Tent—Some of the Women Patrons and Their Gowns.

Governors Island never looked more attractive than yesterday afternoon for its annual garden party for the benefit of the Army Relief Society. The cool weather and brilliant sunshine, the vivid fresh green of the turf, not yet dulled by hot suns, made a fitting setting for the gayly gowned women scattered here and there about the grounds. In a tent on the lawn near the landing for launches Mrs. Leonard Wood held a reception, and those in the tent with her included at different times Mrs. Lindley M. Garrison, Mrs. Charles S. Roe, Miss Harriet Center, and Miss Isabelle Hardie. Mrs. Wood wore a black silk frock topped by a black hat with osprey plumes, and Mrs. Roe was in a white polka-dotted blue foulard with a black hat trimmed with black wheat and tulle.

Mr. and Mrs. Finley J. Shepard and their adopted son were present. Mrs. Shepard wore a tobacco brown satin coat costume, with touches of gold braid and tassels, topped by a small brown hat, trimmed with brown cherries and yellow and white pansies. Mrs. Louis Shepard was also with them, in a cloth coat and skirt, with a close blue hat, touched in yellow.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Eugène Parsons came early. Mrs. Parsons wore a thin black frock with a sugar-cone crown hat in black, with a high spike of small pink roses at the back. Mrs. James R. McKee, a daughter of the late President Harrison, wore a blue taffeta and cloth costume, having a coachman's coat and a high blue hat, and Mrs. Cass Gilbert, who came with Mr. Gilbert, wore a dark brown tailored costume, topped by a high brown hat with many small cream wings.

Others were Mrs. Edward Ringwood Hewitt, in a tailored costume and huge lavender hat, and her daughter, Miss Candace Hewitt, in a green and white awning-striped skirt and plain green coat with hat to match.

The program began with an exhibition of the Red Cross dog, sent by the Army and Navy Dogs Club of the United States, under the direction of Mr. Dittman. The skill of the animal in going through the routine rescue work was followed with much interest.

A number of exhibition aeroplane flights were made from 3:30 o'clock until after sundown, and on one of the last ones a camera man went up and took pictures to be used in the movies.

There was a company drill by disciplinary company, which included silent drill and extended order drill. Lieutenant Casper B. Ruckner, Eighteenth United States Infantry, commanding, and at 4:30 there was a dress parade by the First Provicional Regiment, Coast Artillery Corps, Colonel S. E. Allen, C. A. C., commanding. At 5 o'clock the crowd gathered around the bandstand to hear Miss Anna Fitziu sing "The Star Spangled Banner."

The Officers' Club was open from 5 until 11 o'clock for dancing, and the Eli Orchestra of Yale University and the Twelfth Band, Coast Artillery Corps, from Fort Totten played at Corbin Hall all the evening. Instead of having the supper served in Corbin Hall as during the last two years it was served outside on the lawn under tents after 6 o'clock.

Tents for fortune telling and refreshments were scattered over the grounds, and among those in charge of them were Mrs. E. F. Glenn, Mrs. J. B. Bellinger, Mrs. H. L. Jordan, Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson, Mrs. A. E. Truby, Mrs. E. B. Smith, and Miss Isabelle Hardie. Mrs. F. H. Lawton had charge of the dancing at the Officers' Club, and Mrs. O. B. Mitcham and Mrs. J. L. Chamberlain supervised the supper arrangements, and Mrs. Bradley, the wife of Colonel Bradley, looked after the tea dance tickets.

PEARSE'S LAST LETTER.

Farewell of "Irish President" to His Mother on Eve of Execution.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 26.—The Evening Star prints a farewell letter that Patrick Pearse, President of the short-lived Irish Republic, wrote to his mother on the eve of his execution. It is dated Kilmainham Prison, May 3, and is as follows:

"My dearest Mother:

"I have been hoping up to now it would be possible to see you again, but it does not seem possible. Good-bye, dear, dear mother. Through you I say good-bye to 'Wow Wow,' (a sister,) Mary, Brigid, Willie, Miss B. Miceal, cousin Maggine and everyone at St. Enda's. I hope and believe Willie and the St. Enda boys will be all safe.

"I have written two papers about financial affairs and one about my books which I want you to get. With them are a few poems which I want added to the poems in MS in my bookcase. You asked me to write a little poem which would seem to be said by you about me. I have written it, and a copy is in Arbour Hill Barracks with other papers.

"I just received holy communion. I am happy, except for the great grief of parting from you. This is the death I should have asked for if God had given me the choice of all deaths—to die a soldier's death for Ireland and for freedom. We have done right. People will say hard things of us now, but later on will praise us. Do not grieve for all this but think of it as a sacrifice which God asked of me and of you.

"Good-bye again, dear mother. May God bless you for your great love for me and for your great faith, and may He remember all you have so bravely suffered. I hope soon to see papa, and in a little while we shall be all together again. I have not words to tell you of my love for you and how my heart yearns to you all. I will call to you in my heart at the last moment.

"Your son PAT."

LLOYD GEORGE BEGINS TASK

Talks with Redmond and Carson and Plans Visit to Ireland.

LONDON, May 26.—David Lloyd George has already entered upon the preliminaries of the task that has just been allotted to him—the conciliation of the Irish factions. He had conversations today with John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, and Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, and has planned a course of action which will involve visits to various parts of Ireland and interviews with men of the most diverse opinions.

The fact that Parliament will adjourn next Thursday for three weeks is considered fortunate for his task, as this will make it impossible for any discussion of it to take place while the negotiations are proceeding.

HAD FEW TROOPS IN IRELAND.

Gen. Friend Admits He Judged 2,555 Ample for Any Emergency.

DUBLIN, May 26.—On Easter Monday, the day on which the Irish rebellion began, the number of available British troops in Ireland was only 2,555. This information was given by Major Gen. Cowall, who testified today before the Royal Commission, which is investigating the uprising.

General Friend, who was in command of the British forces in Ireland at the time, admitted that the number of troops was small, and said that until April 1 he had been responsible for this state of affairs, having taken the ground that he had enough men to meet any emergency which might arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of strong measures to suppress the rebellion, but when they heard of the capture of Sir Roger Casement they came to the conclusion that the rising was a fiasco.

It was testified that Baron Wimborne, the Lord Lieutenant, suggested on the night before the rebellion broke out that a raid be made on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of the Sinn Fein Society, but it was decided reinforcements would be needed for such an undertaking, which would entail severe fighting.

Major Gen. Cowall said that if the outbreak had not occurred military action certainly would have been taken within a very brief period.

PRISONERS WELL TREATED.

John O'Connor, M. P., Denies Stories About English Jails.

LONDON, May 26.—John O'Connor, a prominent Nationalist Member of Parliament, in which he has represented North Kildare for many years, declared in a statement issued today, following a visit he had paid to a prison where a large number of Irish citizens accused of participation in the recent rebellion have been detained since their arrival in England, that there was not a shadow of foundation for the allegations of their ill-treatment by the military.

"I went to the prison on Monday last," said Mr. O'Connor, "and interviewed a number of prisoners from that portion of County Kildare comprising my constituency and took statements from them regarding participation in the rebellion with a view to making representations to military headquarters respecting their release. Having concluded that part of my errand I asked if they had any complaints to make concerning their treatment in prison. All replied, 'No.'

"One man, speaking for his companions, said he wished to say that all had been treated well and with every consideration by the military and jail staffs. I asked him if he wished me to publish that and he replied that he desired to have it printed for the benefit of both his friends and the public generally."

Nelson W. Doubleday's Ushers.

Nelson W. Doubleday, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank N. Doubleday of Effendi Hill, Oyster Bay, and whose marriage to Miss Martha J. Nicholson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Nicholson of Providence, will take place on June 10, will have his brother, Felix N. Doubleday, for his best man, and the ushers are to be Eric S. Winston, Stuart H. Johnson, Matthew Looram, Charles M. Fair, Allan S. Locke, Arthur Coates, Winston Coates, F. Huntington Babcock, Winslow S. Pierce, Jr., and Paul C. Nicholson, a brother of the bride. Mrs. Barnes Newberry will be Miss Nicholson's only attendant.

Judge Besson Marries Miss Schieb.

PASSAIC, N. J., May 26.—Miss Jean H. Schieb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jean F. Schieb, of 200 Pennington Avenue, was married to Judge J. H. Rufus Besson of Hoboken today in St. John's Episcopal Church, this city. The Right Rev. Edwin S. Lines, Bishop of Newark, officiated, assisted by the Rev. W. Gordon Bentley. There were no attendants, and only the immediate families were present. The bride is prominent in society here. Returning from a five weeks' wedding trip, Judge and Mrs. Besson will reside in Hoboken.

Neumegen-Tanner Engagement.

The engagement of Mrs. Clara Wagner Tanner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Wagner, to Harold Gordon Neumegen, has been announced. Mr. Neumegen is a native of England, and is now living in Mexico. Their marriage will take place in June, and they will make their home in Mexico City. Mrs. Tanner's father was formerly President of the Union Square Bank.

TIMOTHY DWIGHT, EX-YALE HEAD, DIES

BEGAN REFORMS IN 1886

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 26.—The death of Dr. Timothy Dwight, formerly President of Yale, occurred this morning at his home on Hillhouse Avenue. Soon after arising he was seized with a fainting attack and expired before the arrival of a physician. Although 87 years of age his health had been excellent until recently and he had taken his customary daily walks.

President Hadley of the university is in the West and the funeral will not be held till next Monday afternoon. University officials from all parts of the country will be present. Dr. Dwight was one of the oldest alumni of Yale.

The Rev. Dr. Dwight came of a family long identified with Yale University and is best remembered for his having changed Yale College into Yale University and for his great work in practically doubling the endowments of the institution. He was descended from John Dwight of Dedham, Mass., the original ancester of practically all the New England Dwights. His grandfather was the Rev. Timothy D. Dwight, President of Yale College during 1795-1817.

He was born in Norwich, Conn., and received his early education in the Norwich schools, later preparing for Yale at the Hopkins Grammar School. He entered Yale as a member of the class of 1849, and the surviving members of the class celebrated their fiftieth anniversary at his home in New Haven in his last year as President of Yale University.

Dr. Dwight was graduated with the degree of A. B., and studied in the college for the next two years until he took his A. M. degree. During this time and until 1853, he also took the two-year course at the Yale Theological School, later, in 1861, receiving his formal ordination, although he was licensed to preach several years before. Until 1855, he also served at the college as a tutor. Then, during 1856-57 Dr. Dwight studied in Berlin and Bonn, returning early in 1858, to take the chair of Assistant Professor of Sacred Literature in the Theological School. Three years later, at the age of thirty-three, he became full professor in that subject, and held that position for nearly twenty-five years, until he was elected President of Yale College in 1886.

When he took charge of the college he saw the urgent need for new funds, new buildings, new instructors, and a healthy annual increase in students, and then set about with characteristic energy to obtain these necessities.

At the end of the first six months as President, Dr. Dwight was one of the most popular executives the college had ever seen. Then came the gift of Osborn Hall and the famous "Yale fence" episode, and he compelled the Yale Corporation to say the fence must be destroyed.

Mrs. Osborn gave $200,000 for a memorial to her husband. It was decided that the site of the old fence was the place for the building, and when this became known graduates and undergraduates of the college drew up a monster petition to save the historic landmark. But Dr. Dwight at a meeting of the corporation delivered his ultimatum in a speech in which he said:

"Gentlemen, the corporation did not consider it wise to endanger a gift of some $200,000 for the sake of a little sentiment. You know it is an old saying that lightning does not strike twice in the same place. I suppose that the best reason that has ever been given for this phenomenon of nature is that given by the small boy, 'because it does not have to.' Good day, gentlemen."

Dr. Dwight's régime at the university was notable for the fact that more funds were added to the support of the institution during his thirteen years as President than during the 185 years from the founding of the college in 1701. The university funds were increased from $489,683 to $1,636,975, the academic funds from $941,246 to $1,568,278, the theological funds from $413,585 to $646,810, the Sheffield Scientific School funds from $152,223 to $405,907, the medical funds from $27,651 to $105,794, the law funds from $11,600 to $82,813, the art funds from $75,200 to $103,250, the musical funds from nothing to $5,000, and the permanent funds from $2,111,189 to $4,554,827. In addition to the financial increase, Dr. Dwight built several important buildings, added many courses to the curriculum, and increased the number of students to almost double.

At the Autumn meeting of the Yale Corporation in 1898 he resigned, in accordance with his belief that the President of a university should not serve beyond the age of seventy years.

Dr. Dwight was succeeded in the Presidency by Dr. Arthur Twining Hadley, the present President.

Dr. Dwight was the author of forty-six publications most of them essays relating to academic questions, and many of them written while he was associate editor of The New Englander, during 1866-74.

Morgan & Co., and her elder sisters are Mrs. Lewis Spencer Morris and Mrs. Sumner Gerard, whose brother-in-law is the Ambassador to Germany. Her mother was Miss Emily Pell, a daughter of the late Clarence Pell, and Herbert C. Pell is her uncle. Count Otto's elder brother, Count Ludwig, is military aid to the Governor of Vienna. SCULPTOR WORKS IN CAMP.

Leo Gall, Parisian, Has Atelier Furnished by the Germans.

BERLIN, May 15, (Special Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The authorities of the prison camp at Griesheim, near Darmstadt, have had a small but complete atelier fitted up for Leo Gall, the Parisian sculptor.

The French artist's first work consisted of medallion portraits of the officers of the camp. Additional material was then furnished him, and he has just completed a piece of work which many persons consider the best thing he has ever done. It is a monument for French prisoners who have died in Darmstadt.

The shaft, to be erected in the Darmstadt Cemetery, shows a dying French soldier lying on a flight of marble stairs, his gaze fixed on relief portraits of parents, brothers and sisters on the face of a marble wall which runs along the top of the stairs. From the wall rises a statue personifying France. The names of the dead are carved on the ends of the wall.

MANY TOOK GERMAN BONDS.

Tremendous Increase Reported in Number of Small Subscribers.

BERLIN, May 15, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—When the recent German loan was closed it was the impression among many bankers that small subscribers were not so numerous as for the loan last September. Figures now published show, on the other hand, that the number of small subscribers for this latest loan was greater than for any previous issue.

No fewer than 4,259,988 Germans subscribed 1,000 marks ($238) each, whereas for the September, 1915, loan there were 2,761,212 subscribers of this class, and for the loan of March, 1915, there were 1,943,359 such subscribers. Bankers say that these figures indicate that the war loans are growing more and more popular among the poorer classes.

SURPLUS IN KOHLER ESTATE

Piano Manufacturer's Heirs Ask Division of $1,200,000.

The trustees of the estate of Charles Kohler, the piano manufacturer and owner of racing stables, who died in Paris in 1913, leaving $4,000,000, applied yesterday to Surrogate Fowler for instructions as to what disposition should be made of a surplus of $1,200,000 which was in their hands.

Mr. Kohler in his will created four trust funds for the benefit of his wife and three children, each of whom was to receive $25,000 annually. In addition each child was to receive $100,000 every ten years for a period of thirty years, commencing with their twenty-fifth birthday. The trust funds for the children should go to their heirs, the will stipulated.

According to Senator James A. O'Gorman, who appeared for the trustees, the money was invested in the business of the decedent, which has prospered to such an extent that it brings a return of more than 25 per cent. on the investment. This surplus is likely to accrue yearly, according to present indications, the lawyer said, leaving a large sum after paying the allowances to the widow and children. The children contend that this surplus should be immediately divided among them, and not become part of the residuary estate which would be given to them upon the death of their mother.

Daniel J. Mooney, special guardian for Nils Florman, Jr., the 18-months-old son of Nils Florman, who eloped with Olga Kohler after his engagement to Miss Helen Stallo had been broken, opposed the contention of the other heirs, holding that it was the intention of Mr. Kohler that the children were to receive the annual allowance of $25,000 and nothing more. Since the child would inherit his mother's share of the trust funds, the infant was entitled to the entire surplus, Mr. Mooney asserted.

STAR OF THE NORTH

A Story of the Canadian Wilds and the "Movies"

By Francis William Sullivan

12°. Color Frontispiece. $1.35

Imagine the members of a New York Moving-Picture company, whose director, to secure the proper setting, has located them far north in the Canadian wilds! Imagine the surprise of the leading man, hopelessly lost in the woods, when he suddenly comes upon a beautiful girl, the daughter of a Hudson Bay Post Factor! And imagine the surprising new world opened to the girl, who never had heard of the "movies."

The story is full of thrilling situations, but pictured with rare genuineness, by an author who knows his northland, as readers of "Children of Banishment" will attest.

The Hermit Doctor of Gaya

A Love Story of Modern India

By I. A. R. Wylie

Author of "The Native-Born," etc.

12°, $1.35

The author of "The Native-Born" has given us, in "The Hermit Doctor of Gaya," another vivid picture of Anglo-Indian life, a real hero, not the destructive hero of war, but the man who day by day and hour by hour offers his life freely in the great fight against famine and disease; a heroine of striking personality and character; a tale of love, hardship, mystery, and mutiny; and, above all, a truly interesting story.

Written by a German for Germans. This is the finest piece of pure patriotism which the war has yet produced. Daring everything, even the hatred of his own people, the author flouts the "My-country-right-or-wrong" brand of patriotic appeal, and fearlessly calls to his countrymen in the name of the Right, and of the Right only.

GIANTS TAKE FOURTEENTH SUCCESSIVE GAME, WITH BRAVES THE VICTIMS—YANKEES WIN TWO

GIANTS RAIN HITS ON BRAVES FIELD

Smash Ball in Every Direction and Swamp Luckless Boston by Score of 12 to 1.

AND IT MAKES FOURTEEN

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 26.—Using their bludgeons with telling effect, the climbing clan of McGraw had no trouble in recording their fourteenth consecutive victory today, crushing the Braves under a 12 to 1 score.

Tyler was batted all over the lot and his wildness contributed to the size of the score. If he had anything at all on the ball it was just enough to drift it up against the visitors' bats. As a result the Braves' fielders got plenty of exercise pursuing the ball here, there, and everywhere.

Burns, Doyle, Robertson, and Merkle drove out some lusty smashes, and the Giants bunched their hits off Lefty, taking advantage of almost every opportunity that was presented. They amassed a total of fourteen hits.

Jeff Tesreau started for the Giants, but a hot one from Tyler's bat in the second inning injured the little finger of his pitching hand and when the Braves came to the bat in the following inning they found themselves facing Ralph Stroud.

Ralph had a very easy time, as the Giants climbed into the lead in the third and were never headed. The capricious wind bothered the Boston fielders a bit, but not the Giants, Kauff and Robertson making some excellent catches. Other fielding features were contributed by Maranville, Doyle, Merkle, and Fletcher.

A triple by Burns and a sacrifice fly by Doyle gave the Giants a run in the opening inning, but the Braves made it a tie in the second, when Compton singled and Gowdy doubled, the former scoring on Tyler's smash which injured Tesreau. Fletcher recovered the ball in time to get Tyler at first.

Tyler forced in a run in the third. Burns and Doyle got on by passes and Robertson sandwiched a hit between them. There was one down, but Ty could not get them over to Kauff, passing him and forcing in Burns. A sacrifice fly by Fletcher scored Robertson.

A single by Robertson, a triple by Doyle, and the mussing up by Smith of Bennie Kauff's squeeze gave the Giants two more in the fifth. In the seventh a pass to Burns, a hit by Robertson, a wild pitch by Tyler, a sacrifice fly by Doyle, and Maranville's foolish attempt to run down Kauff, who had been caught between first and second, added an additional pair to the Giants' score.

Fletcher was hit by Tyler in the eighth—and it looked as if the act was deliberate—and advanced to third on outs and scored on a single by Kelly, who batted for Rariden.

The ninth was a merry-go-round. Burns doubled, went to third on a sacrifice by Robertson, and scored on Doyle's double. Kauff walked and Fletcher beat out an infield hit, filling the bases. Merkle's hit scored Doyle and Kauff, and a safe smash by McKechnie put Fletcher over. Kauff was caught off first three times. The score:

HUMMER HOLDS WESLEYAN.

Union Pitcher Puzzles Middletown Men, Who Lose by 7 to 1.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., May 26.—Wesleyan was unable to hit Hummer at crucial times and lost to Union here today by a score of 7 to 1. Hummer was in rare form, continuing the work of last Saturday, when he fanned twenty St. John's batsmen.

Wesleyan made six singles, but fourteen men returned to the bench by the strikeout route. The visitors used two pitchers, but neither was effective. The score by innings:

Army and Navy Nines Meet Today.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 26.—With seven Cabinet Officers, including Secretary of the Navy Daniels, assured as rooters, and with the weather man planning to give them the best sample he has in his basket, the Army and Navy baseball teams are to meet here tomorrow afternoon in the annual interservice championship battles. The Army lads arrived this afternoon. The Navy's chances, formerly looked upon as not more than even, were given a bump today with the announcement that Connolly, 'Varsity catcher, had been sent to the hospital with a badly sprained ankle.

TIMELY HITS WIN TWO FOR YANKEES

Grand Stand Finishes of the Grandest Kind Put Red Sox on Short End Twice.

The Yanks launched two skyrocket finishes on the World's Champion Red Sox yesterday, winning both games of a double-header in two dynamic rallies which electrified the nervous systems of more than 12,000 persons who had surged into the Polo Grounds for the first double-header of the season. The Yanks took the first game 2 to 1 in a ninth-inning rally and they rushed from the rear in the second game and beat the Red Sox, 6 to 5, in the glittering tenth.

Walter Pipp set off a big wad of guncotton in the ninth inning of the first game. The score was gummed up at 1 to 1, when Gedeon jammed out a double. Paddy Baumann contributed an infield hit and Pipp unbottled a huge drive to right field which would have been good for three bases. It sent Gedeon scampering home with the winning run and Pipp got credit for only a single. It was the longest single in the history of the Polo Grounds.

Now just take a peek at the second game. A cyclone of hits tied the score for the Yanks at 5 to 5 in the eighth, and in the tenth, with two down, Walters singled and went to second on an error. He traveled home with the victory on Bob Shawkey's singeing single. These two uproars constituted the biggest baseball bargains ever offered to the customers of the Yankees.

The opener was a pitching duel between Fisher and Leonard, the Yankees' timely hitting giving the Vermont schoolmaster the better of the argument. The Bostons scored in the sixth when Fisher became liberal and walked Leonard and Hooper. Barry rolled a grounder to Pipp, who forced Leonard at third. Duffy Lewis singled and scored Hooper.

The Yankees tied it up in the seventh. After Magee had fanned, Gedeon singled to left. He was forced at second by Baumann, who scooted to third on Thomas's error and second on Pipp's single.

Then came the ninth, when Gedeon doubled, Baumann singled and Pipp won the game by driving Gedeon home. Pipp not only drove in both tallies but he also made a bare-handed circus stop of Thomas's flaring hopper in the fifth and got the ball to Fisher in time to retire the runner at first.

The second game saw the New York debut of Allen Russell, the Yankees' young pitcher from Richmond. Russell was nervous in the seventh and did much toward defeating his own ends with a couple of wild throws. Both clubs used enough pitchers to start a new league. The Yankees called upon Russell, Markle, Keating and Shawkey, while the Red Sox used up Vean Gregg, Carl Mays and Sambo Jones.

Gregg believes in conserving his strength, so he sleeps five minutes between each two pitches of the ball. If Gregg had not been extracted night would have swallowed the Polo Grounds before the sixth inning was reached.

The Yankees assumed a good lead in the second. Baumann singled and Pipp sacrificed. Dan Boone sent a short single to centre and Baumann rushed home. He would have been out at the plate by several feet if Sam Agnew had not dropped the ball. Boone went to second on the misplay and reached third on another error by Agnew. High uncorked a tiny bit of a Texas leaguer just back of the infield and Boone scored. High was out stealing and Walters got a double because Lewis lost the ball in the sun's glare. Russell accepted a pass and Gilhooley beat out an infield tap, filling the bases. Lee Magee had a fine chance to clean up, but Lee blew, rocketing to Lewis.

Boston took the lead in the fourth. Hoblitzel walked and scored on Walker's triple. Gardner's single scored Walker. Janvrin sacrificed and Agnew was safe on Boone's error. Henriksen, in the role of pinch hitter, flied to High and Gardner romped in after the catch. Walters let the ball slip through him and Gardner scored.

Boston got two more in the seventh. Agnew walked and Mays rolled to Russell, who made a wild throw to second to get Agnew. Hooper sacrificed and Barry rolled to Russell. Russell threw the ball home to get Agnew, but he bounded the ball off the runner's head and Agnew and Mays counted.

With two out in the eighth, the Yanks woke up and pounded Mays's elusive underhand ball for five hits and three runs, and tied the score. Pipp, Boone, High, Walters and Caldwell all hit in a row, Boone's contribution being a double.

With two down in the tenth, Walters singled toward first, the ball bounding to Barry, who made a bad toss to Jones, covering the bag. Shawkey then smashed out a single which scored Walters with the winning run. The scores:

OUST ROBINS FROM LEAD.

Phillies, Headed by Alexander, Win and Reach Top.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 26.—Alexander, the star hurler of the Phillies, who has at times been soft picking for the Brooklyn aggregation, got dire revenge here this afternoon in the first contest of the series to decide the possession of first place in the pennant race. He downed the aspiring Superbas by the score of 1 to 0, and thrust them back into second place, while the champions now are back at the top of the roost.

Alexander had the able assistance of his teammates, who backed him up in brilliant fashion.

It took a pinchhitter and a weird throw by O'Mara to clinch the game in the eighth session. Then, with Whitted on second as the result of a double to left field, Manager Moran took Cooper from the game and sent Stock to the plate. Stock singled, and when O'Mara threw too late to first, the ball went to the grandstand and Whitted scored the lone tally of the contest.

While both pitchers were hit hard, the game was a battle between Sherrod Smith and Alexander, and the honors were even. The local twirler was batted hard in spots, especially in the sixth when Brooklyn filled the sacks on three singles with only one man out. On Cutshaw's short fly to Cravath, Stengel tried to score from third and was put out on Gavvy's perfect throw to Killifer. That was the last chance the Dodgers had to score, for Alexander got stronger from then on and easily blanked his opponents.

A crowd of more than 8,000 turned out to welcome home the Phillies after their fine road trip, and there was plenty of good work for the onlookers to enjoy. The score:

BLOOM OUTPOINTS MORAN.

New Orleans Boxer Game but Outclassed by Brooklynite.

Vic Moran, the New Orleans lightweight, who arrived in this city several weeks ago with the reputation of having ability and being a heavy hitter, showed last night that, although he is able to withstand punishment, he still has considerable to learn about the boxing game before he can be seriously considered as a championship contender. He boxed Phil Bloom, the Brooklyn lightweight, in the feature bout of ten rounds at the Harlem Sporting Club, 135th Street and Madison Avenue, last night, and in eight of the sessions Bloom so far outclassed his opponent as to leave no doubt of the former's superiority.

In only one round did the Southern lightweight show to advantage. This was the fourth, in which session he started from his corner with a rush and had his adversary on the defensive throughout. Again in the closing round Moran essayed to assume the aggressive and for a time surprised Bloom with his attack.

However, Bloom's work in the other eight rounds gave him a wide margin of victory. He used a left hand jab effectively throughout and frequently jarred Moran with a right cross to the jaw.

The other contest scheduled for ten rounds, between Young Brown of the East Side and Bobby Sanders of the T. M. H. A. was stopped by Referee McPartland in the third session to save Sanders from further punishment. Larry Murtha outpointed Charlie Goodman in a six-round exhibition.

GIBBONS TO BOX DILLON.

Pollok Signs St. Paul Phantom for Ten-Round Bout.

Harry Pollok, manager of the Washington Park Sporting Club, signed Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul middleweight, yesterday to box ten rounds with Jack Dillon, the so-called man-killer of Indianapolis, some time in the latter part of June. Dillon has not yet agreed to box Gibbons, but Pollok is practically certain that the Indianapolis man will accept his terms. The local promoter had been trying to match Dillon with Frank Moran, but has abandoned his efforts.

COMELY WINS FAST RACE AT BELMONT

Fair weather and the promise of good racing brought out another good-sized mid-week crowd to Belmont Park yesterday, the second day of the Westchester Racing Association's Spring meeting. The program was made up of sprint events with a two-mile steeplechase.

James Butler's Comely was an easy winner in a five-and-a-half furlong dash up the straight course. It was a condition event, just suited to the filly. The winner showed vast improvement over her race at Jamaica, when she was defeated by He Will a little over a week ago.

Comely had all the early speed, and although Phosphor led for half a furlong at the start she soon caught the Peep o' Day colt and went to the front, and from then on won as she pleased. The time of the race, 1:05, was just a second slower than the track record, which was made by Captain Cassatt's Spring Board, three years ago. Phosphor, who ran second to Comely, did not show his true form and appeared not to be ready.

The first of the two-year-olds which John E. Madden brought from Kentucky in his string of thirty-five thoroughbreds some two weeks ago, made an impressive showing in a four and a half furlongs straight dash for fillies. Cheer and Yankee Witch came in first and second, bearing the colors of the owner of Hamburg Place.

Hustler, Thomas Hitchcock's good jumper, defeated a fairly good field of timber-toppers in the two-mile steeplechase. Superhuman was second and Traditioner third. August Belmont's Top Hat was a starter, but refused to go beyond the fence, opposite the lower stand, the same place at which he stopped in the New York Steeplechase on the opening day.

Hustler, besides being a good jumper, has plenty of speed, and Franklin nursed him along cleverly until the beginning of the second time around the course, when he started to ride in earnest. He assumed command then, and had a decidedly good lead coming to the last jump, which he took perfectly. Haynes, on Superhuman, tried to race with the leader, but could not go the pace, and was ten lengths behind at the finish.

A really stirring finish was seen in the final event when four horses came past the judge's stand with the winner a short length to the good and the other three noses apart. The race went to E. C. Griffith's Charmeuse.

The opening event for maiden two-year-olds, a selling race, went to Mrs. Godfrey Preece's Radiant Flower. Tootsie, a bay filly from the Bright Stable, which came in fourth and entered at $400, was claimed by Kimball Patterson for $800.

Mrs. S. S. Gray of San Francisco, driving her own motor—said to be the first woman to hold a license in her home city—on entering the automobile gate at Belmont Park ran into Harry Gray, a Pinkerton employe, who was knocked down and sustained a fracture of the leg and a dislocation of the hip.

The Palace Stable's Estimable, which won the second race, a selling event, was bid up from the entered price of $800 to $1,200. The filly was protected by the stable.

The summary, with the straight, place, and show odds:

BOSTON, Mass., May 26.—At the Country Club of Brookline, in this morning's final match of the Boston Women's Golf Association championship, Miss Vera Ramsey of the Salem Golf Club and Miss Eleanor W. Allen of Oakley gave the gallery an exhibition of excellent golf. Miss Ramsey won the title for the second time by defeating Miss Allen by 3 and 2.

Miss Ramsey played brilliantly at times, and had a medal score of 83 for her round after playing out the bye holes, which is a record for the course for women. Miss Allen had an 87.

Miss Allen, after being fourth down at the eighth, drew up on even terms with her opponent. The Oakley player started her inward journey with holes in 3, 4, 4, 4, amazing for a woman contestant, and her putting was deadly and consistent. Miss Ramsey finished counting the bye holes in 3, 4, 4 for the last three. She will compete in the women's Eastern championship at Manchester, Mass., the week of June 5.

MISS CAVERLY GETS TITLE.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 26.—Miss Mildred Caverly of the Philadelphia Cricket Club, who has only been playing golf for about five years, and who only entered the competition at the last moment, won the women's international championship of Philadelphia today by defeating Mrs. George S. Munson of Merion, 7 up and 6 to play, in the final match of the twentieth annual tournament, played over the links of the White Marsh Valley Country Club. Both Miss Caverly and Mrs. Munson were a trifle nervous when they started out, and tried their best to present the first hole to each other. Eventually, after considerable dubbing around, Miss Caverly was successful, and handed over the hole by missing a trifling little putt.

That was the last hole she lost, however, for Mrs. Munson grew generous in turn and presented the second hole to Miss Caverly by hooking her second into the rough and being short on her third, while Miss Caverly kept going down the course. They both got a lot of bad golf out of their systems on the third, but Mrs. Munson had all the worst of the luck, got into the creek, got into an impossible lie, and finally lost the hole by 9 to 8.

It was obvious to the large gallery following the match that it was practically decided. Mrs. Munson managed to halve the tenth, but she tossed the eleventh away by dubbing her third shot, going to the long eleventh, while Miss Caverly, although she did not play the hole perfectly by any means, was always well up on each shot, and eventually holed out in six to Mrs. Munson's seven.

Facing almost sure defeat, Mrs. Munson had more bad luck when her drive went out of bounds at the twelfth. This settled the match, for Miss Caverly playe dthe hole perfectly and was down in par 3, winning the hole and match by 7 up and 6 to play.

ENGLEWOOD WOMEN WIN.

Defeat Hackensack and Remain in Van in Golf Tourney.

Led by Miss Georgiana M. Bishop, former national champion, the undefeated Englewood team won from Hackensack yesterday and continues to top the New Jersey list in the team competition of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association. The former national and metropolitan titleholder won all three possible points again her opponent, Mrs. T. F. B. Nielson, and her example was so encouraging that her teammates duplicated her feat and swept Hackensack into a 12-0 defeat. Baltusrol and Cranford played over the Cranford links yesterday, and by losing the match 6-2, the Cranford team is displaced from second position which it held jointly with Baltusrol, and slips to the third rung.

Arcola defeated Montclair rather easily, the Montclair Captain, Mrs. W. H. Loftus, being the only visiting player to win her match. The Westfield-Hollywood match at Westfield, won by the home club 1-0, was the closest contest yet played in this competition. Three of the matches were square at the turn and the home hole, and the winning point for Westfield was scored by Mrs. Spencer Gales, who gained a one-point advantage over Mrs. H. Goldsmith of Hollywood. The Westfield Captain, Mrs. A. E. Keller, played valiantly and held Mrs. L. Grumbach to a tie score. Forest Hill defaulted to Plainfield. The summaries:

PRINCETON EIGHT IS THE FAVORITE

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 26.—With every indication of fine weather and the largest crowd that has ever witnessed a regatta on Cayuga Lake, the Cornell, Princeton, and Yale 'Varsity and freshman crews are ready tonight for the big contest on Cayuga Lake tomorrow afternoon.

On the basis of previous performances experts favor the Tigers in the 'Varsity contest, but little money was wagered tonight. It had been reported that large rolls of Yale money were waiting to be placed, but thus far the Eli cash has not shown.

Coach Courtney, it was learned late tonight, is considering sending the third Cornell 'Varsity crew against Princeton and Yale in the 'Varsity race. This is not surprising, as the third combination is the fastest of the Red and White crews for the short course. The first 'Varsity probably will be saved for the Poughkeepsie regatta, it being essentially a four-mile crew.

Marked improvement by the Yale 'Varsity eight, and Courtney's last-minute decision to enter an entirely new 'Varsity eight—a crew which in practice the last two days has shown superiority over the eight that represented Cornell against Harvard last Saturday—combine to make it appear that the 'Varsity race will be close.

The Princeton crew, in practice today, made a favorable impression, rowing with smoothness and power. Cornell, on the other hand, while displaying strength, is cruder than the Tigers. The Yale crew seemed strong and got speed out of the shell today. The Blue is heavier than either Cornell or Princeton, and in smooth water is likely to be dangerous. The Yale freshman crew is highly regarded.

In the drawing for positions today Princeton got the inside course nearest the shore, Cornell is in the middle, and Yale on the outside. In the freshman race Yale has the inside course, Cornell the second course, with Princeton on the outside. The regatta is to start at 5 o'clock, and if water conditions are not suitable then for the 'Varsity race, another of the races on the program will be rowed.

The Princeton 'Varsity and freshman crews rowed this morning for their last work-out. They did little more than paddle over the course. The Yale 'Varsity and freshman eights, which arrived this morning from New Haven, went out for practice this afternoon, chiefly to familiarize themselves with the course.

The Cornell flotilla of five crews paddled down the west shore late this afternoon and the new 'Varsity eight came back over the course in a final practice spin this evening.

Coach Spaeth of Princeton said that Princeton had a good 'Varsity crew and that the freshman eight was unusually good for the Tigers. Captain Seth Low of Yale spoke highly of the freshman eight and said the 'Varsity was a good average Yale crew. Coach Courtney of Cornell and Assistant Coach John Hoyle had nothing to say. It is obvious, however, that they believe their new eight will make a better showing than did the original 'Varsity in the Harvard race last Saturday. Weather probabilities are cloudy and warmer.

GOLF MEDALIST A CADDY.

Youth Loses Newark Trophy—Allsopp Wins City Title.

After a series of curious incidents the two-day tournament for the golf championship of Newark at the Forest Hill links, held in conjunction with the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the founding of the city, closed yesterday. Albert E. Allsopp defeated Lewis A. Wilson by 1 up in the final round of the first eight and captured the title.

It turned out that the winner of the medal in the qualifying round on Wednesday was a caddie at the Essex County Country Club links, a red-headed, eighteen-year-old boy, John E. Connor by name, and consequently he was informed that under the rules of the U. S. G. A. he was placed in the same category with Alec Smith, Walter Hagen and other famous professionals, and the medal was not for him.

To add to the difficulties of running off the tournament, a priest from a neighboring parochial school appeared on the scene, and with the aid of an assisting truant officer reclaimed many of his wandering charges who were carrying bags, to their great annoyance and the chagrin of the golfers who lost their caddies. The finalists found it rather disconcerting to reach complacently for a putter and to find an abandoned bag with no sign of a caddie where one had stood the previous moment.

W. W. Lyons, the senior golfer, who has not missed the Apawamis fixture in the last seven years, was a contestant at the Forest Hill links, and is now the proud possessor of a medal which he won as runner-up in the fifth eight. George Compton and Victor Christl tied for low net in the eighteen hole medal play handicap yesterday with net scores of 66. The summaries:

First Eight, Semi-Final Round.—A. E. Allsopp defeated E. E. Allsopp, 6 and 4; L. A. Wilson defeated V. O. Christl, 2 up. Final Round.—Allsopp defeated Wilson, 1 up.

Second Eight, Semi-Final Round.—W. T. Allsopp defeated Thomas Allsopp, 3 and 1; H. Hutchinson defeated D. H. Smith, 3 and 2. Final Round.—Allsopp defeated Hutchinson, 1 up.

Third Eight, Semi-Final Round.—R. Kuebler defeated Victor Christl, 4 and 3; M. W. French defeated H. B. Salmon, 1 up, (21 holes.) Final Round.—French defeated Kuebler, 3 and 2.

Fourth Eight, Semi-Final Round.—A. M. Linnett defeated R. W. Erler, 4 and 3; W. T. Chisholm defeated C. L. Cameron, 6 and 5. Final Round.—Chisholm defeated Linnett, 1 up.

Fifth Eight, Semi-Final Round.—W. W. Lyons defeated W. T. Becker, 2 and 1; J. F. Potter defeated W. H. Dale, 5 and 4. Final Round.—Potter defeated Lyons, 5 and 4.

Rockaway Sporting Club Closed.

The Rockaway Sporting Club of Rockaway was closed last night under orders issued by Fred A. Wenck, Chairman of the State Athletic Commission. The officials of the club obtained their license under the name of the Harlem Sporting Club, but in issuing tickets and press notices they have used the name Rockaway Sporting Club, in violation, Mr. Wenck says, of the regulations.

Whites Win at Polo.

In a Squadron A practice polo game at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday the Whites beat the Reds by 5 goals to 4. The decisive goal was kicked for the Whites by a ubiquitous pony, keen on the game and evidently filled with the desire to have his team capture the match. Eight periods were played, the pony ending a tie and gaining the winning goal from a scrimmage near the close of the last seven and one-half minutes of play.

The line-up and score:

Whites.—E. C. Eastman, (1,) G. F. Johnson, (1,) W. B. Eaton, (1,) Dr. Richards, (1,) Dr. Blackwell, pony, (1.) Total, 5.

Moran to Have Bout with Leonard.

Billy Gibson, manager of Benny Leonard, looked upon as the most formidable candidate for Freddie Welsh's lightweight championship, after watching the performance of Vic Moran, the New Orleans lightweight, in his bout with Phil Bloom at the Harlem Sporting Club last night, tentatively agreed to allow Leonard to box the Southern pugilist in the near future. This announcement was made immediately after the Moran-Bloom bout. No definite negotiations have been entered into by the managers of the boxers as yet, but it is probable that the contest will be staged within a few weeks at the Harlem Club.

COLLEGE STARS QUALIFY IN TEST

CORNELL QUALIFIES EIGHTEEN ATHLETES

CALIFORNIANS DO WELL

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 26.—Athletes from fifteen colleges, members of the Intercollegiate Athletic Association, qualified in the trials in eleven of the thirteen events conducted in the Harvard stadium this afternoon at the forty-first annual championship meeting. The first day's trials brought out few extraordinarily good performances, but, for the most part, the track and field event men displayed the form expected and there was not much to upset the general calculations.

Cornell made the looked-for showing, scoring the highest number of qualifiers for tomorrow's finals. Eighteen members of Jack Moakley's team will be in the championship lists as the result of the eliminations, the Ithacans counting in every contest, with thirteen men in the track events and one in each of the five field events. Yale ran a close second to Cornell, scoring fifteen men and missing qualifications only in the quarter-mile run and the hammer throw. Of these, eight were in the track events and seven in the field events.

The count for the other colleges was: Harvard, 8; Pennsylvania, Leland Stanford, Dartmouth, Princeton, and California, 7 each; Michigan, 6; Pennsylvania State, 4; Syracuse and Bowdoin, 2 each, and Massachusetts Technology, Rutgers, and Swarthmore, 1 each—a total of 93.

Californians Qualify Fourteen.

The two California teams together put men into seven different events, six of the fourteen coast athletes qualifying for three track events and eight getting into the field events, being shut out only in the pole vault.

Captain F. S. Murray of the Leland Stanford team made good his promise in the high hurdles. Three times this year in the West he has been credited with a record of 15 seconds flat, and he did it again today. The time, however, was not allowed because of the high wind that was at the California hurdler's back. He simply flew through his race, beating Hammitt of Pennsylvania State by a wide margin. Murray's time was a fifth of a second better than the intercollegiate and collegiate record made by A. B. Shaw of Dartmouth in 1908. Murray's form was such that he is now an even greater favorite for tomorrow's final event, and it is the belief of those who watched him today that he will be able to duplicate his performance without any assistance from the wind. No claim was made by Stanford for the record, and no claim will be made.

Besides the hurdle record which was not allowed, another intercollegiate mark narrowly escaped going by the board. This was in the broad jump, in which Harry Worthington of Dartmouth, whose jump of 23 feet and 8 inches at Springfield last week was not allowed as a New England record because of the wind. Today Worthington cleared 24 feet 7⅛ inches, which is 3⅛ inches better than A. C. Kraenzlein's record, made for Pennsylvania seventeen years ago; but today Worthington, who is an unusually clean jumper, fouled by one-eighth of an inch and consequently his mark was thrown into the discard. Last year, at Philadelphia, Worthington jumped twelve times and did not foul once.

Even Time in the 100.

The performance of Murray and Worthington were by all means the best of the trials. In the 100-yard dash, two men, Moore of Princeton and Teschner of Harvard, ran in even time, but 22 seconds flat was the best that was done in the furlong dash down to the sixth trial heat, which Kaufman of Pennsylvania won in 21 4-5 seconds. The quarter mile heats were three in number, 50 1-5 seconds being the fastest and 50 2-5 seconds the slowest. Meredith of Penn, Willcox of Harvard, and Riley of Dartmouth winning in order.

Both the half-mile heats were done in 1:58 4-5, the fields in each race being well bunched. Meredith and Windnagle each won, and the qualifying field behind them included all the stars except Ufer of Michigan. Wolverton of Yale, however, ran carelessly in the second heat and just got inside the finishing five.

In the hurdle races there were three 0:15 3-5 heats and one of 0:15 2-5, there being no real upsets, while in the low hurdles Norton of California was the fastest topper, running in 0:24 1-5, which was three-fifths of a second faster than any of the other four preliminary heats.

Good Performances in Field.

There were some splendid performances in the field events. All six of the finalists for the pole vault cleared 12 feet 4 inches, the most prominent man eliminated being Haydock of Harvard, who did two inches better than that height two weeks ago. There was much good work in the broad jump also, four of the six men doing better than 23 feet. Worthington led the field with a leap of 24 feet ¼ inch, while Oler of Yale bettered Sisson of Leland Stanford by almost half a foot. Worthington looks like the sure winner tomorrow, and a promising possibility for a new intercollegiate mark. Richards of Cornell did not qualify in the broad jump, clearing only 21 feet 4 inches.

In the shot-put Liversedge of California led the field with 46 feet 2½ inches, beating Spears of Dartmouth, the second man, by considerably more than a foot. Caughey of Leland Stanford also did better than 44 feet. Bowdoin's hammer-thrower, Leadbetter, who was credited with doing more than 168 feet in practice early in the week, had to be satisfied with 155 feet 2 inches, which placed him ahead in the field of qualifiers, with Richardson of California less than seven inches behind.

The Californians, in spite of the fact that they have unbalanced teams, will surely make a lot of points in the field events in the finals. It is not impossible that the teams together can win the meeting, but it seems unlikely, since there are many Easterners in the lists who surely will do better under the eleventh-hour pressure than they did today.

Cornell has come almost up to expectations save for the elimination of a hurdler or two. The Cornell half-miler, Taylor, looked good, and Windnagle did some real running in the half-mile. In the sprints Moore of Princeton surely appeared in better trim than did Smith of Michigan, while Teschner gave every promise of being a double sprint winner in the finals. Meredith ran the half and quarter like a champion. The summaries:

100-Yard Dash—A. F. Van Winkle, W. C. Bartsch, K. Kelly, and A. L. Culbertson, Cornell; E. A. Teschner and W. Moore, Harvard; H. L. Smith and H. E. O'Brien, Michigan; O. L. Dolbin, Penn. State; F. Kaufman, Pennsylvania; W. B. Moore, Princeton; H. I. Treadway, Yale. Best time, 10 seconds, by Teschner and W. B. Moore.

NEW CRAFT IS LAUNCHED.

J. Fred Brown's Yacht Is Designed to Race Vanderbilt's Vagrant.

The new schooner yacht Mariette, belonging to J. Fred Brown of the Boston and Eastern Yacht Clubs, has been launched from the Herreshoff yards at Bristol, R. I. She was designed by N. G. Herreshoff and confessedly built to give Rear Commodore Harold S. Vanderbilt's schooner Vagrant a race worth while in an open regatta. Mariette is almost a counterpart of the Vagrant, being but three feet longer on over-all measurement—112 feet and 9 feet on the waterline—89 feet. Their beam is the same, 24 feet, and the draught is 14 feet 10 inches for the Vagrant as against 14 feet 6 inches for the Mariette. Richard Sherlock, a well-known yachting skipper in Eastern waters, is to command the new craft.

YACHT CLUBS OPEN TODAY.

Seawanhaka-Corinthian and Colonial Will Begin Activities.

About fifty members of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club attended the annual May mess dinner at the clubhouse last evening, the event being the preliminary to the opening of the season at the Oyster Bay yachting rendezvous. Commodore Howard C. Smith presided for the first time as the chief officer of the club. At 10 o'clock this morning the club will formally go into commission, with the hoisting of the club's burgee on the club flagstaff and the dressing of all the ships in the harbor. In the afternoon the new one-design craft, added to the fleet of the club this month, will have their first race.

The Colonial Yacht Club, at the foot of 140th Street and the Hudson River, will go into commission this afternoon with the usual formalities. More than half of the 120 boats owned by members had been put overboard yesterday and will dress ship in honor of the opening. Half a dozen of the new motor-propelled boats just added to the fleet will be ready for inspection, and if the weather is propitious a number of impromptu races will be run.

AUTOS REACH HIGH SPEED.

Oldfield, Resta, and Aitken Flash About Indianapolis Circuit.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 26.—Ten drivers today qualified their cars for the 300-mile race which will be run on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway May 30. The trials will be continued tomorrow, when a score more drivers will attempt to make a lap of the brick oval at a speed of eighty miles an hour or better in order to be permitted to start in the race.

John Aitken, Dario Resta, and Barney Oldfield made the best speed in today's trials. Aitken averaged 95.95 miles an hour despite a bad cross wind. Both Resta and Oldfield made a lap at a trifle more than 94 miles an hour.

SOLDIERS COMPETE TODAY.

Records in Danger at Military League's First Outdoor Games.

New York's soldier-athletes are on edge for the first outdoor championships of the Military Athletic League, which embraces all the local National Guard organizations, to be held this afternoon at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway, in connection with the preparedness exhibition. The guardsmen, who have been in training for weeks for these games, are ready to eclipse a few records on the supposedly fast track at the Speedway. The fight for the team championships is expected to be the closest in years, with the Seventy-first, Fourteenth, and Thirteenth Regiments looming up strongest.

Competition Begins for Tennis Championship of Long Island.

The first of the junior tennis tournaments in this section began yesterday afternoon on the courts of the Kings County Tennis Club, the event being to decide the junior championship of Long Island. In conjunction with this, a boys' tournament is also being held.

VOSHELL REACHES FINAL.

Easily Defeats C. C. Chambers in Bronx County Championship.

S. Howard Voshell came through to the final round of the Bronx County championship on the courts of the New York Lawn Tennis Club yesterday when he defeated C. C. Chambers 6—1, 6—1. Allan Behr defeated William Bostford in winning his way to the semi-final bracket at 2—6, 8—6, 6—3, and then played Abraham Bassford, Jr. This match, however, was not completed, the score being 5 all in the first set when a postponement was necessary.

The semi-finals and the final of the doubles will be played today, and the final of the singles will go over until tomorrow. The summary:

Bronx County Championship, Singles—Fifth Round.—Allan Behr defeated William Botsford, 2—6, 8—6, 6—3.

MRS. WOOD AND MISS HANDY WIN DOUBLES

Take Final in Pelham Tennis Event—Mrs. Raymond to Meet Miss Bjurstedt Today.

Mrs. Rawson Wood and Miss Edith Handy won the doubles event at the women's invitation tennis tournament at the Pelham Country Club yesterday afternoon when they defeated Miss Marie Wagner and Miss Martha Guthrie in the final round. The match was, unfortunately, not played out. With each team having won a set and the score 4 all in the third, Miss Wagner and Miss Guthrie defaulted, as Miss Guthrie had to leave for Pittsburgh. Miss Wagner and Miss Guthrie won the first set at 6—4, and the second went to Mrs. Wood and Miss Handy at 6—0.

Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Miss Marion Fenno of Boston did not pair successfully. They dropped by the wayside in the semi-final round, when Mrs. Rawson Wood and Miss Handy defeated them 1—6, 6—4, 6—4. In the lower half of the draw Miss Wagner and Miss Guthrie came through to the final event by defeating Miss Edna Wilde and Mrs. Edward Raymond, 2—6, 6—2, 6—4.

Excellent tennis marked the play in the singles event, in which Miss Bjurstedt and Mrs. Edward Raymond came through to the final round. The Norwegian won her bracket by scoring a victory over Miss Margaret Taylor at 6—3, 6—3, and Mrs. Raymond advanced by defeating Miss Edith Handy 6—1, 6—2. This leaves Mrs. Raymond and Miss Bjurstedt to fight it out in the final round. It was Mrs. Raymond who forced the Norse girl to a hard three-set match in the women's metropolitan championship, and many spectators then believed that Mrs. Raymond would eventually bring the present national champion to grief.

The play of Mrs. Raymond yesterday justified the confidence in her ability. She was so steady that her play appeared almost mechanically perfect. At times she advanced to the net and scored her aces by kills, while again she played from the back court. In both positions she was effective. Although Miss Handy did not have the skill to make Mrs. Raymond extend her play to the limit, it detracted little from the impressiveness of Mrs. Raymond's work. The summary:

Miss Edith Handy and Mrs. Rawson Wood vs. Miss Marie Wagner and Miss Martha Guthrie.

DAVIS PLAYS KEEN TENNIS.

Beats Major on Sleepy Hollow Court—Mathey and Church Win.

Willis Davis, the sturdy Californian tennis player, who has been making a notable record in the invitation tournament of the Sleepy Hollow Country Club, advanced to the semi-final round of the singles event yesterday, when he defeated Cedric Major at 6—1, 6—4. Only one other tournament match was played, and in this the veteran doubles team of Dean Mathey and George M. Church defeated Cedric Major and Alrick H. Man, Jr., at 9—11, 6—1, 6—3. The victors will play Harold Throckmorton and Willis Davis in the final round today.

The doubles competition yesterday was a match which started late last Thursday and was postponed because of darkness. One set was completed the first day, and in this Major and Man gave the indication that a defeat was in store for Mathey and Church. To the surprise of those who waited, Man and Major won at 11—9. The degree of skill which carried them to victory then was somewhat lacking yesterday, and Mathey and Church were in fine fettle for the continuation.

Man and Major adopted the lobbing game, but it found little advantage. Mathey and Church, having lost a set, determined upon a cautious game, letting their opponents do the forcing and then tricking them into errors. This type of strategy gained the second set at 6—1. In the third set Major and Man made a determined effort to break through the defense of their opponents, and did so for a few minutes at the opening. They led at 2—1, but eventually it went to 3 all, and Mathey and Church, seeing their opponents weakening, gathered speed and ran out the set.

Davis found Major an easy mark in the second round of the singles. The Californian was steadier than in any of his previous matches and had Major on the defensive much of the time. The Pacific Coast star rushed the net at every opportunity and his placement shots worked as if they followed grooves.

R. Lindley Murray, who was victor in the first Sleepy Hollow tournament, will be the attraction today. Robert LeRoy and T. R. Pell have a first-round match to fight out, and Murray, who comes through the first round by default of Alfred S. Dabney, will play the winner. Should success attend his efforts he will play Throckmorton in the next round. The summary:

Sleepy Hollow Invitation Tournament, Singles.—Third Round—Willis Davis defeated Cedric Major, 6—1, 6—4.

Doubles.—Semi-final Round—Dean Mathey and George M. Church defeated Cedric Major and Olrick H. Man, Jr., 9—11, 6—1, 6—3.

C.C.N.Y. ROUTED ON COURTS

The tennis players of Dartmouth College defeated the C. C. N. Y. tennis team on the Marion Courts yesterday by the score of 3 to 0. The visitors took all the matches in straight sets. The work of Jones of the Dartmouth team was especially effective. He disposed of the first man of the C. C. N. Y. team in rather easy fashion by his strong overhead work at the net. In the doubles he was teamed with Captain Larmon, and although this combination had not been tried before, they soon broke through their opponents' game and won their match. The summary:

S. B. Jones, Dartmouth, defeated L. Joffee, C. C. N. Y., 6—2, 6—4; L. J. Larmon, Dartmouth, defeated M. Kursman, C. C. N. Y., 6—3, 6—2. S. B. Jones and L. J. Larmon, Dartmouth, defeated J. Drake and B. Jarmulosky, C. C. N. Y., 6—4, 6—1.

URGE STATE TO SUE PANAMA FAIR BOARD

Brooklyn Republicans Demand That Alleged Extravagant Expenditures Be Repaid.

ATTACK STATE CONTROLLER

Many Costly Pleasure Trips and Needless Outlays Pointed Out in Report.

Action by the Attorney General to recover money of the State "gotten illegally" in connection with the expenditure of $700,000 by the New York State Panama-Pacific Exposition Commission is asked by a committee of the Brooklyn Young Republican Club as a result of an investigation of the activities of the commission. According to the committee's report, which was made public yesterday, "the entire project was wasteful and extravagant" and was the result of a commission "having no particular qualifications for the work and representing nothing except practical politics."

The State building, according to the report, housed no exhibits, but was operated as a hotel for the Commissioners and their friends. Four automobiles, a $5,168 china and silver dining service, $5 breakfasts, and other such extravagances helped to use up the State's money. Travel fares to go not directly to the exposition but by way of the Grand Canyon and by way of the Panama Canal were supplied. Not only the Commissioners but their families and various State officials and employes who had no connection with the commission were beneficiaries of the appropriation.

"The responsibility for the improper expenditure," the report says, "is upon the commission primarily, and particularly upon its Chairman and Vice Chairman and upon the officials and others who participated in it. Responsibility was, and is, also upon the Controllers of the State, William Sohmer, Democrat, prior to Jan. 1, 1915, and Eugene M. Travis, Republican, after that time."

Norman E. Mack of Buffalo is the Chairman and John R. Yale of Putnam County is the Vice Chairman.

The report points out that Controller Travis, in the case of Charles B. Meyers, the architect, ruled that the bill was $1.50 too high, because Meyers went by way of the Grand Canyon instead of a more direct route. The committee asks why he did not find the same in other cases.

With regard to the New York State building the report has this to say:

"The commission erected at the exposition a New York State building and twelve exhibition booths. The Secretary of the commission states to us that the cost of structures was approximately $214,000 and the cost of exhibits about $200,000.

"The New York State building housed no exhibits, but seems to have been operated as a hotel for the particular entertainment of the commissioners and their invited guests. It consisted of a ballroom, dining room, and private dining room, with kitchen and appurtenances, on the first floor, and some twenty sleeping rooms with bath rooms upon the second floor, including a Governor's suite and a suite for the Chairman of the commission. There were thirteen sleeping rooms on the second and third floors. All the rooms were furnished in mahogany or Circassian walnut. A full set of dining china and silverware from Tiffany's for fifty-four persons, costing $5,168.25, was installed. Among other things were 54 goblets, 54 champagne glasses, 54 claret glasses, 54 sherry glasses, 54 liquor glasses, 54 cocktail glasses, 54 Apollinaris glasses, 54 highball glasses, 54 whisky glasses, and 54 sherbert glasses, costing in all $407.25.

"The payroll of the commission shows during most of the year 1915 the employment of four chauffeurs at $100 a month; a social secretary, Mrs. C. O. Alexander, at $166.66 a month, and a housekeeper and matron and four maids, the latter apparently for the care of the upstairs rooms. As contrasted with the State's expenditures, the exhibit of the City of New York, which was very creditable, cost about $95,000, and much of the exhibit is in such shape that it can be used again.

The report takes up in detail trips by various Commissioners. One trip on which all the members of the commission, the architect, several stenographers, and clerks went, cost $9,988, and stopped at Buffalo, St. Paul, Chicago, Portland, Oakland, Los Angeles, El Paso, and New Orleans.

Messrs. Murtaugh, Frawley, and Foley got a trip to Europe out of the State funds in June, 1914. The cost was $897 for Mr. Murtaugh, $992 for Mr. Frawley, and $866 for Mr. Foley.

Governor Whitman's trip in May on a special car cost $20,760.

"The Controller has stated to us he has more detailed information as to the items of this bill," the report says. "We have asked him in writing to file it in his office, but so far as we are informed he has not done so. Officials of the New York Central Railroad Company have stated to us that they have the details, but will not reveal them without the consent of Governor Whitman. We have written the Governor, asking such consent, but have received no word from him."

ALBANY, May 26.—Attorney General Woodbury said today that if the Young Republican Club of Brooklyn had demanded action concerning the money expended by the junket parties to the San Francisco Exposition it was the first he had heard of the demand. "If the matter comes into my office," he said, "I shall take it up and give it thorough consideration."

State Controller Eugene M. Travis, who also is concerned in the demand, left for Brooklyn or Saratoga this afternoon.

ASKS T. & P. RECEIVERSHIP.

Receiver Bush of Missouri Pacific Files Suit on Court Order.

It was announced at the New York office of B. F. Bush, receiver of the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain Railroads yesterday, that, acting under orders of United States Circuit Judge Hook, Mr. Bush had begun proceedings for the appointment of receivers for the Texas & Pacific. The suit was brought at Shreveport, La., in United States District Court and was of the same nature as the suit in Texas last year which was thrown out by the United States Supreme Court on the ground of lack of jurisdiction.

Mr. Bush said the application for a receiver in the present action would not be heard until October, as the court at Shreveport would adjourn today for the Summer.

McCARREN HEIRS GET $6,449.

Final accounting of the estate of Patrick H. McCarren, one-time Democratic boss of Brooklyn, who was reputed to be worth half a million dollars when he died, showed only $6,449.69 in the papers submitted to Surrogate Ketcham in Brooklyn yesterday by Samuel S. Whitehouse, executor of the will of the politician.

Under a will of Oct. 15, 1909, McCarren's house at 97 Berry Street was left to his cousin, Margaret McCloskey, and the remainder of the estate to his nieces, Anastasia and Frances McCarren. The accounting of the executor showed $156,145.57 in his hands a year ago. Most of this went to pay debts and claims against the estate.

Slain Innkeeper's Money Hidden.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 26.—The will of Gotthilf Guttenger, proprietor of the Lakeside Inn near White Plains, where he was murdered ten days ago, filed with Surrogate Sawyer at White Plains today, leaves all his property to his widow, Bertha. It has been impossible to find out how much property the innkeeper left, he hid considerable money in a secret compartment in the wall of the inn. It is known that he had about $5,000 in different banks.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was moderately active and early in the day showed some steadiness, especially for lard. Hogs were lower, however, and toward the close prices gave way under more aggressive selling, which was credited to packers, who are believed to be against the market. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 21,000; estimated for Saturday, 13,000; Kansas City received 6,000 and Omaha 7,400.

SUGAR.

The steadiness in raw sugar and the fact that operators and refiners have again entered the market caused a strong opening in futures this morning, and first prices showed advances of 7 to 22 points. The undertone was firm at 5⅜c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 6.39c for centrifugal and 5.62c for molasses.

COFFEE.

The coffee market showed weakness during the early operations, opening at a decline of 5@7 points under continued liquidation on the part of local and foreign longs. The close was steady at 1 point net advance to 1 point decline. Total sales for the day were 39,500 bags. The local spot market was inactive and unchanged, with Rio 7s quoted at 9⅝c. BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 10,105 packages. Considerable activity under the call on 'Change in the morning, where there were reported sales of 287 tubs creamery extras at 30¼c; 202 tubs, 93 score, at 30⅜c; 50 tubs, 94 score, at 30¾c; 50 tubs, 91 score, at 29¾c; 100 tubs, 93 score, seller June, at 30¼c. This stimulated a little freer buying and considerable stock passed out of first hands. Supplies were ample, however, and receivers met the trade promptly. Renovated, ladles, and packing stock favor the buyer. Creamery, extras, (92 score,) per lb, 30@30¼c; higher scoring, 30½@31¼c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 29@29¾c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 27½@28½c; thirds, 27c; creamery, unsalted, extras, 30½@31c; higher scoring, 31½@32c; firsts, 29@30c; seconds, 27½@28½c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 30c; good to prime, 28½@29½c; common to fair, 26@28c; renovated, extras, 29c; firsts, 28@28½c; lower grades, 26@27c; imitation creamery, firsts, 26½@27½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 26c; seconds, 25c; lower grades, 24@24½c; packing stock, current make, fine, 25c; No. 2, 24½c; lower grades, 23½@24c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 22,516 cases. Accumulation of average prime and ordinary qualities, which are pressing for sale at weak prices. Very fancy goods are often going into storage on shippers' account rather than force sales, and on a little of the current business in best qualities previous prices are fairly well sustained. It is difficult, however, to sell any important quantities of storage packings at top quotation, even in the finest marks. Dirties fairly steady. Checks easier. Nearby white eggs of average quality are dull and buyers at top quotation are extremely critical; only a small part of the supply is salable above 24@25c. Fresh gathered, extra fine, per dozen, 24½@25½c; storage packed, firsts or extra firsts, 23¼@24c; regular packed, extra firsts, 23@23½c; firsts, 22@23c; seconds, 21@21½c; thirds and poorer, 19½@20½c; dirties, No. 1, 20½@21c; No. 2 and poorer, 19@20c; checks, good to choice, dry, 19@19½c; undergrades, 17@18½c. State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 25½@26c; ordinary to good, 24@25c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 23½@25c. Western and Southern, gathered whites, 23½@24½c. State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery browns, 24½@25½c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 23@24c. Duck eggs, State and nearby, Indian Runner, 26@28c.

Sport Clothes Makers Suffer.

Probably the brunt of conditions in the garment trade is falling to the share of the sport clothes manufacturers. This should be their most active period, and the tie-up in the industry is bound to mean a loss of business and late deliveries. Preparations are being made, however, to rush production as soon as the labor trouble has been concluded. The out-of-town manufacturers are benefiting, of course, through the forced idleness in this market, and reports received from these outside centres are to the effect that a record business is being done.

A New Dress Coat.

One of the leading manufacturers of men's clothing is showing its latest style of dress suit. The coat is modeled along conservative lines. The pockets which were introduced some while back have been discarded. The one feature of the new design is an all-silk collar, where formerly the silk stopped short at the lapel. In connection with formal attire it may be said that the clothiers are expecting the demand for fancy vests to increase. Not only are the quieter colors such as gray and brown being used, but some of the vests shown lately are in dark reds and figured effects hitherto unseen in this line.

Dress Trade Helped.

The labor tie-up in the coat and suit trade is having a beneficial effect on the business being done by the dress manufacturers. Many late orders are understood to have been proffered to the garment manufacturers, who are in a position where they cannot touch them. Consequently some of this business is said to have slipped to the kindred line —that of dresses. The warmer weather is also having a stimulating effect on the demand for garments made of lighter materials. Among the cloths in favor at the present time voile seems to lead, with marquisette, sheer organdies, and linens in good demand.

Neckwear Is Doing Very Well.

An excellent business continues on women's neckwear, from all accounts, the demand embracing collar and cuff sets, both soft and laundered; ruches, cape effects, ruffs, large collars of all kinds, fichus, vestees, &c. Combinations are good also, such as a collar of one material and a jabot or some other accessory of another. Hand-pleated collars are favored, as are hemstitched and embroidered ones. Many of the larger pieces are trimmed with dainty laces or picot edgings. Organdies, crepes—Georgettes principally—nets, fine linens, piques, and bengalines are among the favored materials.

Are Skipping the Light Shades.

There is a tendency reported on the part of the consumer to neglect the real light shades that are offered in fancy footwear for women. It may be that the cool weather has had something to do with it, says a shoe authority, but it is noticeable that while all-white has sold well in both high and low shoes for some time, battleship gray or black came next in demand, instead of the lighter colors. Women's white canvas high shoes are now selling well, and men's white oxfords are doing better than usual for so early in the season. Salesmen out with Fall goods of the better kind for men have had no business on colored kid tops, although they are selling some gray buck tops on gun metal vamps and nut brown buck tops on mahogany vamps.

Are Lowering the Count.

Because of the high prices now being asked for gray goods it is said that several of the manufacturing trades are showing a desire to reduce still further the count of the cotton goods they use in their products. This is said to be particularly true of manufacturers of the cheaper grades of shirts and of women's underwear. In cases where cloths of a 64-60 or 64-65 construction were formerly used, 60-48s are now said to be getting the call, and to this fact is due much of the big business that is done on the last construction when the converters come in after grays. At the present time users of 60-48s have to pay more at 5 cents a yard for them in the gray state than they did last May for 64-60s, which then cost 3 15-16 cents.

Satins for Late Fall.

Orders that have been taken for Fall and other indications point to a large use of satins and satin-faced silks for the late season's street wear. By some merchants charmeuse is expected to show up well then. For street wear in the early Fall the big run of business is looked for on taffetas, failles, grosgrains, gros de Londres, and other "bouffant" silks, both plain and brocaded. For evening wear crepes Georgette and de chine, together with voiles, chiffons, and other filmy silks will be featured. Because of the larger place now being taken by printed silks of various kinds, an excellent outlook for a large business on them for next Spring is said to exist. From present indications that season will show a wide variety of printed patterns on white or light-tinted grounds, in order to conserve the supply of dyestuffs.

Weights Suitable for Spring.

In their purchases of woolens many of the clothiers have so arranged their selections of cloths that, regardless of whether the demand for Fall clothing comes up to expectations or not, the material bought will be available. Twelve ounce fabrics that are not used in Fall clothing will be made up into garments for next Spring. The manufacturer will use even smaller amounts of lining in these suits, so that they will be no heavier than usual. At a time when every item of cost has to be considered, the saving on linings is something to be reckoned with. One sample suit which will be duplicated next year was shown by a manufacturer's representative to have only the suggestion of a lining. A small strip was laid under the shoulders, and small tabs under the armholes to protect the material.

Which Is the Worse?

A question was brought up yesterday by a downtown dry goods man which, he said, concerned both the wholesale and retail trade. It was this: "Which is worse, overselling a customer or underselling one?" The happy medium was hard to find in salesmen, he said, either selling in a buyer's office or behind a retail counter. Either they do not try hard enough to sell goods, thereby losing trade that might have been had with a little harder pushing after it, or else they lay the selling talk on so thickly that they sell the buyer, or the customer, something that is not really needed or wanted. The result is that the wholesaler gets merchandise back for credit, with the expense and annoyance attending the procedure, while the retailer loses money on approval and C. O. D. deliveries of goods that are sent back to the store as soon as his customers have had time to make their final decisions without the arguments of the clerks to influence them.

Gray Goods Were Quiet.

Yesterday proved no exception to the rule of quietness in the local gray goods market, there being little to record in the way of business. Sales continued small, where they were made at all, and the yardage of staple cloths moved during the day was far from great. Prices continued firm at first hands, while second hands showed little disposition to trade at concessions. It is not thought that much will be done today, either, as some of the big men in the trade left their desks early yesterday afternoon, and will not be back until Wednesday. It is now assured that practically all of the leading commission houses, converters, and brokers will remain closed on Monday, so far as actual business is concerned. Closing printcloth prices were:

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Reappraisements Include One on the Value of Polo Ponies.

Differences of opinion between the Customs officials and importers of polo ponies led to a reappraisement yesterday before Judge Sullivan of the Board of General Appraisers. The animals were shipped to New York by Herbert Drage of London. Entered values for some of the ponies were accepted as correct by Appraiser Sague, the controversy as to market values narrowing down to three animals. The General Appraiser decided that the entered value of $200 for a chestnut mare marked with a white streak down the face was sufficient, and reversed the local authorities in putting a higher value on the pony. A bay mare and a bay gelding entered at $200 were held properly dutiable on the basis of $250 each.

Board 2 affirmed single General Appraisers in holding that higher values accrued on importations of silk yarn and thrown silk. The silk yarn came from the Societe Anonyme de Filiatures de Schappe, of Lyons, while the thrown silk importation was shipped here by F. Desgeorge & Co., also of Lyons. The Appraiser of the Port advanced the entered values, and these were in the main upheld by single General Appraisers. The board affirmed the prices returned by the reappraisement officials.

R. F. Downing & Co., R. F. Lang, and C. B. Richard & Co. were dissatisfied with the classification imposed by the Collector on strings for musical instruments composed wholly or in chief value of silk. This called for duty at 45 per cent. as "manufactures of silk." The contention was that the strings in question were properly dutiable at only 20 per cent. as "parts of musical instruments." Judge Howell found that the judicial authorities were on the side of the Government, and affirmed the assessment.

V. C. Squier, Detroit, proved his contention to the satisfaction of the board that catgut imported by him was unmanufactured and so free of duty. The examining officials at the Detroit Custom House returned the commodity as being in a manufactured state, and on this account the Collector levied 20 per cent. duty. The Collector was reversed and a reliquidation ordered.

Mills & Gibb controverted the Collector's return on madras muslin as "Jacquard figured upholstery goods, composed wholly or in chief value of cotton," the duty rate being 35 per cent. The firm claimed entry at 30 per cent. as cotton manufactures, or at the appropriate rate according to the average number of the yarn in cotton cloth. Judge Cooper decided that the claims were not applicable to the merchandise in controversy and overruled the protest.

Frederick H. Griffin, Boston, proved to the board that women's blouses which the Collector returned as embroidered, with a customs tax of 60 per cent., were not as a matter of fact ornamented in any manner. The Collector was reversed and entry given at 30 per cent. as cotton wearing apparel.

The board overruled a protest by E. S. Stone relating to the classification of candlesticks. They were returned for duty at 20 per cent. under the metal manufactures provision and claimed free of duty as "regalia." The importer was unable to prove that the sole use of the candlesticks was in processions. In order to come under the regalia provision the articles would have to be carried in the hand. This was not shown.

A TEST TOBACCO CASE.

Customs Appeals Court Decides a Long-Standing Dispute.

The United States Court of Customs Appeals, in passing adversely on claims of the St. Elmo Cigar Company of Los Angeles, has avoided an expression of opinion on the interpretation to be given that part of the leaf tobacco paragraph of the present tariff law relating to the size of wrappers to be used in making cigars. This omission leaves the construction of the law's provision to future litigation.

The difference between the Government and the St. Elmo firm had its start when the customs authorities at Los Angeles took duty at the rate of $1.85 per pound on many importations as tobacco, on the ground that more than 15 per cent. of wrapper tobacco was mixed with filler tobacco in the consignments. The cigar concern appealed to the Board of General Appraisers, claiming that the importations contained less than 15 per cent. of wrappers, and that the proper duty rate accordingly should have been but 35 cents a pound.

In addition to that claim counsel for the importing company alleged that the change made in the wording of the tobacco paragraph at the last revision was material, since the question of the proper size of leaf tobacco to be used in making cigars was involved. The Tariff acts of 1897 and 1909 made no reference to the "size" of leaves, whereas in the present law it is provided that "the term wrapper tobacco means that quality of leaf tobacco which has the required color, texture, and burn, and is of sufficient size for cigar wrappers." The St. Elmo lawyers argued that the leaves in most of the bales were not large enough for cigar wrappers, and asserted that the lower rate accruing on filler tobacco should govern.

The board found against both contentions, it being held that the classifications at the higher rate returned by Collector Elliott were correct, while it was decided that the leaves were of sufficient size to wrap cigars of normal proportions.

Judge De Vries, in his decision written for the Customs Court, said it was not necessary on the record presented in the St. Elmo case to pass upon the question of size. In affirming the board the court said:

"The record is voluminous and there is sharp conflict between the testimony upon the part of the importer and the Government as to every material issue. The burden of proof was upon the importers to establish by a convincing preponderance of the evidence, whatever their legal theory, all the material allegations of their protest; but, upon every such material issue they were met by conflicting and contradictory evidence in behalf of the Government. Upon this evidence the board found against the importer. Decision affirmed."

The action of the court makes it practically certain that the St. Elmo Cigar Company will not recover several thousands of dollars, representing duties claimed by the firm to have been illegally exacted by the Government. The St. Elmo suit had the effect of bringing about stricter inspections of tobacco importations all along the Pacific Coast, it being asserted in Government quarters that the Treasury Department had lost large sums through lax examinations covering a long period of years.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

There was a sharp contraction in the volume of security dealings yesterday, and unless there are some unlooked-for news developments over Sunday it looks very much as though trading would be reduced to a minimum for the next two sessions which precede the holiday. A great many brokers were arranging their affairs yesterday to allow them to be away until Wednesday, and the absence of any news of the kind which Wall Street considers significant gave little color to transactions on the Stock Exchange.

The news which came over the wires shortly before the close of the previous session, on Thursday afternoon, to the effect that the British Treasury Department was preparing to levy a supertax of two shillings to the pound on all incomes derived from British holdings of foreign securities had much less influence on prices than might have been expected. For months the bugbear of traders has been the weight of foreign liquidation hanging over this market, particularly over the rails, and the announced intention of Chancellor McKenna to force out a new lot of American securities through the penalty tax had at first a depressing influence. Yesterday traders were inclined to look at the new move from a different angle. They concluded that if it had become necessary to adopt strenuous measures to keep up the supply of foreign securities used to stabilize exchange rates it was a fair conclusion that the European liquidation is on the wane.

No one knows how much of Europe's enormous accumulation of American stocks and bonds has now been sold back to investors in this country, but the belief is held by leading bankers that the amount is even larger than might be supposed from the partially complete figures collected some months ago from corporation records. The Allies have spent vast sums in the United States for the prosecution of the war, and they have borrowed but a small part of this, the remainder having been supplied almost entirely by the proceeds of security sales. In view of what has been done in this way in the past, it is not likely that the market will experience any serious difficulty in absorbing the new collections of stocks and bonds which will result from the new tax measures.

The inflation which has taken place in the automobile issues continues, but perhaps no more rapidly than the inflation in the business on which the securities are based. The public has evidently come to the conclusion that such a tangible evidence of prosperity as is being supplied by the increased sale of cars is not to be denied. There were reports yesterday of three more mergers in this field, one of them to embrace the manufacturers of three leading makes of automobiles and the other two of accessory companies. Willys Overland was helped by rumors of a new combination to a new high price at 276⅞. With a net gain for the day of 5⅛ points this issue stood out above the other industrials, which for the most part showed only fractional changes for the day. The movement in Reading appears to have flattened out, although the issue was fairly active in a narrow price range yesterday.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Reading led as to volume in the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. For a time it displayed exceptional firmness, but reacted sharply late in the day. So far as the general list was concerned, it gradualy drifted into a waiting attitude. Prices were moderately reactionary, but the undertone appeared to be fairly good, and there was no decided pressure to sell.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Over to Wednesday.

Considerable of the big business in Wall Street has been postponed until the day after Memorial Day. Until then there will be no further conference on International Mercantile Marine reorganization, which is the most important matter vexing important bankers at the moment. The various committees, which have been long endeavoring to set the Rock Island on its feet and which yesterday reported progress "hardly worth speaking about" will also have four days' relief from their trials. The banks will be open today and Monday, as will all the exchanges, but many of the bosses will not be seen at their offices. It is probable, however, that speculators with open accounts will be on the alert, or, at least, will not be caught in as vulnerable a position as on the Saturday following the Good Friday holiday when a bear raid in the absence of hundreds of speculators uncovered a multitude of stop-loss orders and produced some of the most grievous losses of the year.

Cable Exchanges in Marine.

By the time bankers influential in Mercantile Marine reorganization get together again, H. A. Sanderson, President of the company, will have returned from that New York trip which upset preconceived plans of reorganization and produced friction which has not yet been entirely allayed. Mr. Sanderson's presence in London, however, is not essential to the completion of the reorganization plan, for from the time the wishes of the British Government were imparted by him there has been a brisk and occasionally an animated interchange of cable communications between the American and British parties in interest. The understanding, after yesterday's informal talks, was that the New York agents of the British Government were empowered to go ahead with the plan, though with the understanding that the British Government still reserved the right to censor whatever plan is decided upon. It also became known that a great deal of progress had been made in the week's conferences, the British giving way on some points and the Americans on others, and that prospects for an agreement were much brighter than at the beginning of the week.

Sale of Marine's Ships.

The trend of Mercantile Marine shares was slightly reactionary. The preferred closed a point below the high price of the day. Speculators had only the customary vaporings to guide them until just before the close when the news came out of the sale of two large ships to the Japanese. It was announced that the ships were sold at a profit of 100 per cent., and superficial commentators at once proclaimed the transaction beneficial to the company. But those with some knowledge of the company's affairs appreciated that the company, in losing the earning power of these ships, loses an earning power that is not subject to the heavy income and war taxes of the British Government. It was recalled that immediately after the sinking of the Cymric the loss was thoughtlessly hailed as a bull argument because the ship carried insurance in an amount double its book value.

Weakness in the Rails.

The standard railroad shares lost ground again. Bullish interest in them seemed to have been chilled by the efforts of the British Government to bring to its mobilization plan American securities that are still withheld from the Government. The impression seemed to prevail that American stocks in larger number than in recent weeks were thus to be forced on the New York market. Yet it is good banking opinion that further foreign offerings of securities need not be expected in the stock so much as in the bond department. That is the opinion held also in many of the bond houses, but the bond market held up yesterday, absorption by institutions continuing and the private investment demand remaining good, and since the bonds held in England are mostly of high class bond dealers rather welcome a chance to sell them.

Better Terms for Railroads.

Some of the 4½ per cent. first mortgage bonds of the New York Connecting Railroad Company, which were sold in previous years, went at 93. Yesterday's offering of $8,000,000 by J. P. Morgan & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. was made at 98½. The difference of 5½ points illustrates the advantage to the railroads from sales of high-class securities in a period of easy money and returning confidence in the ability of the railroad companies to make both ends meet.

March on the Railroads.

Some of the older railroad men who made up their minds in 1908 that times would never be good again are rubbing their eyes as they look over current earnings statements. The Bureau of Railway Economics, whose unpleasant duty it has been for the most part to show how much better earnings used to be than they are now, is reporting results that ought to be highly gratifying to stockholders. The net operating revenues of all the carriers of the United States increased $118 a mile in March, a gain of 48.4 per cent. as compared with March, 1915. Or, if a comparison be made between March of this year and the average March of the preceding five years, an improvement of 45.5 per cent. is shown. The total operating revenues increased $57,720,000, while operating expenses went up $29,055,000. Aggregate net earnings available for rentals, interest on bonds, appropriations for improvements, and dividends were $83,101,000. For the nine months of the fiscal year ending with March net operating revenue a mile of line increased 37 per cent.

Benefiting the Curb.

Curb firms are not worrying about the strict supervision by the Stock Exchange over the advertising of its members. On the contrary, it is said on the Curb that the business there has been aided substantially of late by the censorship exercised further up Broad Street. The outside houses may call attention to their wares as they see fit, always abiding by the law and the ethics of the newspapers in regard to advertisements. Their circulars, too, do not have to please a scrutinizing eye before the public gets to see them. Business on the open-air market was not bad before the Stock Exchange tightened the application of its rules, and, brokers assert, it has improved since.

CURB BOARD DEFERS PLAN TO REORGANIZE

Announcement Made After 51 Exchange Houses Protest Against Proposed Changes.

FAVORABLE VOTE IGNORED

Chairman McCormick Issues Circular to the Association Members Explaining Situation.

Although a large majority of the Curb Association's members voted in favor of the plan proposed for reorganizing the market, the Board of Representatives decided yesterday not to declare the plan operative. This decision was caused chiefly by the organized opposition made by fifty-one Stock Exchange houses, who signed a circular sent to members of the Curb organization in the morning, requesting that the plan not be put in force. The problem will now be taken up afresh, according to a statement by E. R. McCormick, Chairman of the Curb, and the co-operation of Stock Exchange firms will be sought. The statement said:

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE NEW YORK CURB MARKET ASSOCIATION: Gentlemen—The open vote on the reorganization of the New York Curb Market Association showed on Friday at 5 P. M., the following result: 216 for, 20 against, with one blank ballot and 96 not voting.

In view of this unsatisfactory vote, the signed opposition on the part of 51 New York Stock Exchange firms, and other misunderstandings, although a majority of the members of your association have voted in the affirmative, your board deems it unwise to declare the plan operative.

Your Special Committee on reorganization was appointed by your board to draw up a plan of reorganization which would eliminate certain fundamental ills that cannot be stopped in a free for all market; to accomplish this so that the best interests of our members and all concerned would be conserved, to the end that the second largest security market in the United States be placed on a more stable basis.

Your board have adopted the recommendation of the Special Committee submitted on May 23, that the vote on reorganization shall be extended. Before any plan is declared operative there will be an opportunity given to members of the association to change their ballots already cast. Your committee is taking steps to confer with a committee representing the opposition.

In view of the importance of the whole matter we urge that any of our members or others interested should express in detail their objections, suggestions or other recommendations. Your Special Committee will be ready to confer with any individual or body at any time.

E. R. McCORMICK, Chairman.

The movement by Stock Exchange firms against the formation of a new Curb under a roof, with a ticker service and limited membership, crystalized talk heard in commission houses for the last week. It appears that a number of prominent members of the big board became convinced that, if the plan were put through under the form contemplated, there would be a brand new market with some sort of a Curb doing business as before. Furthermore, it was believed that the new organization would be held in public opinion as a protege of the Stock Exchange and that the older organization would be thought responsible for business methods on the new exchange.

In Stock Exchange quarters, and also on the Curb, there was criticism of the fact that opposition to the plan had not appeared long ago. The opinion generally held in the Street was that many votes in favor of the reorganization had been influenced by the belief that Stock Exchange houses were taking an active part in the work.

Mr. McCormick said, after the meeting of the Board of Representatives, that he was confident the problem would be worked out in a way satisfactory to all parties. Certain amendments to the original plan are being formulated in a fashion to meet some of the objections, it is stated, and he expressed himself as confident that the Curb would be reorganized along the main lines of the plan proposed on May 18.

The committee of Stock Exchange members selected to confer with the Curb men is headed by Stanley M. McGraw of McGraw, Blagden & Draper. The two committees will begin today to find a way around the difficulties so far uncovered.

TO ACT AS GERMAN AGENTS.

Chandler & Co. Offer $10,000,000 Treasury Notes Here.

Chandler & Co., Inc., confirmed yesterday the report that they are acting for the German Government in arranging for some new commercial credits. The bankers are offering German Treasury notes up to $10,000,000, to run until April 1, 1917. The notes are placed, according to the actual requirements, with banking institutions in the East and Middle West, but there will be no public offering. They bear interest at 6 per cent., and yield approximately 6.20 per cent. They are payable at the Central Trust Company in American funds.

It was said yesterday that the money derived from the sale will be used in paying for goods purchased for the account of the German Government, but which will be held in this country until after the war.

CANADIAN CAR'S YEAR.

Net Earnings $321,839, but Fixed Charges Cause $558,471 Deficit.

The Canadian Car & Foundry Company, which has figured largely in discussions of big war order contracts placed on this side of the Atlantic, reports for the year ended Sept. 30, 1915, net earnings of $321,839, but after making provision for depreciation and renewals, as well as interest on outstanding bonds, the company closed the year with a net deficit of $558,471. The report explains that the profit from the munition business will show in later months. It says:

"The depression in general commercial business continued throughout the fiscal year. Business from Canadian Railways for equipment and supplies during the war period has been negligible, in consequence, largely, of the high cost of labor and materials caused by the demand for war munitions; and, although some foreign equipment orders have been obtained, they have not been sufficient to keep the plants of the company fully occupied.

"The Canadian Car & Foundry Company has participated substantially in munition orders placed in Canada. The earnings from this source, however, only affected the profit and loss account during the last month or two of the fiscal year. These orders should be the chief factor in our operations during the fiscal year of 1916."

After explaining the difficulties that the company met in financing its order for 5,000,000 shells for Russia, a large part of which was sub-let, the report states:

"There were various reasons for our need of large working capital. We believed that prices of the metals used in making shells would advance rapidly in price. We, therefore, at the outset contracted for many millions of dollars worth of raw material and component parts of shells. This was good wisdom, as now raw material is being purchased at an advance of 50 to 300 per cent. over the price we paid. Other financial necessities were caused by having to employ many other manufacturers to fill sub-contracts. These numbered about one hundred, and to most of these advances had to be made, not only for purchase materials, but in many cases to enable these manufacturers to erect buildings and to purchase and install the necessary machinery. Owing to inexperience their deliveries and output were very inaccurate and disappointing."

EXCHANGES STILL RISING.

Dollar Up to 3.38 and the Pound at 16.10 on Scandinavian Bourses.

STOCKHOLM, May 26.—The American dollar and the English pound continue to soar on Scandinavian Bourses. The dollar was quoted today at 3.38 and the pound at 16.10, against 3.27 for the dollar and 15.35 for the pound a fortnight ago.

All foreign exchange, including the franc and the ruble, is climbing to higher levels. The rise of the German mark began later and is somewhat slower than the others.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

Commenting on the condition of trade and the business of the banks, Dun's Review says:

Continuing remarkably prosperous, business has gained in wholesome characteristics through the recent cessation of price advances in certain commodities. Sustainment of consumptive demands in unprecedented volume with costs rising rapidly has been an economic phenomenon for months past, but that ultimately a point would be reached at which buying would slacken was obvious. Evidences of abatement are by no means general and nothing indicates diminished purchasing power, yet in branches where forward requirements are already largely provided for some hesitation, with shrinkage in new orders, is natural.

The remarkable activity in general business that prevails in every part of the country continues to be indicated by heavy payments through the banks, as reflected in Clearing House exchanges, the total of which this week at the principal cities in the United States amounts to $4,170,028,168, an increase of 57.5 per cent. as compared with the $2,647,429,545 of the same week last year and of 64.5 per cent. as contrasted with the $2,535,210,904 reported for the corresponding week in 1914.

Bradstreet's says:

While the country's industries continue to operate at high speed, there are numerous evidences of a reaction toward conservatism in buying, the trend thus displayed suggesting that, for the time being at least, new business has undergone a slight paring down, and that buying power has been temporarily satiated or repressed in order to permit of a breathing spell. Over all, however, is the fact that business, industrial and commercial, has been such as to fill order books to a point where a lifting of the strain is welcome.

S. H. Kress & Co. to Sell Out.

Plans have been perfected for the organization of a new company to take over the business of S. H. Kress & Co. of New York, operators of a chain of five, ten, and twenty-five-cent stores. Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co., Goldman, Sachs & Co. and Lehman Brothers have acquired an interest in the securities of the new company.

COTTON STEADIES ON GERMAN RUMOR

Market Fluctuates Until It Is Heard That Teutons Are Buying Our Products.

PEACE REPORTS A FACTOR

The cotton market yesterday could not make up its mind in which direction it wished to move. There were times when it was strong and times when it was weak, and the net fluctuation put it back to about the same level at which it closed the previous day. The undertone was fairly steady during the entire trading and there was little short selling. July was relatively weaker than the more distant months and during the large part of the trading was 10 points under October, whereas a few days ago it commanded a premium of 2 to 3 points over the more distant months.

The change in differences between the near deliveries and the new crop contracts is largely due to a realization of the fact that the local market had been following the Liverpool prices a bit too closely. There is no scarcity of cotton in America, but the fact that the Liverpool stock is small and is mostly in the hands of Lancashire spinners naturally has made the near positions strong in the English market and this has been reflected in the local market to a certain extent.

There was little real news yesterday that had any bearing upon the value of cotton, but there is a certain speculative element that seems determined to operate upon all rumors of peace in Europe, no matter how indefinite or vague they happen to be. During the early trading there was selling that undoubtedly came from the South and was the result of good weather in the cotton belt. Later in the day the bulls were elated by a report that Germany was floating bonds in this country for the purpose of buying American products to be held until the end of the war. The cotton bulls said that this meant cotton and the result was a rally and a firm market during a large period of the trading.

The advance that was forced was largely due to the buying by professional operators and covering before the close brought about a decline of about 10 points from the high of the day. Spots were unchanged at 12.90c for middling. Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged, New Orleans six points decline. The local market for spot cotton was quiet and unchanged. Middling 12.90c. Futures closed steady.

PROPOSALS.

SEALED PROPOSALS.—Indorsed "Proposals for chief operator's quarters" will be received at the Bureau of Yards and Docks, Navy Department, Washington, D. C., until 11 o'clock A. M., June 17, 1916, and then and there publicly opened, for one wood frame quarters for chief operator at the Naval Radio Station, Fire Island, N. Y. Plans and specifications can be obtained on application to the [illegible] H. R. HARRIS, Chief of Bureau, May 22, 1916.

DRY GOODS SALES STRONG.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 26.—Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

Current wholesale shipments of dry goods have been in larger volume than for the corresponding period of 1915. Road sales for immediate delivery show a handsome increase over the same week a year ago. For Fall delivery they continue strong, running about the same as the corresponding period last Spring.

Customers have been in the market in much larger numbers than during the same week last year. Collections are normal.

American Securities Reactionary with Wall Street.

LONDON, May 26.—The stock market developed a quieter tone today, and the recent buoyancy was less apparent. Prices were somewhat irregular. The war loan, consols, and other British issues lost a fraction from lack of support, but Argentine rails and the French loan were strong, and shipping shares active under the lead of Cunards.

American securities were reactionary with Wall Street, but the closing was steady. Canadian Pacific was firm on traffic reports, and City Service rose 19 points to 285.

OUR EXTENSIVE RAILROADS.

Measure Almost One-third More Miles Than Total of Europe.

CHICAGO, May 26.—United States railroads measure almost one-third more miles than the total for Europe, but cost almost 40 per cent. less in capital, according to the annual compilation made public today by the Bureau of Railway News and Statistics here. The comparison is made with figures showing what are described as the latest official returns on foreign railroads.

	Europe.	United States.
Miles of line	198,554	244,255
Capital cost	$25,059,644,889	$15,917,192,925

The comparison is the more significant, the bureau says, in view of the fact that wages in the United States are practically double the European standard, and rates for money are one-fourth higher.

German Bank Statement.

BERLIN, May 26, (via Sayville.)—The weekly statement of the Imperial Bank of Germany shows the following changes, according to the Overseas News Agency:

Gold reserve, 2,463,000,000 marks, increased 300,000 marks; commercial paper and Treasury bills, 5,206,000,000 marks, increased 219,000,000 marks; circulation and banking notes, 6,443,000,000 marks, decreased 92,000,000 marks; private deposits, 1,775,000,000 marks, increased 264,000,000 marks.

Gold reserve covering circulation and banking notes increased to 38.2 per cent., from 37.7 per cent.

Payments in cash for the fourth war loan reached 9,113,000,000 marks, or 84.6 per cent. of the total subscription, while money borrowed by loan banks decreased 15,000,000 marks, to 303,000,000 marks. Total borrowed by loan banks on collateral for all war loans decreased 176,000,000 marks, to 1,716,000,000 marks.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Private Dwelling Deal on East Side Involves $250,000—Three High-Class Residences Disposed Of to Investors—Bronx Block Sold to Builder for Improvement with Apartments.

Private dwelling property on the upper east side was the feature of yesterday's realty market, when three high-class dwellings in the Lenox Hill section were disposed of to investors, and a plot for a new $100,000 residence was purchased by a prominent New Yorker, whose name was not disclosed.

The latter deal involved 15 East Sixty-fourth Street and the easterly 11 feet of 18 East Sixty-fourth Street, forming a plot 31 by 100, which was sold by Mrs. Ernesto G. Fabbri to a client of Pease & Elliman.

This parcel is the balance of the property which Mrs. Fabbri purchased from Charles Steele. It was held at $150,000 and brought close to that figure.

The westerly 29 feet of the plot originally purchased by Mrs. Fabbri Pease & Elliman sold in 1912 to Orme Wilson, Jr., on which he erected the dwelling he now occupies.

Plans for the dwelling to be erected on the site disposed of yesterday are being prepared by John G. Greenleaf. It will cover the entire plot and involve an expenditure of over $250,000, including the cost of the property.

Three High-Class Dwellings Sold.

Important among the private dwelling deals was the sale by John N. Stearns of 607 Park Avenue, a five-story American basement house, to a client of William B. May & Co. for occupancy.

The property has a frontage of 100.5 on the avenue by 20 on the street, and is opposite the former John Sherman Hoyt residence on the northeast corner, purchased last week by Gifford A. Cochran. Adjoining the Stearns house, on the northeast corner of Sixty-fourth Street, is the former Miller residence, recently purchased for occupancy by Dr. James Bishop.

Three blocks north, at 723 Park Avenue, the four-story residence on a plot 20 by 82 was sold by the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company for Emily N. Vanderpoel to Gerrish H. Milliken. The buyer owns the adjoining similar residence on the northeast corner of Seventieth Street. The property is opposite the Presbyterian Hospital.

William B. May & Co. also sold for L. M. Josephthal the modern five-story American basement private residence, 26 East Seventy-third Street, between Fifth and Madison Avenues.

This block has been extensively improved of late years and contains many modern houses, the most pretentious of which is the Pulitzer mansion on the north side opposite the property just sold and which is now occupied by the widow of the late publisher.

Deal Reported Pending for St. Bartholomew's Church Property.

Negotiations are reported pending for the sale of the St. Bartholomew's Church property at the southwest corner of Madison Avenue and Forty-fourth Street.

The property has been on the market ever since the church acquired the old Schaeffer brewery block on Park Avenue between Fiftieth and Fifty-first Streets. One million five hundred thousand dollars is said to have been the asking price for the Madison Avenue plot, which has a frontage of 100.5 feet on the avenue and 145 front on Forty-fourth Street.

Investors Buy the Rockville.

The Rockville, a six-story apartment house on the northwest corner of Audubon Avenue and 177th Street, has been sold by Frederick Brown, operator to the Sivad Holding Company, controlled by Frankel Brothers. The structure, which has been held at $200,000, occupies a plot fronting 107.11 feet on the avenue and 100 feet on the street.

Builder Buys Washington Heights Block Front.

The Henry Morgenthau Company has sold to David Zipkin as a site for five-story apartment houses the block front on the south side of 181st Street from Northern to Haven Avenue.

The block comprises about eleven lots and fronts 214 feet on 181st Street, 153 feet on Northern Avenue, 122 feet on Haven Avenue, and 239 feet on its southerly line. M. I. Strunsky & Co. and Bernard London negotiated the sale. Ground will be broken at once for the new structures.

Private Dwelling Sales.

Slawson & Hobbs sold for Anna Fallon 533 West 187th Street, a three-story private dwelling, on a lot 19 by 55 by 100. The buyer is an investor.

Shaw & Co. have sold for the Montrose Realty Company 121 West 131st Street, a three-story and basement private dwelling, on a lot 18 by 55 by 100, to L. Hurd Sanford.

E. M. Sekunna has purchased for occupancy from the estate of Theodore R. Shear 364 West 120th Street, a three-story and basement dwelling, on a lot 17 by 100.11. Joseph P. Day was the broker in the transaction.

Forest Hills Gardens

"A Forward Movement in Suburban Development"

A Forward Movement implies ample capital to carry out the original plan without regard to the fluctuations of the Real Estate Market.

In the Gardens there has been no abatement in the handsome and substantial character of the buildings or in the slightest architectural or landscape detail. The underground and street improvements are practically all completed, and the property as a whole has not suffered from lack of funds.

A development to be a success must have a definite and predetermined plan, the possibility of satisfactorily completing such a plan depends largely upon the financial resources of the Company.

The Gardens is not the usual ephemeral suburban development. It represents a large investment, and the purchaser gets the benefit of this investment because the intrinsic value is there and not merely on paper.

A forward movement in suburban development means ample capital and honorable business methods to protect the investor.

HOUSES For Sale, $9,800 to $22,000.	TALK NO. 8. In a series of talks appearing in this paper, the company will set forth its aims and accomplishments in the development of Forest Hills Gardens. For a complete set address the Company.	PLOTS For Sale, $3,000 Up.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The Western disturbance of the last several days is now central over eastern Wisconsin, with diminishing intensity. Pressure has fallen considerably to the northwestward and there is a well-defined disturbance over western Manitoba. Local rains continued over the Northwest and extended in the form of thundershowers into the upper Mississippi Valley and upper lake region, but elsewhere over the country the weather was generally fair.

There has been a further rise in temperature in the East and South, and temperatures are now much above the seasonal average over these sections, and also in the Ohio Valley and the southern upper lake region.

Between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains it is cooler, and in the Far West warmer, but with temperatures still considerably below the seasonal average.

There will be showers and thunderstorms Saturday in the greater portion of the lake region, followed by generally fair weather Sunday, while in the Atlantic and East Gulf States, the Ohio Valley, and Tennessee, the weather will be generally fair Saturday and Sunday.

Temperatures will not change decidedly.

Winds for Saturday and Sunday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate, mostly north; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate, variable; South Atlantic Coast, moderate south and southwest, except east off the Florida coast.

HOLD TWO YOUTHS FOR MORGAN THEFT

ALL THE MONEY TRACED

George S. Dougherty drove his automobile up to Police Headquarters at 2 o'clock this morning and assisted to alight from it William A. McManus and William Joseph Bain, Wall Street office boys, the former an employe of the house of J. P. Morgan & Co. Shortly before 11 o'clock yesterday morning young McManus had walked out of the Morgan offices with his pockets bulging with $10,515.32, the payroll of the export department, which had been intrusted to him by the cashier to carry to the top floor of the banking house.

Most of the missing wealth was carried into Police Headquarters this morning by Dougherty and two operatives from his private detective agency, E. M. Fitzgerald and Benjamin Fay. It was in three dress suit cases and totaled $9,655.60. Nearly $900 was missing, but the detectives said the boys had not squandered this. Instead each of them, as well as a third boy whose name the police know but would not disclose, is said to have sent to his mother about $300, spending only enough to pay their railroad fares to Philadelphia, hire a room in a hotel, pay for their meals and buy three suits of clothing.

The youngsters were captured because other employes in the Morgan firm recalled that young McManus had sought information about reaching Philadelphia. Accordingly, when the absence of the boys and the money was discovered Fitzgerald and Fay, who are regularly assigned to the Morgan firm, started for Philadelphia at once.

They went to various hotels and in the Keystone Hotel in West Philadelphia found the name "Richard Hamilton" on the register in a handwriting which they were satisfied was that of McManus. They explained their mission to the proprietor and were admitted to the room taken by the boys. They were not there but the detectives found the suitcases containing the money. The three boys had divided it equally among them.

Fay and Fitzgerald waited, and presently the boys, led by McManus, entered. At sight of the detectives, whom they knew, McManus and Bain jumped out of a window in the room, landing unhurt on the pavement a story below. Fay and Fitzgerald dragged the other youth downstairs and left him in charge of the proprietor, and hustled after the fugitives, whom they overtook, only to find on their return to the hotel that the third boy had escaped from the proprietor and disappeared.

According to the detectives, McManus and Bain admitted the whole affair, saying they had intended to go first to Delaware Water Gap and then depart for the West, where they had planned to become cowboys. Each had sent money home, so that his parents might not feel his absence financially. Once determined on, the actual theft of the money had been easy.

For some time McManus had been trusted to carry the pay envelopes from the cashier's department on the first floor to the top floor of the banking building at 23 Wall Street, where he distributed them to the employes. At 10:30 o'clock yesterday, before the usual time for paying, McManus went to Cashier Stanley Knowles and asked if the money was ready for "upstairs." The cashier said he was too busy to attend to the payroll just then, but that the envelopes were ready. McManus said he would put the money in the envelopes.

The pile of cash was handed to McManus. There were three $100 bills, 107 $50, 127 $20, sixty-one $10, thirty-six $5, ten $2, and ten $1 notes, besides a few dollars in silver. The boy carried the money and envelopes to a desk and was last seen counting the money apparently. He was not missed until some one on the upper floor telephoned to the cashier three hours later, saying: "What's the matter with the financial ghost today?"

McManus had been with the banking house two years. The firm knew the boy's habits had been good. It was said that because of the unusual temptation presented in permitting him to handle so much money without supervision, the firm had decided not to prosecute him, providing the larger part of the money was recovered. McManus had no difficulty in getting the 350 and more bills into his pockets, but they probably bulged.

McManus is only 16 years old and lives with his parents at 1,676 Nostrand Avenue, Brooklyn. Bain is a year older and lives, also with his parents at 512 West Thirteenth Street. McManus said he met Bain outside the Morgan office yesterday and invited him to make the trip, according to the police. Where the third, and now missing boy, was picked up, the police would not say.

COLLISION KILLS LAWYER.

Thanford Woodhull Dies After Bicycle Hits Auto.

Thanford Woodhull, 68 years old, a lawyer and author of legal works, died in the Brooklyn Hospital last night as the result of injuries received when his bicycle collided with an automobile at Flatbush Avenue and Hanson Place. While following an auto truck of the Union Transfer and Storage Company along Flatbush Avenue, Woodhull, to avoid a traffic post, had to swing his bicycle to one side. In doing so he crashed into the rear wheel of the truck and tumbled from his seat.

He broke both hips in his fall and died several hours later in the hospital. His home was given as 124 Berkeley Place, Brooklyn, but no one at that address last night seemed to know him. He had an office at 4 Court Square, where he practiced law.

Mr. Woodhull was an author of several legal pamphlets. Born in Nyack, N. Y., he was educated in the public schools and graduated from Columbia in 1869. Two years later he was admitted to the bar. According to the police he was married.

The driver of the truck, John Landgraf of 109 East Eighty-ninth Street, Manhattan, was not arrested, an investigation having proven to the police that he was blameless.

DR. JAMES FEENY STRICKEN.

Dr. James Feeny, 74 years old, onetime Commissioner of Charities for Richmond, Vice President of the Richmond Fire Insurance Company and brother of the late Dr. John L. Feeny, is in the S. R. Smith Infirmary in a serious condition. He had suffered from kidney trouble, and on Thursday met with a mishap in New York, which caused his trouble to become suddenly acute. He is now in a state of coma from which it has not been possible to revive him.

Dr. Feeny was standing in Broadway at Ninth Street waiting for a car when an automobile backed into him and knocked him down. He was helped aboard a car and went on to a meeting of the Richmond Insurance Company directors. In the evening he became dazed and Dr. Henry T. Goodwin sent him to the hospital.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD

has written an inspiring answer to the question often asked, "Has England done all she could?" in her new book:

ENGLAND'S EFFORT

LETTERS TO AN AMERICAN FRIEND

It is impossible to conceive a more graphic picture than that which Mrs. Ward has given us, of the intense activity of the English people at home in their part of the war:—The vast munitions and equipment industries into which women are pouring by tens of thousands to take the place of men; the men working literally "till they drop"; the transformed England that has come with a realization of her needs.

THE HON. JOSEPH H. CHOATE

In his Preface to the book says:

"All America is vastly indebted to Mrs. Ward for her triumphant success in proving that England has done her best and for making this great story so clear."

The First Seven Divisions

By CAPTAIN ERNEST HAMILTON.

No writer of military history has ever had to describe a more wonderful performance than the retreat of Sir John French's troops from Mons. In twelve days they covered a distance of one hundred and forty miles as the crow flies, and of considerably more as troops march—not to mention the counter-marching. They were overpoweringly out-numbered and out-gunned. But they turned again and again to attack their pursuers, and they kept their line unbroken till the time came for the magnificent rally on the Marne. Of those splendid troops nothing remains as an organization, but the memory of their deeds will never die.
